OAKLAND FIRE COMPANY INCREASES IN EFFICIENCY

Amount of Loss by Fire Reduced, New Truck Purchaed, Organization Strengthened

A reduction in the amount of loss sustained in Oakland by fire, the purchase of a $12,500 fire-fighting apparatus with 1250 feet of big hose and 500 feet of small, a more business-like organization, and wholehearted support from the citizens of the town, has been achieved by the Oakland Volunteer Fire department during the past year just closed, a survey of The Republican files shows.

Only one fire resulted in any serious damage to property, the Maryland theatre fire, which was promptly subdued by the local company after the alarm had been turned in. Two fires were extinguished with slight damage, which had they been given fifteen minutes start, would have probably consumed an entire block.

Along with the volunteer organization thls past year has been more thought of fire prevention on the part of the people, resulting in only sixteen alarms being sent in. Ten of the 16 alarms were turned in from Oakland, 4 from Mt. Lake Park, 1 from Accident, and 1 was a forest fire. The following fires were listed in The Republican:

Flue in Gonder building, Second street, Mondya, January 7.

Explosion in Elliott's tire service, Tuesday, January 29. No damage to building.

Roof on S. R. Oswell property, Mt. Lake Park, Tuesday, March 12. Slight damage.

Burning leaves near Nethkin garage, Mt. Lake, Monday, March 25. No property damage. Burning leaves at Rosedale, same day. No damage.

Forest fire destroyed barn, three miles west of Oakland, owned by John Mackin, Wednesday, April 3. Trucks were not called but firemen assisted.

Dwelling corner of Liberty and Wilson streets, Saturday, April 13. Considerable damage, covered by insurance.

Home of Jasper Riley, south of Loeb Lynn, Tuesday, April 30. Portion of roof destroyed.

Maryland theatre in K. of P. building, Wednesday, May 15. Damage between $4,000 and $5,000, covered by insurance.

Home of Noah Tasker, Mt. Lake, Wednesday, July 24. Gasoline fire. No property damage.

Dwelling occupied by Philip Smith, Accident, Wednesday, August 1. Fire department called but turned back at Sand Flat upon notification.

Building in rear of A. D. Naylor and company, on Railroad street, Saturday, September 14. Slight damage.

School bus owned by Gorman Thayer, in front of Edwards' Chevrolet Sales, Tuesday, October 5. Slight damage.

Barn of C. and A. Gas company, October 29. Slight damage.

Home of Pat Helbig, same date. Both fires believed to be of incendiary origin.

Room on third floor in Franta hotel, between Liberty and Railroad streets. Slight damage.

The department now has a full membership of 35, and a waiting list. The firemen meet once each month, and anyone absent for three meetings is dropped. The men are completely outfitted with rubber coats, helmets and dress hats, and have taken part in all civic affairs of the past year. A revision of the by-laws of the organization has made it stronger than it has ever been, members say.

The officers of the organization consist of George Kerins, fire chief, who devotes many hours of his time in seeing that the machinery is in good condition when not in use, and in directing the action of the fighters at scenes of fire; Emroy Bolden, assistant chief; Grover Stemple, second assistant; Milton Sincell, captain; Fred Peddicord, president; A. G. Gortner, vice-president; W. W. Dawson, treasurer; and Leo Helbig, secretary and assistant treasurer.

Clarence Leighton, located during the past several months at a point near Philadelphia was here during the holiday season visiting his mother, Mrs. Oliver Leighton.

BUS LINE IS AUTHORIZED ON NORTHWESTERN PIKE

Runs from Grafton Through Gormania to Virginia Line

The state roads commission, on Thursday, authorized the extension of the bus lines of the Blue and Gray Transit Company from Grafton to the Maryland state line at Gormania through Romney to the Virginia state line near Capon Bridge. The extension was granted when the commission entered orders permitting the assignment of the certificates of convenience by the Meyer Transit Company, of Davis, to the Blue and Gray.

The commission also authorized the Washington Transportation Company, of Wheeling, to assign to the White Star Line, of Washington, Pa., certificates for bus lines between the Ohio state line at Wheeling and the Pennsylvania state line near West Alexander, and return the Pennsylvania state line near Mount Morris and Morgantown.

BOYS' BAND GIVES THIRD ANNUAL CONCERT SUNDAY

Program Heard by Large Number at Maryland Theatre—W. W. Dawson Speaks Briefly

Before a large crowd which entirely filled the Maryland theatre tbe members of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' band of Oakland rendered its third annual concert Sunday evening. The concert numbers played by the organization showed the vast improvement made by the band since its appearance before the public last Christmas.

Some real music was tackled and the boys gave a fine demonstration of what had been accomplished by R. R. Gilbert, director, and Russell Brown, his assistant.

Walter W. Dawson gave a short talk at the close of the program and spoke both on behalf of Mr. Gilbert and the audience. Speaking for Mr. Gilbert he said he had given his attention for three nights each week to the boys in order that they might be able to be of some value to the community, and had expected nothing in return. Speaking for the audience he said that the community was deeply appreciative of Mr. Gilbert's efforts and the results that had just been shown by the boys. The well packed theatre, despite the cold and disagreeable weather, spoke more loudly than words the interest the citizens had in the Boys' Band.

Reeves Blandford added to the concert with two vocal selections. The program rendered included the following:

Columbian ..... March
The Elves ..... Overture
Gippsland ..... March
A Night in June ..... Serenade
The Rifle Rangers ..... March
Pagan Love Song, solo hy Reeves Blandford
Silent Night, Holy Night, solo hy Reeves Blandford.
Energy ..... Overture
Military Escort ..... March
Dawn ..... Reverie
The New Colonial ..... March

The use of the Maryland Theatre was donated by Mr. B. I. Gonder, manager, and was highly appreciated by members of the band as well as by the sponsors.

Edwards' Chevrolet Sales Discontinues Business Here

C. U. Edwards and sons, H. C. and George Edwards, owners of the Grantsville Garage, Grantsville, who have also conducted the Edwards' Chevrolet Sales Garage in Oakland during the past year, discontinued busines in Oakland on January 1. The company removed its remaining stock to Grantsville where business will be continued with the Chevrolet agency for that section.

The agency for the Oakland district has not been given out. The garage formerly occupied by the Edwards firm, was taken over by William R. Browning, of Oakland, who will use the building as a storage garage and center for the distribution of gasoline, oils and other products.

STREETS IMPROVED AND BUILDINGS ERECTED IN 1929

Approximately $75,000 Spent for Building Program in Oakland—Streets Amiesited

The expenditure of approximately $75,000 for erection and remodelling of buildings was made in Oakland during the past year in increasing the assets of the town, as well as the permanent improvement of a number of Oakland's streets by the Mayor and Town Council.

An industrial survey of the town, authorized by the Town council, was also made during 1929 which is expected to bring some industrial interests here within the next few years.

Chief among the construction work in Oakland was that of the addition to the William-James hotel, and the addition to Oakland High school, each costing more than $20,000. Other buildings constructed during the past year include the home of Albert L. Lee and C. H. Browning's filling station.

Chief among the improved buildings is that of the Knights of Pythias lodge, on Third street, which was brick veneered and otherwise improved at a cost of approximately $6,000. Improvements were also made in Bolden's Undertaking establishment. Manhattan hotel, Oakland Model Bakery, and Frank Smouse's store. The front of the A. D. Naylor home was also remodeled, and a number of Oakland properties were repaired, repainted and improved.

The greatest improvement in street work was made on the main thoroughfares of tbe town, all of them being amiesited at considerable cost. The following streets received the amiesite coating: Liberty, between Wilson and Second; Green, between Second and Offutt's alley; Second, between Pennington and Oak; Alder, between Second and Third; Third, between Alder and Oak; Oak between Third and Fourth.

All streets previously improved were resurfaced and oiled. Other improvements were made on Pennington between Second and Third; Center, between Second and Third; Wilson, between Pennington and Center; Third, between Oak and B. and O. bridge; Green, between Fifth and Sixth; Fourth, between Alder and Green; Green, between Fourth and Fifth; Fifth, between Green and Oak; 2nd, between Pennington and Crook.

Including this year's work, more than 80 percent of the town's streets are now permanently built, and it is the hope of the present administration that in a few more years every street will be permanently constructed. The first permanent street was built 28 years ago.

Oakland, established 1861, with a population of 100, has grown consistently during the past eleven years and now has a population of approximately 2,000, all modern conveniences, ample fire protection, splendid water and sewage system, electric and gas service, bus line and railroad facilities and excellent educational institutions with a growing enrollment.

NOISE WELCOMES ARRIVAL OF NEW YEAR IN OAKLAND

Only a Few Business Places Closed For New Year's Day

The usual noisy greeting welcomed the New Year at midnight Tuesday with bells, whistles and the firing of guns adding to the din, with a few "Happy New Years" thrown in for good measure. The ovation was short lived, however, as it subsided almost as suddenly as it started.

The occasion was observed by a few with watch night parties in homes, and a union service of the young people of the Oakland churches, but no general or public festivity was arranged.

The postoffice and a few business establishments were closed on Wednesday but banks and other business establishments remained open for business. Many of the establishments took advantage of the holiday to get the annual inventories under way while others retained the old tradition of starting the new year right by operating all day.

One of the noticeable features of the arrival of the new year is the fact that 1929 automobile license plates disappeared from the streets and in their place the new 1930 plates of green and white appeared.

Robinson, of Gettysburg, Pa., formerly of Oakland, and Miss Catherine Fulmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fulmer, of Bethlehem, Pa., were married in the chapel of the Lutheran church, New York City, on December 21. The Rev. Felix G. Robinson, a brother of the groom, performed the ceremony. Only the immediate family and a few friends attended. Mr. Robinson was graduated from Gettysburg high school and spent two years in Gettysburg College. He is now employed by the firm of Eastman, Dillan and Company, bankers and brokers, New York. After January first the couple will be at home in Brooklyn, New York.

Miss Ruth Martin Assumes Position as Public Health Nurse Vacated by Miss Rhesa King

Miss Ruth Martin, R. N., who was recently appointed as public health nurse of Garrett county, assumed the duties of her new office this morning in the Court House, Oakland.

Miss Martin was engaged in health work in the Kitzmiller health center during the past year, and prior to that she spent one and one-half years in Mineral county, West Va., in rural health work, and one year in Cincinnati. She received her training in Hoffman hospital, Keyser.

Many Pay Last Respects to the Late J. M. Stanton.

One of the largest funerals ever held in Oakland took place Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock from St. Peter's Catholic church, Oakland, when residents of Oakland and people from neighboring towns gathered to pay their last respects to Jeremiah M. Stanton, whose death occurred last Wednesday evening, December 25, announcement of which was made in The Republican on Thursday.

The Rev. Fr. Thomas J. Stanton, brother of the deceased, conducted a high requiem mass, assisted by Rev. William J. McVeigh, pastor of the local church, and Rev. William Kelly, pastor of the Hancock Catholic church, the latter delivering an extremely appropriate sermon and one calculated to console the relatives and friends of the deceased. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs. P. J. Garrett, H. A. Loraditch, Joseph E. Harned, G. A. Fraley, Cecil Smth and A. D. Naylor.

Teacher Resigns and Shatters Possible Record

It was entirely too soon to crow about an intact teaching staff for Garrett county public schools, according to Superintendent F. E. Rathbun, because soon after the statement was made that nobody had resigned during the Christmas holidays, Amy Carbine, teacher at Silver Knoh school, announced her marriage to Mr. Francis Monahan, Cumberland, and consequently her withdrawal from the teaching staff.

The vacancy will be filled by Miss Lillian Harvey, McHenry, on January 6, 1930, when the schools will reopen.

MESHACH BROWNING AS A BOY AND PIONEER HUNTER-TRAPPER

Prepared by MRS. THADDEUS C. HINEBAUGH

In 1781 there was born in Frederick county, Maryland, a child, Meshach Browning, who became locally famous as the pioneer hunter of Western Maryland.

Meshach Is Brought West by Mother

His father, Joshua Browning, a farmer of limited means, died when Meshach was two weeks old. When the little estate was settled there remained but a pittance for the support of Mrs. Browning and her four children. Yet she stoutly refused the advice of her neighbors to place her children in good homes until she had, at least, tried to provide for them herself. However, she did let a Mr. Lee have Jeremiah, to her everlasting regret, as the boy never went home again.

Mrs. Browning's friends all having gone west—in those days to Allegany county—she with indomitable energy and determination decided that moving to Oldtown where she had a sister living, would better conditions and enable her to keep her little family together.

Disaster Met On The Way.

Writing her sister to that effect, her brother-in-law arranged with a Mr. Jacobs, whose wagon was coming from Baltimore with goods, to bring Mrs. Browning to Oldtown. In a few days the family embarked on this wagon, which was driven by a huge, blustering, profane negro. Upon reaching Sideling Hill, on the National Highway, they met with a disaster that nearly cut short the career of the prospective hunter. One of the wheels of the vehicle striking a rock sent horses and wagon with its load of humanity, boxes of dry goods, bags of salt, hogsheads of sugar, barrels of molasses and rum rolling and crashing over a precipice.

Mrs. Browning, upon recovering her presence of mind following the accident, missed Meshach, who was found beneath some straw and rubbish, stunned, bruised and nearly suffocated. An old man who had met them with an extra horse to help up the mountain with the heavy load, took some of the escaping rum to Mrs. Browning, which hastened the resuscitation of the unconscious child.

But what were they to do? All their worldly goods were on this wagon that was broken to pieces. In a dense wilderness, night coming on, with no help but twelve-year-old Joshua, an old man and the negro, of whom they were terribly afraid, and which, no doubt, intensified the forlorn situation of the helpless family. The old man told the negro to cut a small tree, place the butt on the front axle and when it was securely lashed in place he thought it would support the wrecked wagon and act in lieu of the useless wheel.

Lonely Vigil Kept On Mountain

By this time night had come. A large fire was made and Mrs. Browning sat down at the root of a tree with Joshua at her side and Meshach in her arms. What reflections must have filled her anxious mind during that solitary vigill They breakfasted on bread, cheese and molasses gathered from the broken barrels and puddles that had collected on the stones, then started on their twelve or fifteen mile walk, which was necessarily slow as Meshach had to be carried. But as all things end sometime, they at last reached Oldtown, Mrs. Browning unspeakably weary, discouraged and alone, still several miles from her destination. Next day a neighbor of her brother-in-law came to town and was prevailed upon to assist Mrs. Browning in reaching her sister, where she stayed until Meshach recovered, then went to her father's home on the headwaters of the Flintstone. The following spring she took up twenty acres of land; her friends built her a cabin; she and the children cleared four acres of land that was planted in corn by the primitive method in use by the Indians: merely digging holes and dropping in the corn. However they raised nearly one hundred bushels of corn, besides various kinds of vegetables.

Work For Pioneer Women

In our day and age the anxieties and hardships of these pioneers, where virtually everything they used and consumed was made by hand, is unbelievable. There were no mills to grind their wheat and corn that was pounded into coarse meal in stone mortars. Tallow from cattle and deer was molded into candles. A little flax, an acre or two of cotton and a few sheep furnished the raw materials for spinning wheels and looms, where a coarse but durable cloth, called homespun, was woven Yarn was made from wool that after shearing had to be washed, dried and picked or pulled into fluffy balls that were carded into long slender rolls. When spun into yarn it was knitted into gloves and stockings or woven into heavy flannel.

Imagine clothing large families at such an expenditure of energy that had to be supplied by the woman. No wonder she wore out when she lived, moved and had her being in such a daily grind. As this includes but one phase of the situation, others were as proportionately difficult. And strange to say, romance still flourished!

Forest Furnished Meat in Abundance

But they never had to worry about meat, for the woods swarmed with wild animals, edible and otherwise—deer, bear, wolves, panthers, the latter the most formidable beasts of prey. Many kinds of smaller animals were in abundance, besides quail, pheasants, turkeys and wild bees. The turkeys were a wary bird and difficult to shoot. Fresh and dried venison, the latter called "jerk", was especially prized, while the skins, crudely tanned, furnished moccasins and leather coats.

Dread of Indians Always Present

But wherever these people went or settled, they could not escape the sinister shadow of a marauding Indian. It rested like a pall on the mind and heart of the pioneer woman and steeped her whole existence in a never-ending dread. There was uncertainty when men went into the trackless forest for meat. Many never returned, their disappearance forever remaining a mystery. A hundred things other than being scalped by the Indians, could happen.

Meshach Comes To Garrett County

Meshach had an aunt living near them, and having no children of her own wanted the boy to make his home with her . She became so importunate that Mrs. Browning finally yielded, and Meshach came under that subtle influence that weaned him from his mother and home.

In September, these people had every plan completed to move, without Mrs. Browning's knowledge, into the glade country, then a hunter's and trapper's paradise. Meshach readily acquiesced, being promised a gun as soon as he could use one. They started long before day, and when the sun's first rays touched the summit of Dan's Mountain they were entering Fort Cumberland Valley. After having breakfasted, the journey was resumed and in a short time they passed through the Narrows, that gateway of the Allegany mountains that led into the middle West In a few days the Blooming Rose settlement was reached, where they remained until they could make arrangements for locating in the glade of Buffalo Marsh, now known as McHenry.

Glade Lands Once Lakes

These great tracts of glade land that in an earlier period were lakes. whose gradual subsidence formed oasis of pasture in a vast wilderness where bison, deer and other animals coming to feed, became the hunting grounds of hordes of dusky savages.

It is said by geologists that the Allegheny Mountains are among the oldest lands of the globe. Viewed from such eminences as Eagle Rock, Table Rock and others, their rounded tops spread out into undulations for hundreds of miles. Running through four states they formed the great barrier to a wilderness holding in its almost impenetrable fastnesses all those unknown and perils of a hidden world of whose immense scope the pioneers little dreamed.

McHenry Reached in October

Meshach with his uncle reached Buffalo Marsh in October, at the beginning of the hunting season, and took possession of an abandoned cabin. They had never pictured such an abundance of game of all kinds. Deep Creek teemed with the finest trout. While John Spurgin busied himself in collecting his winter's supply of meat, Meshach plied the fishing rod with great success. But the uncle who had a mania for elbow room, made several moves before locating permanently at Blooming Rose.

Meshach Pays Court to Irish Lass

At Blooming Rose they became neighbors of an Irish family by the name of McMullen. Meshach proved very susceptible to the charms of a fair Irish lass of the family for at the age of twelve years Mary McMullen made an indelible impression on the boy. At fifteen Meshach was paying court to Mary in earnest but surreptitiously, on account of a stern and unrelenting father who regarded the boy with particular aversion.

One balmy evening at that season when a young man's fancy is said to stray, Meshach, thinking Mr. McMullen was away from home, fared forth to call on Mary, and to make sure the coast was clear he went to a back window to peep, not seeing the ogre, he turned a corner near the door when a large dog barked. "Catch him, Prince," thundered McMullen, thinking of wolves. Meshach took refuge behind the house in flight and seeing a flock of sheep near dropped on his hands and knees in their midst and ran with them until out of sight. The success of this faux-pas caused Meshach to reflect, while he disgustingly arranged his dishevelment, how much more manly had he boldly faced what the fates had in store for him than to have approached as he did, but congratulated himself that none of the family had witnessed his undignified flight.

About this time Meshach was greatly surprised to see his brother Joshua who stopped to see him on his way to Flintstone. He told Meshach they were all living in the West; that his sister was dead and his mother married and very anxious to see him. Meshach had been hunting more or less and had killed his first deer.

Sets Out For Wheeling

For various reasons his aunt's home had lost its serenity and the boy's thoughts began to mobilize towards establishing himself in life. Accordingly, to think with him was to act, so with many misgivings he bade Mary good-bye and started for Wheeling, with one dollar in his pocket and a buckskin he purposed selling in Uniontown.

His first stop was at his Uncle James Spurgin's farm, who, upon hearing of Meshach's intentions to be responsible to no one but himself for his success or failure in life, gave the boy some good advice as he bade him God-speed on his journey, which impressed Meshach and proved a guiding star through a long life. His uncle stressed the clean, upstanding boy or man whose truthfulness and honesty of purpose would stand through all the vicissitudes of life and to give his best in all his undertakings; never to take an unfair advantage, always remembering the race is not up to the swift or strong but to him that overcometh.

A cold stormy morning with snow knee deep greeted them and Meshach's relatives insisted that he visit with them until weather conditions were more pleasant for his long walk of twenty-two miles to Uniontown, his next objective.

But the urge was too great for this fifteen-year old boy who interpidly faced the issues of life without schooling, without money, without training in any particular. Meshach was blessed with an optimistic spirit that enabled him to easily adapt himself to any circumstances. He got much pleasure out of his unusual experiences and fortunately was unaware of his limitations.

Meets His Grandfather and Mother.

On Sunday he stopped to rest at the home of Mr. Foote, who upon hearing his name and learning his destination, asked him if he was related to old William and John Browning. After some questioning Meshach was convinced they were his grandfather and uncle. Mr. Foote told him they would have preaching there that afternoon and for him to stay and meet his relatives, as they always attended the services. When Meshach was introduced to old Mr. Browning, now eighty years old, as his grand son, the old man was much affected and asked Mr. Foote to excuse him; so he could take the boy to see his mother, who lived nearby. She met them at the door, and taking the old man's hand led him in, inquiring about his health and who the young man was. Mr. Browning told her to look at him and see if she could tell whom he resembled. She scanned Meshach closely, saying she did not remember of ever having seen him.

"Be composed," the old man said. "It is your son Meshach."

"The Lord be praised," she exclaimed and sank unconscious to her chair.

Her husband asked Meshach to retire until she revived, while he bathed her face in cold water, but she did not fully recover her composure until after supper, when they spent a pleasant evening, exchanging confidences and experiences they had passed thru in the past six years.

While here Meshach met General Biggs, who was surveying the State of Ohio, and asked Meshach to join his expedition as hunter, but his mother opposed this so strenuously, telling him of the hostility of the Indians, who only three years before had annihilated seveal parties of white men. Meshach, for her piece of mind, gave up the Ohio project and went with Francis Dodd to Mr. Caldwell's in Wheeling where he was employed as a sort of major-domo at ten dollars per month. He stayed four months, proving himself very reliable and satisfactory to Mr. Caldwell but equally unsatisfactory to Mrs. Caldwell, who suspected a growing attachment between Meshach and her daughter Nancy. So the young woman was sent away on an indefinite visit. Mrs. Caldwell turned her attention to making Meshach's life as uncomfortable as possible, until her insults culminated in a bucket of cold water being dashed over him early one morning while he was still sleeping. It was difficult for him to maintain a shred of dignity under such provocation with the old lady heaping abuse on him and at last in self defense he retaliated in his own idiom "sass", which deeply offended the lady and precipitated her husband's wrath on her action. When Mr. Caldwell settled with Meshach he shook the dust of Wheeling from his feet and turned his face toward his mother's home, which he reached that night.

Meshach spent several weeks with his mother, and in the meantime exterminated the squirrels in Mr. Foote's cornfield at one dollar per day. But each week the longing for a sight of Mary's bonny face grew more intolerable. When he told his mother of his desire to return to Allegany county she readily consented on condition he would return.

Upon reaching Blooming Rose he did not see Mary for several days, but meeting her at a funeral, he walked home with her when they became tacitly engaged.

Kills a Tremendous Panther

In October Meshach's mother and stepfather moved to Blooming Rose, thereby giving the boy a home once more. The latter part of the month a slight snow fell. Meshach with his gun and dog were tracking four deer that dashed into a thicket to hide. Finding they were running in different directions he stood still a few minutes for observation and saw something slipping through the woods when the head of a huge panther glared at him over a big log lying near. Meshach was much startled, but raised his gun and fired while the animal was looking him full in the face. Making a tremendous spring, the panther disappeared in the woods, followed by the dog. As soon as Meshach recovered from his fright and could load his gun he took up the trail and found the panther and dog fighting at the base of a high cliff. Standing above them he fired again but not until he had shot the third time did he kill the beast that measured eleven feet and three inches. Out of fifty such animals Mashach killed during his lifetime this one was the largest.

Meshach Takes Mary As His Wife

The winter passed in occasional hunts, dances, shooting matches and in courting Mary. In 1799, both being in their eighteenth year they set the last day of April for their wedding day. When Meshach asked Mr. McMullen for his consent to their marriage he angrily said "as they had already made their plans it was useless for him to interfere." The last day of April dawned gloriously beautiful, when the wedding party consisting of several friends, all gay and irresponsible, rode away into Pennsylvania to have the ceremony performed. When the wedding was over, Meshac thanked the squire and told him it was the way he had long sought. But the responsibility of caring for a wife which Meshac had so jauntily assumed, began to look rather serious in the face of Mr. McMullen's continued antagonism which he made no effort to conceal.

Meshach had a squatter's title to twenty acres of cleared land with three acres of standing wheat and a good cabin, but he had no household provisions and no money.

He set a trap and then took Mary to his mother while he went to work on Tuesday morning and until Friday evening he had earned two bushels of wheat.

The Couple Go To Housekeeping

In the meantime, the cabin had been made habitable, he had shot a tukey and caught a bear in his trap. Mrs. McMullen had given them two plates, two cups and saucers, a knife, fork and spoon each and two tin cups. But the outstanding need was a cow. Milk and butter was indispensible. Meshach remembered a man who had long coveted his gun and the hunting season being some months off he might exchange the gun for a cow, which was actually accomplished. Now with his wheat and garden that had given him employment for the summer they were comparatively comfortable and without a doubt contented.

When October came Meshach procured a gun and asked Mary if she preferred going to her mother's or staying at home, as he was going to Meadow Mountain to hunt and did not know when he would return. Mary understood conditions so perfectly that her anxiety was justified when Meshach went on these prolonged excursions for game and told him she believed familiarity with danger was making him careless. She knew that he often laid his gun aside and entered the fight armed only with his hunting knife and if the least thing went wrong he would be instantly torn to pieces. Meshach would promise to be careful, which may have allayed Mary's fears without dispelling them. She knew that nothing above or below, things seen or unseen, had any terrors for Meshach. Knowing the habits and feeding grounds of wild animals he always knew just where and when to go for any particular game he wanted.

Early next morning Meshach was on his way but did not reach his destination until four o'clock in the afternoon. He hobbled his horse and was soon on the tracks of a bear, which he killed. It was quite dark when he finished skinning the animal and a thunder storm was upon him before he could go to his horse and prepare for the night. The rain came down in torrents. Two large trees near where he sat wrapped in his bear skin, were riven by the almost incessant lightning. About midnight it ceased but everything was so wet it was impossible to make a fire. So drenched and supperless, rolled himself in his bear skin, laid his head on the dog and slept until morning.

SOCIALISM IS DESPOTISM

When Owen D. Young, testifying before a Senate Committee recently, stated that he did not believe in government ownership of industry, he was asked by a radical senator; "Then you don't believe in the United States government?"

The theory that if you don't believe in state socialism you don't believe in government has been exploited rather freely in recent months. Many people disbelieve in government or political ownership of industry just for the reason that they do believe in government and do not wish to see its efficiency impaired or destroyed by mixing it up with things that have nothing legitimately to do with government.

The real name for government ownership is political ownership. That is to say, it means the management and control of industry. It meant just that during our period of political management of railways, which resulted in tremendous loss to the taxpayers of the United States, and through increased costs of operation and increased freight rates enormously increased burdens for the people.

The potential tyranny involved in political control and management of industry is the most burdensome form of despotism ever conceived. When the time comes that the people of a country are dependent on the politicians in power for their bed and board, their right to work for a living, their liberty will be entirely gone—as it is in Russia, where just such a system is in operation.

Private owners of property are under the control of laws passed by the people and administered by their elected representatives. But the politicians given control of industry are themselves the government, and are beyond all legal restraint. Their power is unlimited, because they are in position through favor or punishment for those on the government payroll to control elections.

Nietzche says that socialism represents the primitive reaction to despotism. And no despotism has ever been conceived so unlimited in its possibilities of human enslavement as that involved in turning over the business activities of a nation to a ruling class of politicians. In Russia it has been carried to the point where the key positions in industry are turned over entirely to the members of one small political party, and the right of the remainder of the population to food or living quarters is subordinate to the right of the political master-class to enjoy all comforts and luxuries.

Among the Indians and barbarians generally there was tribal control of property, and the individual was completely subordinated to the will of the civil and military chieftains. It is to such a state of barbarism that the socialist would return us. It is possible to believe in the government and yet not believe that the politicians in control of government should be the masters, and the citizens slaves.

1,906 MORE PUPILS ARE IN SCHOOLS OF COUNTIES

Increase Over 1928 Figures For White Children Attending Public Schools of State Announced

There were 131,280 white pupils enrolled this year in the county public schools of Maryland an increase of 1,906 over the number enrolled last year, according to a statement issued Saturday by the State Department of Education.

Since some of these pupils entered late and withdrew early, the average enrollment, technically called "the average number belonging," was 123,255, and the average number attending was 110,341, the statement said.

91,297 Enrolled In City

"Corresponding figures for the city of Baltimore are: For enrollment, 91,297; average number belonging, 83,049, and attending, 77,184," the statement continued. "It will be noted that these figures are from 33,000 to 40,000 lower than those given for the counties, depending on whether comparison is based on enrollment, average number belonging or attending.

"According to the Federal census of 1920, the total white population of Baltimore exceeded that in the counties by 50,000. The major part of the difference between the public school enrollment in the counties and the city of Baltimore is explained by the fact that there are about 22,500 more white children enrolled in parochial and private schools in the city than in the counties.

Larger Families In Counties

"The remaining difference is probably due to a larger number of children per family in the counties than is found in the city, and to the fact that a larger percentage of county than of city children enter high school.

"Largely due to the infantile paralysis epidemic in the summer and fall of 1928, and the resulting alarm of some parents, the county schools, which did not postpone their opening, as did the schools in the city, were poorly attended early in the year. Sickness during the year, which was more prevalent than usual, caused considerable absence, so that the progress in attendance, shown annually since 1923, had its first setback in 1929.

Earlier Enrollment Cited

"Another way of measuring school attendance and, as a result, the possibility of benefitting by good instruction, is the speed with which the schools get under way by bringing children in at the end of the year. Each year since 1923 there have been fewer children entering school after the first month. The year 1929 showed an increase in the number of late entrants due, among other things, to more illness and quarantine. This again shows the effect of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

"It is gratifying, however, to know that the third measure in attendance, percentage of withdrawals for causes other than removal, transfer and of death, shows that, out of 5,473 withdrawals from white elementary schools, there were 536 fewer in 1929 than in 1928.

Withdrawals Counted.

"In order to measure the effectiveness of attendance in 1929 the counties have been ranked on a basis which combines percentage of attendance with percentage of late entrants and withdrawals. A county ranks high if it has a high percentage of attendance combined with a low per cent of late entrance because of employment, negligence and indifference, and with a low per cent of withdrawals for causes other than removal, transfer and death.

Prince George's, Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties rank highest in the State in the effectiveness of their attendance in white elementary schools.

"The percentage of attendance in the counties varied from 83.8 in Charles county to 91 per cent in Allegany and Prince George's. Percentage of late entrants, due to employment, negligence and indifference ranged from 1.4 in Allegany to 8.1 per cent in St. Mary's. The percentage of withdrawals were lowest in Baltimore county, 2.1, and highest in Garrett county, 9.7 per cent."

Today The Republican prints the first installment of a brief history of the life and activities of Meshach Browning, Western Maryland's most noted hunter of an age when this section of not only Maryland but adjacent sections of West Virginia and Pennsylvania were young, comparatively wild and was the Western frontier. Mrs. Thaddeus C. Hinebaugh is the author of the story. That it will be read with interest by all Garrett countians there is slight question, as it contains many interesting anecdotes of the life of the pioneer and the hardships which he and his wife Mary endured in establishing their home in the wilderness.

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN

During the Christmas Holidays, there is always some excuse for a tea party. Perhaps it is for the young daughter or son of the family who is at home from their first term at school, who has come to spend Christmas with the family. At any rate, it is an occasion for giving an extra polish to the silver, taking down from the cupboard the prettiest china, and dressing up the dining room table with its very best cover.

The dining room is really the center around which the party revolves and it should look its best. If the wintry afternoon happens to be gray and forbidding, it is nice to draw the shades and use lighted candles on the table. The table centerpiece should be of flowers, artistically arranged in a low bowl, so that they will not obscure the view. Or if flowers are not easily procurable, a lovely arrangement can be made of green firs with some white berries or mistletoe. To give color to the centerpiece, use tall rose-colored candles in silver candlesticks.

The lunch should be simple but very dainty. Hot coffee or chocolate, or both, for the beverage, with sandwiches and fancy little cakes, as many varieties as desired.

Open or uncovered sandwiches are very popular now and they add a very interesting touch to the tea table. A specially attractive Christmas sandwich is made by spreading rounds of white bread with cream cheese, sprinkling the surface with finely chopped sweet green pepper and placing a slice of maraschino cherry in the center. There are an infinite number of combinations for these open sandwiches. If the Christmas colors happen to be desirable, pimento and sweet pickles fit in very nicely. Red respberry jam gives the right touch of red, and makes a delicious morsel, particularly when a border of stiffly whipped cream is piped around the edge.

For the sweets, there is nothing better than dainty little cakes. Recipes for two of the simplest and most delicious for this purpose are given below. For one the whites of the eggs are used, and for the other the yolks. They may be spread with any sort of frosting or even simply decorated with whipped cream and fancy little candies.

Almond Cakes (White)

One-half cup crisco, 1 cup sigar, ½ cup milk, 1½ cups flour, chopped blanched almonds, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 egg whites, 1 teaspoon almond flavoring.

Cream crisco with sugar. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and flavoring. Fill small muffin pans half full and sprinkle surface with sugar and finely chopped almonds. Bake in moderate oven until browned lightly on surface.

Almond Cake (Yellow)

One-fourth cup crisco, ½ cup sugar, 4 egg yolks, ¼ cup milk, powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅞ cup flour, 1 1-3 teaspoons baking powder, shredded almonds.

Cream crisco, add sugar gradually, egg yolks well beaten, milk and flour mixed with baking powder. Put in paper cases or tiny muffin pans, sprinkled with shredded almonds and powdered sugar. Bake at 375 degrees F. 20 minutes.

Special Sandwiches

Toast bread and spread with Mustard Butter. Lay a slice of American cheese on one slice of toast. Cover with thin slices of tomato and sprinkle with salt and black pepper. Place a second slice of toast on the tomato and cover with crisp slices of bacon and a fresh crispy letuce leaf. Add a third slice of toast, butter side down; cut sandwiche diagonally and serve at once.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Bowie Johnson farm, lying two miles north of Oakland, on the Accident road, was sold to Truman W. Casteel.

Delegate Wm. Merrill, Democrat, of Oakland, left for Annapolis Monday. Delegate Kemp, Republican, of Bloomington, went to the State capital on Tuesday.

Messrs. E. Z. Tower, clerk of the Circuit Court, and John C. Dunham, deputy County Treasurer, were both seriously ill.

Married, by Rev. J. A. Dunlap, at the Lutheran parsonage, December 31, 1889, Mr. John L. Beachy and Miss Ida E. Peck, both of Grantsville.

So marked and rapid were the advances in business circles at Friendsville following the advent of the new railway into that town, a report was sent in to The Republican by a witness who saw and counted twenty-three wagons drawn by seventy-six horses pass a certain point enroute to the railway station to load with freight.

The great curiosity at the Catholic fair during holiday week was the violin exhibited on Miss Hart's table. The instrument was a genuine Maggini and had a tone for sweetness and a record as to its genuineness. It was played during the fair by Mr. J. M. Litzinger then editor of the Mountain Democrat and the Browning Brothers who rendered the Arkansas Traveler.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Will Sturgiss visited Mrs. Sturgiss' parents in Meyersdale. T. A. Gonder had charge of the Sturgiss' Pharmacy during the absence of the proprietor.

Mrs. Herman Creutzburg entertained a number of ladies at flinch on Tuesday evening who participated in many hotly contested games.

Mr. Ernest Ray Jones and his sister Miss Mae Jones, both of Deer Park, who were students at Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, were elected presidents of the Amphyctionian Literary Society and the Alothian Literary society, respectviely. Mr. Jones was also one of the twenty-one students chosen to represent the institution in the inter-collegiate debates to be held shortly after the new year.

OUTLOOK FOR HEALTH IN 1930 BETTER THAN 1929

No Serious Epidemics Being Faced, Health Department States

Here is a New Year's message from Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health. Wishing every man, woman and child in the State "A Healthy, Happy New Year," Dr. Riley said: "As we stand at the threshold of 1930, our outlook is more favorable than it was this time a year ago. On the first of January, 1929, the epidemic of influenza, which swept the entire State was just getting under way. The epidemic reached its crest in March and then just gradually declined but its influence was felt until late in the year.

"This year we are not facing a serious epidemic and we can use the opportunity to take stock—as every business firm does— of our assets and liabilities. Looking back over our records for a period of years, we find that there has been a gradual increase in what we call the "degenerative" diseases of middle age—notably of diseases of the heart and kidneys, apoplexy, and also of cancer. Considerably more than half of the deaths each year occur among the age groups from 45 years upward. And of these deaths, two-thirds are due to the diseases just mentioned.

"The real object in taking an inventory is to face facts in order that we may know just where we stand so that we may take steps to improve the liability side of the ledger. We have a practical way of doing this so far as health and the prevention of disease are concerned. The lives of thousands of babies and young children have been saved because mothers have been shown how to keep them well. The health of innumerable school children has been improved through the periodical medical inspection that is now a regular part of the school routine. Grown-ups who have had periodical medical examinations have found them to be good investments because they give warning of conditions while there is still a chance to correct them.

"If all grown-ups would treat their own marvelously adjusted human mechanism as they do their automobiles and would have themselves inspected by their doctors as regularly as they have their automobile gone over, not only could many lives be, polonged but they could be prolonged for healthy usefulness. To the season's greetings, wishing health, and happiness in the New Year, I would like to urge each individual to begin the New Year by following the custom of the wide-awake business concerns. Go to your doctor for a thorough examination of your health assets and your physical liabilities. Then follow his advice."

The Board of County Commissioners will convene Monday at the Board office in the Court House for the purpose of appointing road supervisors and constables for the next year. The board will also transact routine business that is properly brought to the attention of the body.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 1:1-2:23 (Print Matt. 2:10-23).
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt call His name Jesus for He shall save His people from their sins.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Care of Jesus When a Child.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Care of Jesus When a Child.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Child-King Was Received.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Childhood of the Saviour-King.

The central theme of Matthew is Jesus Christ the King, the fulfiller of the Messianic hope. In harmony with this pre-eminent theme, Matthew first deals with the all important question of His genealogy, for His right to occupy the throne of David must be established.

The royal covenant was made to David (II Sam. 7:8-16, cf. Acts 2:30-32). In harmony with this, the first verse of Matthew's record constitutes a key to the book.

I. The Birth of Jesus, the King (1:18-25).

1. The Saviour was to be the seed of a woman (Gen. 3:15), the son of a virgin (Is. 7:14). This was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus. The genealogy (Matt. 1:1-17) shows His legal right to the throne, but something more is required in order to be the Saviour from sin. He must be both human and divine (Is. 9:7). The Saviour was begotten by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary, thus becoming Immanuel, which in its fullness means, "God with us, God for us, and God in us."

II. The Childhood of Jesus, the King (2:1-23).

1. Wise men from the East seeking Israel's King (vv. 1, 2).

The King's reception was most heartless. His own nation received Him not. His advent was heralded by a star which guided men of a foreign nation to seek and worship Him, pouring out their gifts to Him. These men were Persian or Arabian astrologers—students of the stars. Their attention was attracted by the appearance of an unusual star. Through the influence of the Jews who remained in Chaldea, or the direct influence of Daniel extending to this time, they had become acquainted with Israel's hope as to the Messiah.

2. Herod seeking to kill the King (vv. 3-8; 16-18).

The news brought by the wise men struck terror to Herod's heart. He was not alone in this, for all Jerusalem was troubled with him. The news ought to have brought joy, but a glimpse at the social customs in and about Jerusalem of that day enables us to understand why this news brought uneasiness to the people. They were living in the greatest luxury. Fine dress, sumptuous feasts, fine houses and other luxuries led to gross immoralities. This is why Herod and Jerusalem were troubled. A Saviour who would save them from their sins was not wanted. Their desire was to continue in them. Herod demanded of the priests and scribes information as to where Christ should be born. The fact that they were able to tell him so promptly shows that they had a technical knowledge of the Scriptures, but not a heart for the Saviour set forth therein. We face similar conditions today. This all occurred in Jerusalem, the city of the King, the place of all places where He should have been welcome. When the wise men returned to their country by another way, Herod slew all the male children two years of age and under in Bethlehem and its coasts.

3. The King found by the wise men (vv. 9-12).

The wise men having obtained the desired information, started immediately to find the King. As soon as they left the city, the star as it guided them in the East, appeared again to lead them on. Not that it had disappeared from the sky, but the dwellings of the city no doubt shut out the sight of it. Frequently, spiritual vision is obscured by the things of this world.

4. The King protected (vv. 13-23).

(1) Flight to Egypt (vv. 13-15).

To escape Herod's wicked aim, God directed Joseph to take Mary and the child Jesus and flee to Egypt. In obedience to the heavenly vision, he went and remained there till Herod's death.

(2) Return to Nazareth (vv. 19-23).

Upon the death of Herod, the angel of the Lord directed Joseph to take Jesus and His mother and go into the land of Israel. By divine direction, he returned to Galilee and dwelt at Nazareth.

REPORT MADE ON DANGER OF FOREST DEVASTATION

Forests of America in Greater Danger Today Than Ever Before in Our History

The danger of forest devastation and its cure is told in a report of Major George P. Ahern and Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, made before the Society of American Foresters at Des Moines, Iowa, on December 30.

Major Ahern is a distinguished author on the present condition of American forests and the report not only gives facts as to forest devastation but points out the essential remedy.

The article follows:

The forests of America are in greater danger today than ever before in our history. Not one acre out of eight of our original forests remains, and the percentage of this remnant devastated each year is greater than ever before.

Forest devastation on privately owned timberlands, where most of the destruction goes on, is among the most serious of all dangers to our future prosperity. We cannot get on without wood.

Forest devastation wastes not only wood, but water too. It ravages our watersheds, and in the Northwest squanders the great original forest trees that can never be replaced.

Forest growth is falling steadily farther behind in the race with forest destruction. Ten years ago destruction was four times greater than new growth. Today it is at least six times greater.

Two out of every three of our States already consume more lumbr than they produce, and cannot supply the needs of their own people. Because of forest devastation many States must bring their lumber (and pay freight on it) from distances of from one to three thousand miles.

Many States import nine-tenths of the lumber they use. Yet our lumber men are sending out of the country nearly one-tenth of all the lumber they cut.

The South, which can still furnish lumber for other States, apparently will have none left for export within seven years. The Pacific Northwest will last much longer, provided forest fires do not continue to burn up vast quantities of standing timber, as they did in 1910, in 1919, and again last summer.

As reported by the U.S. Forest Service, the number of forest fires has more than trebled in the last six years, and doubled in the last three. in 1928 there were 177,000 forest fires.

According to the same official figures, 34,000,000 acres of forest land were burned over in 1928. In 1920 the acreage burned was only one-tenth as much, in 1922 only one-quarter, and only one-half as recently as 1925.

Every twelve months, what with unregulated cutting and uncontrolled fires, an amount of forest land half as big again as the State of Connecticut is devastated and put completely out of production. More than 100,000,000 acres have been ruined already, and the ruining goes on unchecked.

Outside of the National and State forests and parks, our forests situation is highly dangerous. It is getting worse, and rapidly worse, year by year.

Our National and State forests, containing about one-fifth of our forest lands, and much the less valuable half of our virgin timber, are safe from forest devastation but not yet safe from fire. But most of the best timber had passed into private hands before they were created, and at present they furnish but three percent of our lumber.

If to this three percent we add one additional percent to cover all lumber cut on private lands under any plan of conservative forestry, which is ample, we are forced to the appalling conclusion that 96 per cent of all lumber sawed in the United States is cut with no attempt to insure another forest crop.

It is roughly true that where one acre of saw logs is cut conservatively, twenty-four are devastated, or cut without regard to future growth.

The increasing distances over which lumber must be hauled because nearer forests have been destroyed have raised the actual present money cost of forest devastation certainly to hundreds of millions of dollars every year and probably to billions. All of which the consumer pays.

When our own supplies are exhausted there is no region on earth that can supply us, even at excessive prices, with the kinds and amounts of wood upon which our National standard of living is based.

The vast quantities of lumber we need in America we must grow or go without. If we go without, every business, every occupation, every family will suffer, for nothing that we use or eat or wear can be produced, manufactured, or transported without the help of wood.

Lumberman interested in continuing the profits they make from forest devastation have spent great sums in propaganda intended to make people believe that the future American forests are safe. Many have been deceived, when the fact is that nothing could be farther from the truth.

Most commercial timberland owners who endanger our future by devastating their forests for profit are opposed to stopping it while anything is still left to devastate. For more than thirty years continuous efforts have been made to induce them to cut their timber without injuring the public interest. With a few exceptions, honorable in purpose but negligible in amount, they have gone on slashing.

The area of commercial timberlands today under conservative cutting is insignificant. It does not even promise to exercise any influence worth considering on the central forest problem in America, which is to stop forest devastation and keep lands chiefly adapted to forest growth actually growing usable trees.

Many lumbermen, especially on the Pacific Coast, are today in trouble chiefly because they got together, largely by fraud, greater holdings of timberland than they can profitably carry under the present conditions of industry and population. The public is now invited to make good their losses, which are directly due to improvident greed or actual fraud, or let forest devastation go on until the lumbermen can see a profit in practicing forestry.

This amounts to saying that the profits of the lumbermen are more sacred than the welfare of the people. We assert, on the contrary, that the public welfare comes first; that every forester is in duty bound to oppose forest devastation and help to stop it, whether it pays the lumbermen or not; and that the public has no obligation to guarantee the profits of any business, unless that business is a public utility with a limit on profits, and is regulated as such.

A sound forest policy for the United States must put an end to destructive lumbering on large commercial timberlands. It should not attempt to control cutting on farm woodlots or other small parcels of forest land. This is properly a matter for the individual States.

We protest against further delay by investigation or any other dilatory measure. What is wrong is known, and what to do about it. Forest devastation has gone too far already. Public opinion, under courageous leadership, is ready to put an end to it.

The ownership of property involves responsibility to the public for the proper use of it. No householder is allowed to use his property in a way to injure the public welfare. Neither should any lumberman. They should be required by law to stop forest devastation and practice conservative lumbering.

Regulated lumbering is neither new nor strange. Laws for the public control of cutting on privately owned timberlands are already in successful operation in nearly every civilized nation on earth that is engaged in woods operations on any large scale. Without such laws private forests have never been permanently safe. Such laws also stabilize and protect lumbering as a business. Nearly everywhere the lumbermen who operate under them are their staunch supporters.

The only way to stop forest devastation is to stop it. The longer it goes on the more it does the Nation harm. We recommend the prompt passage of a law by Congress to prevent commercial timberland owners from injuring the public by forest devastation, and require them to keep their timberland growing wood, unless public authority finds it better adapted to some other useful purpose.

This can be done under the Constitution. The Capper Bill shows how.

Singing in the Bathtub.

And now comes a contest to see who is the best bathtub or bathroom soloist. It all started at a dance the other night when Betty Dawson kept crooning in his partner's ear. She asked him if it always took him that long to tune up and he replied that in the bathroom he was wonderful—could reach high C without any trouble at all and hold it for a minute. He said he could also whistle most any tune while standing under the shower and it all sounded like singing in the rain.

Slim Shaw president of the Amalgamates wouldn't sponsor the contest because of the fact that there was too much work involved. "When Saturday night comes my members are all so engrossed in scrubbing that they couldn't warble E flat with any degree of regularity," Slim bewailed.

When Jim Kerins was notified that he might be a member of the committee appointed to go around and listen to all the the bathroom harmony he vowed and declared it had to be a committee of one only.

So it has been decided that there will be a contest for the purpose of finding out who is the best singer while tubbing, shaving or shampooing. Inspector Kerins, in making his rounds, will have a pair of earphones with an extension cord that will just fit over the keyhole. In this way he expects to get full benefit of all the sound waves.

Archibaldson says he doesn't know why everybody else sings in the bathroom, but he knows why he does. It is because somebody lost the key to the bathroom door.

Reeves Blandford will not enter the contest, he has announced, and since this piece of news has been broadcast the following have sent in their names as competitors: John Forman, Berne Teter, Singleton Townshend, Mike Carney, Bill Browning, I. R. Rudy, Soldier Halsey, Neil Fraley, Tom Gonder and the Commodore at Deep Creek Lake.

Mr. Rathbun, because splashing with the feet sounds just like ordinary splashing, will not enter. "Ordinary movements with ordinary splashing would cause discord with my melodious symphonic notes," he said, "and would do me an injustice."

New Year's Resolutions

The following New Year's resolutions were received by Scoop during the past week, and are published at the request of the senders so that the community may know what to expect and not be unduly shocked during the first few days of 1930:

Slim Shaw resolves to let no more registered nurses get the better of him.

Fred Cropp resolves to retain his job as bathing beauty inspector at Deep Creek lake next summer.

Jim Painter resolves not to hunt any more—but just as much.

Sprigg Tower resolves to turn orchestra offers over to somebody else during 1930.

Cal Menhorn resolves to be a law abiding citizen for one year or perhaps longer.

Members of the corn parade resolve to be careful.

The Milky Way corporation resolves to renew its subscription to The Republican and get all the real news of the county while it is news.

And that wouldn't be a bad idea for a lot of people to carry out during 1930. When Nathan Hale stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg and shouted that heroic and historic shout heard around the world, "Give me Liberty or give me The Republican," he knew what a comfort the news of Garrett county would bring to him in his place of solitude. MT. LAKE PARK

We realize that it takes all kinds of people to make the world, and yet there are a few kinds that could be dispensed with without much loss to the community or the world at large. For instance, the bird that sawed the top out of one of the ornamental blue spruce trees in the front yard of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy. What a contrast between this wanton destruction and the constructive idea of our friend, J. A. Enlow.

Along about the year 1882, when the Park was young, Mr. Enlow was assistant manager, and while in that position he planted two two-inch trees on either side of the boardwalk leading across the glade. Today those trees, approximately thirty inches through, stand as monuments to the constructive foresight of that class of citizens whose aim is to beautify, in contrast to that class who wantonly disfigure and destroy without regard to the rights or property of others.

On Christmas Day the whole mountain was blanketed with snow—just the kind of weather that appeals to both the children and grown-ups. It was ideal in all respects.

Today (New Year's Day) is just the opposite. The sun is shining brightly, the snow has all disappeared and the birds that had decided to winter with us are chirping with joy and gladness. A number of automobile parties are taking advantage of the spring-like days by making trips to Table Rock, Deep Creek Lake, over the Sand Flat road to Deer Park, and elsewhere. The day is typical of the "hope that springs eternal in the human breast." May it be a harbinger of increased happiness and prosperity to those whom the past year has brought adversity and delayed realization of fond hopes.

A series of revival meeting will begin at the Loch Lynn U. B. church next Sunday evening. The preaching will be done by Rev. S. A. Jessee, the pastor.

New Year's Day, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Enlow celebrated the 56th anniversary of their marriage. It is said that that day 56 years ago was similar in many respects to today.

Most of the young people who were visiting their parents over the holiday season have returned to their respective schools.

Howard Bell, Cumberland, and Miss Bertha Bell, Morgantown, were weekend guests of Mrs. Alma Bell.

Mrs. James Moreland, aged 69, who had many friends in this community, died last Saturday at the home of Mr. Henry Foglepole, her son-in-law, with whom she had made her home for some years. Mrs. Moreland was formerly a resident of the Ryan's Glade country, living about five miles from Loch Lynn. Funeral services were held Monday, in charge of Rev. Chas. Thompson, pastor of the M. E. church, Masontown, W. Va. Interment was made on the home farm, near Oak Grove, Monday afternoon.

In Loch Lynn and the Park many watchnight parties were held New Year's Eve. It was a beautiful night, the heavens studded with thousands of stars, their half light filtering through the oaks—an ideal setting for a sane New Year's celebration.

Army Engineers Survey Route From Ohio River At Pittsburgh To Tidewater

It was announced in Washington on last Friday and sent out by the Associated Press that surveys had been practically completed by the United States Army engineers of the Potomac river and its tributaries such as Will's Creek and Savage River in the Allegany mountains for a proposed canalized waterway from Washington to Cumberland and connecting with the Ohio river at Pittsburgh with tidewater.

Four Hydro-electric Dams.

Investigation at the Washington office discloses that to canalize the Potomac river between Washington and Cumberland, a series of 27 dams are necessary, four of them to be power-navigation dams capable of supplying 1,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of prime power annually, with a construction cost of approximately $60,000,000.

The plans call for a 12-foot channel in the Potomac river from Washington to Cumberland, and some distance beyond Cumberland. A nine-foot water-way tunnel is proposed under the mountains to the Youghiogheny river, then through three locks and dams to the mouth of that stream at McKeesport with the Monongahela river.

Canal Tunnel Under Mountain.

A tunnel that would be driven under the foothills from a point near West Newton, Pa., is declared feasible and more practical than a series of locks and dams to the top of the mountain divide, which has an elevation of 1800 feet.

In connection with the survey which has been made for several years, navigation, water power, flood control, and irrigation have been considered. Engineers have been at Cumberland and in the eastern section of Garrett county for several months.

Four Routes Considered.

Four routes now are being considered by the Washington office of the United States engineers, under direction of Major Brehon Somervel. These routes are Will's Creek and Castleman River, Savage River via Piney Creek, or Castleman River, or Deep Creek and Youghiogheny River and also the north branch of the Potomac River with the Youghiogheny River. All of these proposed routes would ultimately end in the Youghiogheny River, giving Pittsburgh another outlet to tidewater.

The question of a tunnel waterway is an old one, it was pointed out, as there is one in existence in Belgium, approximately six miles in length, in which boats are barges are transported successfully.

The survey is done under House document No. 308, 1928.

Report Later to Congress

Under the same authority the Pittsburgh district, which lies on the west of the watershed, also is making comprehensive and detailed studies for the utilization of the waterways on the west side of the mountain. Such studies will include the advisability of connecting waterways with the Potomac system, taking into consideration the physical and economical features of such an undertaking. These investigations, which have been made off and on for a long period of years, will eventually connect up with the studies now being made by the Washington department and later will make a comprehensive report to be submitted to Congress.

Churches Observe Annual Week of Prayer

The Oakland churches observed the annual week of prayer with three services. The first was held in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, with Rev. W. B. Brock delivering the sermon; the second on Tuesday evening in St. Mark's Lutheran church, when Rev. C. A. Shilke preached, and the third and final service was on Wednesday evening in the M. F church with Rev. B. T. Trevey as the speaker. The services were all fairly well attended and all showed interest in the discussions of church unity, which formed the basis of all three sermons.

SUM PAID FOR BOUNTIES MAYBRING INVESTIGATION

Trappers Suspected of Illegally Collecting Money from County

Attention of the State's attorney and the County commissioners has been called to the great number of bounties paid by the county for fox, wild cat and weasel scaips during the past few months, and whether or not trappers are buying furs from other persons both within and outside the State and getting around the law for their own personal profit. During the month of December alone the county treasurer, A. L. Lee, paid out $875 in bounties.

Trapping game in this county has come to the point where it proves to be a very profitable business, judging from the number of furs brought to Oakland for market and shipment.

The game most frequently trapped includes fox, weasel, mink, and occasionally a wildcat, opossum, raccoon and otter. Polecats are reported to be plentiful, but the trapper, notwithstanding the value of the pelts, does not seem to care for their fur. For killing a fox the county offers a bounty of $2, for the weasel 50 cents, and for the wildcat $2.

The law applicable to Garrett county in this respect first went into effect shortly after the county was organized. That law was re-enacted in 1912 and amendments added in 1914, and from then until 1924 was repealed and re-enacted, until at that time a law was enacted stating that any person killing a fox, wildcat or weasel, would be entitled to bounty.

The law, besides providing that only the person kling the anmal is entitled to bounty, also provides that the animal must be killed within the limits of the county and that an affidavit must be made to that effect, and that each animal be marked by the officer taking the afidavit.

The large sum paid out in December caused Mr. Lee to notify the State's attorney and County commissioners, and it is up to them to decide whether or not an investigation shall be made. Approximately $1,500 was paid in bounties in 1927, and nearly $1,200 in 1928.

FORESTRY ORGANIZATION IS PURCHASING PROPERTY

Survey Indicates That 200,000 Acres Should Be Acquired

Seeking to further its plans of forest conservation, the state forestry department, through F. W. Besley, state forester, Monday said it is taking up options on "lands that are offered at a sufficiently low price, and in large enough tracts to make economical administration possible" for its seeding purposes.

These options, Mr. Besley said, embrace about 15,000 acres in several parts of the state, at an average price of two dollars per acre. Other tracts have been offered to the department, he said, and are being examined to determine their suitability for state forests.

This action is taken following the appropriation of $50,000 by the last legislature for the purchase of land for the state forests, the money to be expended over a two-year period. Mr. Besley said that a survey made two years ago showed 000,000 acres of idle land throughout the state, most of which is forest land and fit only for timber growing.

"The department survey indicates that in order to meet public needs, approximately 200,000 acres should be acquired by the state," Besley said. "Land can be purchased at low cost and be developed as a great natural resource, bringing substantial revenues to the state. The forests would provide watershed protection, natural homes for wild life, and recreational areas for the people of the state," he said.

FRIENDSVILLE HIGH BOY WINS PROJECT CONTEST

Merle Garletts Is Successful In State-wide Competition

Merle Garletts, a member of the Vo-ag department of Friendsville High school, has been chosen as winner of the first prize in the State-wide project contest, fostered by the Maryland Farm bureau. HUNTING, FISHING AND MARRYING RUSH CLERKS

Perusal of Records Shows Marriages Lowest of 3 in Number

When it came to getting licenses at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court last year the number of marriage licenses obtained was the lowest of the three principal pastimes, marrying, hunting, and fishing, a perusal of the records shows.

While 1258 marriage licenses were being issued, 1294 applied for fishing permits, and 1618 tried their luck at hunting. The figure for hunting licenses was slightly higher than last year, due, it is said, to the open season on deer on December 2 and 3. The number of marriage permits also increased, while fishing seemed to decrease in favor. A total of 4,170 licenses were issued.

One thousand fifty-one of the fishing licenses issued were granted to county residents, 68 to non-residents; 113 to Deep Creek Lake, non-residents; 62 to Deep Creek Lake, state residents.

Fifteen hundred sixty-eight of the number of hunting licenses were issued to county residents, 12 statewide, and 38 non-residents.

The regular Saturday night dance at the hall will be held as soon as the show is over. Music for the dance will be furnished by the minstrel show orchestra.

COUNCIL TO DECIDE ON LICENSING ORDINANCES

Regular Monthly Meeting of the Body Held Monday Night

Decision to revise the ordinances concerning licensing, which came up before the council two years ago but never were acted upon, and the writing of a letter to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad asking that the station be left open late at night and early in the morning, constituted the new business at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council, held Monday night in the Council chamber.

The ordinances concerning licensing of property and establishments in town, vendors, could not be agreed upon by members of the council when the subject arose in 1927 and the revised list was tabled. They will be placed before council at the next meeting for approval or disapproval.

The letter to the Baltimore and Ohio was addressed to H. R. Laughlin, division superintendent, Cumberland, and requested that the waiting room of the station remain open for passengers who might wish to travel on train No. 40, eastbound, due at 1:23 a. m., and train No. 3, westbound, due at 6:18 a. m.

Routine business and the passing of the monthly bills occupied the remainder of the meeting. The next regular meeting will be held on Monday, February 3.

RE-TRIAL IS GRANTED FOR GARRETT COUNTY WOMAN

Mrs. Anna McKenzie Has Been in Webster Springs Jail 2 Years

Mrs. Anna McKenzie, formerly of near the Johnson section of Garrett county, who has been in jail at Webster Springs, W. Va., for more than two years, has been granted a re-trial by the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia. She had been convicted of slaying her husband, Thomas McKenzie, and sentenced to life in the penitentiary. McKenzie belonged to an old family of the eastern section of Garrett county and his body was buried at his native place, a few miles west of Frostburg.

The judgment of the lower court was reversed by the Supreme Court, and as the State is not ready for the new trial when court convenes at Webster Springs this week, it will ask for a continuance until the May term and Mrs. McKenzie may be admitted to bail.

Mr. William R. Offutt, of Oakland, appeared for Mrs. McKenzie at the first trial and also prepared the brief and argued the motion for a new trial before the Supreme Court of Appeals.

McKenzie's body was found October 1, 1927, suspended from a bush near his home at Bolair, W. Va. Mrs. McKenzie and Seymour Smith, reported engaged to marry a daughter of the slain man, were charged with murder. Smith was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to eighteen years imprisonment in the West Virginia penitentiary.

Catching Bank Burglars Is a Tough Proposition

Catching bank burglars is a pretty tough proposition, Sheriff W. D. Casteel believes, especially where the burglars are non-existent.

It was reported several days ago that a bank robber was coming in this direction from the neighborhood of Winchester, Va., where he had held up a bank and escaped with several thousand dollars in good currency. The description of the man was furnished and somebody who looked very much like the man wanted was seen on the streets of Oakland and upon investigation the sheriff was about to place him under arrest and take him to jail. The man, however, proved his identity and was allowed to go.

Then on Tuesday morning about 6:45 the burglar alarm on the First National Bank broke loose. Scarcely stopping to properly dress themselves the sheriff and his deputy, Joy Griffith, rushed to the corner of Second and Alder streets with sawed-off shotguns, sure that at last they would be in on a capture.

But in this they were also disappointed, for on the day previous a time-clock repairman had cleaned and oiled the time-lock on the bank vault with the result that it did not move in accord with the other clocks in the system, hence the alarm was automatically released.

Two-Year Old Deer Being Domesticated by N. C. Sanders

A two-year old deer which wandered to the farm of Nelson C. Sanders, near Hutton, during the month of December, and which was caught by Mr. Sanders with very little effort, is being trained and tamed by its captor. The doe was almost completely run down when found by Mr. Sanders and after notifying the game warden he placed the animal in a pen with a calf. The deer is apparently satisfied with its surroundings, according to Mr. Sanders, and is going to make a fine pet.

K. OF P. LODGE VETERAN IS HONORED AT NEWBURG

John McCue, Oakland, Presented with 50-Year Membership Jewel

On Monday evening, January 6, Mr. John McCue, a resident of Oakland, was the guest of honor at the regular meeting of Damon Lodge, No. 5, K. of P., at Newburg, West Va., where on this occasion he was presented with a fifty-year veteran's jewel representing a continuous membership of the organization for half a century.

The presentation of the jewel was made by Mr. Vernon Fortney, Past Grand Chancellor Commander of the State of West Virginia.

Following the presentation of the jewel the membership and the Pythian Sisters connected with the lodge were seated at a banquet in the recreation room of the Newburg M. E. church.

Mr. McCue was warmly congratulated by a large number of those in attendance upon attainment of the highly prized jewel and mark that few live to receive.

As a mark of honor Mr. McCue was accompanied to Newburg by the following members of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias: Henry Lauer, A. G. Gortner, D. W. Walter, Arthur Lawton, E. Townshend, J. H. Loar, Singleton Townshend and P. M. Ramsey.

Mr. McCue became a member of the Newburg lodge when he was quite a young man and engaged as a stonemason by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. The occasion was one enjoyed by all present, more especially by the recipient of the jewel. A number of lodges in various sections of West Virginia were represented at the meeting.

Oakland First Home Attraction of Season Is Well Attended

The Kingwood Bears were victorious in a close and hard fought game of basketbell at Naylor's Hall, Oakland, last night, when they defeated Oakland A. A. 38-28. This was Oakland's opening home attraction and a goodly number were present to see the contest. Kingwood won the first game of the series on their home floor on December 21, 42-25.

Liston and Carroll were the main cogs on the offense of the Kingwood team, while Pollock, McComas and Wolf contributed the majority of the points for Oakland.

In the preliminary game Oakland Flying Eagles defeated a junior team from Terra Alta, 11-7.

The lineup and summary:

Oakland—28		Kingwood—38

Examination of School Children Has Begun.

Examination of school children for minor defects, has been started by Miss Ruth Martin, public health nurse, who assumed her new office on January 2. Pleasant Valley school was the first one visited.

No definite schedule will be followed for visiting the various schools, but teachers will be notified in plenty of time. Examination will be made for defects in eyes, ears, nose, and throat, posture of students, etc.

Parents of the children having defects, will be notified so that they may send them to the family physician for attention.

MUST SETTLE DISPUTE IN THE RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Kempton's Membership Wanted By Both Garrett County and Tucker County, West Va.

A peace-time fight is being waged between Tucker county, West Va., and Garrett county, Md., to decide which chapter—that of Garrett county or that of Tucker county—of the American Red Cross is entitled to an approximate subscription membership of 150, solicited in and around Kempton during the annual Red Cross Roll Call of last year.

It happens that Kempton postoffice and the general store owned and operated by the coal company owning that section of Garrett county and West Virginia, are across the line in West Virginia, while the town proper is in Maryland. The residents vote in Maryland and the children attend the Maryland school. Practically all the males of the community are employed by the West Virginia coal company operating its mines there.

Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Garrett county chairman, and other Red Cross workers feel that the money collected from people in Garrett county should be turned in to the Garrett county chapter and has insisted that the manager of the Eastern Area, National Red Cross, decide in favor of her contention.

Provided "possession is nine points of the law," West Virginia has an advantage over Garrett county because the money has been collected and is now in possession of the Tucker county Red Cross workers.

Kempton Included in Quota

But in making out Garrett county's quota before the drive began, Kempton's population was included in the Garrett county list, and the approximate 150 members are needed to put Garrett county over the top in the drive for 500 members. Three hundred and sixty-one members have been reported to date and the membership which hangs in the balance would more than fill the local quota. During the war and for sometime thereafter, all Red Cross subscriptions from Kempton were given to Garrett county.

One hundred and fifty-eight of the 361 members reported to date are from Oakland, Mrs. Tower has announced. Mrs. Julia Yokum, chairman at Vindex, reports eight members as follows: William Critchon, Jr., Helen Ashby, Jask Tasker, Riley H. Yokum, T. A. Arnold, C. J. Emmert.

Additional members in the Oakland list are Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Burruss, B. H. Sincell, Dr. Ralph Kercheval, George Hanst, Nina Winters, Emma F. Hamili, Ann E. Hamill, Mrs. Truman W. Casteel.

MESHACH BROWNING AS A BOY AND PIONEER HUNTER-TRAPPER

This is the final installment of Mrs. Hinebaugh's article on the life and adventures of Meshach Browning, pioneer citizen of Garrett county.

Meshach usually spent a week or ten days in the wilderness of Meadow Mountain on these hunts and would travel for miles over the rough, rattlesnake-infested hills of the Youghiogheny River trailing a wolf, a catamount, panther or other predatory animal. He killed rattlesnakes by the thousand, but was never bitten by one as his legs were wrapped in heavy ropes made of hay or grass through which their fangs could not sink.

Another Claims His Farm

The latter part of the winter brought a false claimant for his little farm, and while Meshach knew the fellow had no just claim, yet he could not afford to jeopardize the little personal property he had accumulated by litigation, the result being too uncertain. Not finding a place in that immediate neighborhood, they decided to locate in the glades where they would be assured of grass for their stock, for indeed grass grew so luxuriantly in these natural meadows it could be tied over the back of a horse.

Mr. McMullen, whom Meshach suspected of rejoicing over his departure, assisted him with the loan of two horses. There were but few roads—only narrow paths connecting the different settlements, making pack horses the only available means of transportation.

Mary and the little daughter were placed on their Uncle Spurgin's horse, and with Mr. and Mrs. McMullen and Hugh, on horseback, they started for Bear Creek glades. As it was getting late they concluded to stop at the farm of William Waller Hoye, within three miles of their future home. The following morning, after a late breakfast, they started, with Mr. and Mrs. Hoye accompanying them.

The remains of an old cabin that had been partially destroyed by hunters, had to be repaired, as it was destitute of floor, windows, door and chimney. The first thing to greet them was the rattling of a huge snake coiled inside in perfect trim for disputing possession. In a few minutes another was discovered on the outside, but this was a mere incident. When they proposed eating a cold lunch, Mary asked where to find the spring, and being warned to watch for snakes, she took a bucket and calling the dogs, started through a dense thicket of tall weeds. When she entered the path five wolves rushed out, some passing on one side of her and some on the other. She screamed for Meshach to come with his gun, but the weeds were so tall and dense he could not see to shoot and they all escaped.

After dinner the company took their departure except Hugh McMullen, who remained to help them get settled. When the sun began to sink behind the tall pines that were so dense perpetual twilight reigned beneath them, they could see deer and bear walking in the glade leisurely feeding in the cool of the evening.

The trammels of existence in pioneer days, simple as they were, occupied so much of their time they had no leisure for social intercourse. They were denied the pleasure books would have given them in their isolation, for books were few, expensive and difficult to transport. No one in these days can imagine the deprivation of a daily newspaper—one small item out of thousands of comforts and resources at our command. Even the cheer of an open fire, so conducive to dreams and air-castles could not be enjoyed, for time was a veritable Shylock, demanding a strict account of every minute.

Colonel Lynn lived within two miles of Meshach; Mr. Hoye and James Drane within three or four miles; also John McHenry. They did not exchange visits, but waited for circumstances to bring them together, which was not difficult, for the men as they had the opportunities certain demands on each other gave them. One morning Meshach started out for game and finding none traveled on until he reached Meadow Mountain, some fifteen miles away. As usual he had left his hat at home. A heavy rain came up, followed by hail and snow. Bewailing his ill-luck he started home. After traveling for some time he found he was going in a circle, but thinking if it were possible for him to get through a certain laurel thicket before dark he could reach home some time that night, as he knew Mary would be anxious. Coming to his own tracks the third time, he realized how hopelessly confused he was and there was nothing to do but make himself comfortable for the night. In looking for a hollow tree he found two that had fallen across each other, and pulling the bark off constructed a rude shelter. With great difficulty he succeeded in getting a fire started and spent the night, turning first one side and then the other to the fire to dry his clothes.

At dawn he started home, but hearing his dog in a laurel thicket found he had a bear, which Meshach could not resist taking. Dressing the animal he shouldered it and walked until he came to the Cumberland road near Colonel Lynn's farm. It was then twelve o'clock. The old gentleman saw Meshach coming and went to meet him, calling a colored man to saddle a horse. Colonel Lynn took him into dinner and then home. It was estimated the bear weighed at least eighty pounds, which he had carried ten or twelve miles.

Meshach could never have survived forty-four years of such physical abuse if he had not been a man of prodiguous strength and marvelous endurance.

Prepares With His Family To Move

Several seasons intervened while the hunter killed bear, deer and other animals without much variation, when Meshach's mother and step-father came to make them a long visit. In the meantime Meshach was persuaded to dispose of his interests in the glades and return with them to Ohio. Dr. Brooke bought his cattle, hogs and other property that could not be moved, the money to be paid when they were ready to start.

Meshach's plans being completed, not a cent could he collect from Dr. Brooke. There he was, stranded, thrown out of everything, with a wife and four children. His mother was frantic and Meshach realizing he was ruined, fell into the depths of despondency and despair.

Mary saw something must be done, and again she arose to the occasion and proved the rock in a weary land. She went to a neighborhood some five miles distant and bought powder and lead. Returning she gave it to Meshach and begged him to brace up and take a hunt, saying there was nothing to be gained by moping. If they had to begin all over, it was only through concerted effort they could succeed.

Next morning he started early and in four hours had killed three bears, one weigning over four hundred pounds, and returned in time to get two horses and a colored man from Mr. Hoye to go with him for the meat.

Reestablishes His Home

Never having been able to collect anything from Brooke, Meshach bought a fifty-acre lot from him, all in woods, agreeing to pay thirty dollars for property that cost Brooke two dollars.

A mill had been established about ten miles distant, and in order to let Meshach work on their cabin, Mary went to mill. It was a hot day and as the horse was heavily laden she walked most of the way. Pulling off her shoes and stockings, she waded in a stream, but she must have stayed too long in the water, for when she reached home she could scarcely walk. Steadily growing worse, Dr. Brooke was called in and pronounced her ailment as paralysis. Finally the doctor said her case was hopeless.

Colonel Lynn never had any faith in Brooke's pronouncements, and as he was going to Frederick, called on Meshach to get a description of Mary's case and permission to consult Dr. Thomas.

Meshach was so overcome he could scarcely murmur a few words of appreciation for such kindness and thoughtfulness. As soon as Colonel Lynn returned he went immediately to see Mary and feelingly expressed his thankfulness to find her living and gave her the medicine that finally restored her to health.

Hugh McMullen came for a visit and a bear hunt. Meshach leaving the boys in charge of home affairs, he and Hugh went to Little Crossings. Before reaching the camp they killed a deer and seeing so many bear tracks sent the dogs into a thicket. Seven bears ran out on one side and Hugh saw at least a dozen escape on the north side. As they were very tired they went home to find Mr. Spurgin, who advised Meshach to hunt in the glades, which he did, and in two weeks had killed twenty-two deer.

Traps Bears and Kills Deer

Meshach became very proficient in imitating the language of the wild creatures and would often call turkeys to him. One morning he started out to look at his traps and to take a little hunt before breakfast. He found a family of three bears in his traps, killed a deer and a wild turkey that dressed twenty-six puonds. At nine o'clock he was eating breakfast in his cabin.

Stewards Attempt To Train a Pup

Not far from Meshach lived a family by the name of Steward. Being very industrious and thrifty, they would not take time to hunt by day, but Steward and the boys would go after night and by mistake they had killed all their dogs but an old one and an untrained pup that had never seen a bear. They conceived the idea that if the old man would put on the skin of a recently killed bear they could give the pup the necessary initiation in bear hunting. The old dog being experienced and vicious was tied up. Mr. Steward donned the bear skin sewing it in places so it could not come off and betook himself to the meadow. The pup being half afraid capered around snapping at the supposed animal and making a great to-do. But Rover (the old dog) could not look on such a bright and shining mark with equanimity, and making a great bound broke his chain and went leaping toward the bear.

Someone screamed, "Rover is loose!" and the old man sprang to a tree but did not succeed in getting out of Rover's reach. One of the boys being interested in the pup's advancement yelled to his daddy to hold on a little longer, it would be the making of the pup. However, Mrs. Steward, realizing her husband's danger, clubbed the dogs off, but not until the old man was so severely bitten he was confined to the house for several weeks.

Venison and Bear Meat to Baltimore

Meshach had made a trip to Baltimore with venison, bear meat and skins and realized quite a nice profit from them. On one of these excursions, at New Market, he met his brother Jeremiah, whom he had not seen for thirty years.

Several new settlers had come in, among them being Captain Campbell, from Frederick County, and his son-in-law, James Cunningham; Dr. James McHenry, also John McHenry, who settled at Buffalo Marsh. Captain Campbell proposed building a saw mill if Meshach would establish a flour mill, both of which were much needed in the neighborhood, and in six months they were in operation.

A Panther Trailed and Killed

Meshach and Hugh McMullen were a long distance in the woods, and for two or three days without bread and salt, had started home, when they came upon the tracks of a panther that was trailing some deer. Meshach told Hugh that notwithstanding they were both tired and hungry he would like to stop that old woods pirate from killing any more deer. Hugh thought he was too tired to follow him, but in the end they both went. Within two miles they found a deer still warm, covered with leaves and snow, dressed and bled as expertly as a hunter could do it.

Indeed, the panther is a most relentless hunter—all seasons are his and he prowls day and night. As soon as Meshach and Hugh had skinned and hung the deer, they again took his trail and discovered him in a thicket of laurel, perched high on the limb of a pine tree. When the hunters approached he crouched, lashing his tail and prepared to jump on them, his eyes blazing with fury. Meshach did not stand on much ceremony in disposing of the hideous, snarling brute. The first shot brought him down dead. After skinning the animal they had eight miles to walk before reaching home.

When they entered the door announcing their famished condition, Mary told them dinner was waiting. Meshach had always been prejudiced against using opossum for food on account of the rattish-looking tail and ears. Mr. Spurgin had brought one that morning and had asked Mary to cook it. But not until they had nearly finished eating did Meshach inquire what kind of meat she had served. She told him Mr. Spurgin had killed a duck. Presently one of the little children approached Meshach, dangling the tail of the opossum and innocently lisped: "Father, here is the duck's tail."

Hunter Has a Narrow Escape

Two panther hunts followed in succession. On the first one, Meshach unexpectedly came upon his quarry lying by a deer he had just killed. Away he went bounding up a tree, bowed himself and displayed all the signs of battle. Meshach understood too well his attitude and kept at a safe distance. When Meshach fired, the panther sprang up the tree with the agility of a squirrel. Meshach had to reload his gun quickly, not knowing what the animal would do next. He was lying in the fork of a tree, partly shielded by several limbs. Meshach aimed at his heart and fired, but the bullet lodged in the bones of his shoulder, disabling him and causing him to fall fifteen or twenty feet when he caught a limb with his sound forepaw. There he hung while Meshach stood almost paralyzed, having nothing with which to defend himself should the animal fall to the earth. After many efforts the panther succeeded in swinging himself to the limb, and starting to walk towards the trunk of the tree he fell again when the limb broke and down he came. The dog engaged his attention until Meshach found a club. He tried to keep a tree between them when he struck, but the panther was too quick, and when Meshach made another step to get within striking distance the panther wheeled to seize him. By the merest accident the club descended on the panther's head, knocking him down. Meshach stood looking in astonishment at the lucky intervention, when he saw the animal's eyes begin to snap. Then he attempted to stab him with his pocket-knife. The panther sprang to his feet and Meshach beat a quick retreat. When he saw the dog have him by the ear he again took the club and knocking him down beat his head into a pulp. In this battle nearly a quarter of an acre of ground was fought over. The panther measured nearly ten feet.

Family of Eleven Children

Meshach's family in the meantime had been steadily increasing until there were eleven children..

He and one of his sons went to Mr. Fitzwater, who lived near the glades and Meadow Mountain, for a week's hunt. They killed several deer and on Saturday evening the son said he had wounded a doe and he knew she would die, so Meshach started out on Sunday morning to find her. Striking her trail he had followed it but a short distance when he found a panther was also following. Then Meshach turned his attention to the gentleman and went after him with long, quick strides. When he came to level ground he trotted, up hill he walked fast and down hill he ran and kept travelling from one place to another. The panther was hunting and had jumped three times at deer. Meshach followed him up to the Yough glades, through a labarinth of crooks and turns until late in the afternoon he entered the State road, followed it for a mile or two, then left it and commenced hunting again. Meshach pertinaciously following. The chase continued until late in the evening when Meshach came upon a large deer that had been killed near the State road where no one would suspect a panther venturing.

The deer was still warm. Meshach knew that he had him and loosing the dog in a few minutes heard him running at full cry toward a large glade, but as Meshach waited to see him enter the glade all became quiet. He thought the dog had lost the animal. As he stood waiting he heard the dog behind him and found the panther had run back to where he had killed the deer, but the dog was too close, so he entered the State road, ran down it until he came to Major Calomese's fence, jumped on that and ran some distance, then turned back to elude the dog and sprang into a tree where he hid.

Meshach stood in the road, provoked that the dog had lost the trail, as it was nearly night. At last the dog turned back, threw his nose in the air, and Meshach knew he winded the panther and after searching the trees found him hiding among the limbs of a pine. The wind passed too high for the dog to locate him and when the panther peeped around the tree Meshach sent a bullet through his brain.

He hurriedly skinned the animal and cut off his head as evidence to claim his premium, and started for the Calomese farm, two miles distant. Meshach had been traveling at a high rate of speed since early morning, but did not feel tired. When he reached the gate a negro boy ran to tell his master that Mr. Browning was there. Meshach related his route and experiences to Mr. Calomese, who was delighted at his success and said he had traveled about forty miles. Meshach was then fifteen miles from home.

Mrs. Calomese being on a visit to Cumberland, they talked until ten o'clock, then retired.

About midnight the mail boy came along blowing his horn, when the old gentleman had to get up, receive his mail and attend to some papers. By that time not much of the night remained. However, they rested until the cook announced breakfast, after which Meshach hurried away to relieve the anxiety of the Fitzwaters'.

Mrs. Browning Is Crippled

A few more seasons had added their toll to the years that had sped and Mary was riding home from a visit to her oldest daughter when her horse shied at a small boy who saw her coming and atepped behind a tree. Mary was thrown and her spine was dislocated. She was permanently crippled, but she lived three years.

Sometime afterwards Meshach became assessor for Allegany County, and in Cumberland met a Mrs. Mary Smith, who became his second wife. Meshach was living comfortably on his farm until February, 1857, when his second wife was paralyzed and died in a few minutes. He survived her until November, 1859, dying at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mattingly, at Hoyes, Garrett County, Md., where his body was interred.

Hunting Knife Still in Existence

Richard Browning, of Oakland, a great-grandson, has Meshach's old hunting knife, which is not nearly so formidable looking as one would imagine considering the service it rendered. He also has Meshach's Uncle Spurgin's powder horn—a beautifully symmetrical gourd nearly or quite two hundred years old—that looks like a dark brown earthenware bottle.

At the present time Deep Creek Lake, covering 4500 acres, belonging to the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Corporation, covers the beautiful Deep Creek glade between Roman Nose and Meadow Mountains, the scene of so many of Meshach's exploits.

The Suppressed News

By BEATRICE VANDEGRIFT

(Copyright.)

YOUNG Sam Davis had been a reporter on a New York paper for three months and still harbored the idea that the one unforgivable sin in journalism was to come back without a story, sad that newspapers print all the scandal they can get, the worse the better.

One gray, rainy November day, the city editor summoned Sam to his desk and told him that, for want of a better man, he was sending him to cover the burial of the famous bandit who had been hanged that morning.

"Get all the dope you can," he commanded gruffly without looking up from his blue-penciling. "Sob stuff. And for Pete's sake, realize this is news and not shipping notes."

Sam importantly displayed his pass at the prison gates and restlessly waited for the funeral of the notorious bandit who had confessed to twenty-two robberies and eight killings, yet who had shuddered when the court attendant had swatted a fly. Just before his hanging he had given a cold, dispassionate speech on the evils of modern society. He had talked for one hour, holding his condemners spellbound, and significantly stroking his own throat with his delicate white hand.

And now it was Sam's duty to write the ending to his grim story. He shivered a bit with the importance of his assignment.

The funeral cortege, consisting of a group of men who were hired to bury dishonored men, appeared. Sam watched as the interment took place without drama. He talked a bit with the chaplain, but the chaplain knew of no sidelights that might be interesting. The party at last dispersed and Sam was the only reporter left. He stood in the shadow of the prison, defeated and disgruntled. He felt he simply could not return to his paper without a story.

As he was about to go, a taxi drew up and a woman got out. She was muffled in black with a thick veil over her face. She walked hurriedly to the new-made grave and gently laid a sheaf of pale pink roses on the raw earth. She stood a moment, her head bowed, with the cold November wind stirring her veil, then she entered the cab and drove on. Sam followed in hot haste. Something exciting was breaking at last!

The chase led him to a quiet and respectable street back in the city. In the window of the house that the woman had entered was a doctor's sign. After a few moments of hesitation in which Sam tried to summon a brave air, he rang the bell. The woman answered it, a numb, frightened look in her eyes.

"Good afternoon," began Sam briskly. "May I come in? I represent the Daily Press and I want to obtain an interview. I saw you at Arnold's grave a while ago."

The woman pressed a hand to her white lips, but motioned Sam to enter, leading him to a cozy living room with a low fire on the hearth. A little girl came in once during the interview to announce that her daddy had come in but had gone out again. A doctor, surmised Sam, as the sign in the window indicated. But what was this quiet, pretty woman's connection with the notorious bandit?

He broached the subject bluntly, as he imagined an experienced reporter would.

"Just what was your interest in Arnold, madam?" he inquired, looking through his pockets for a pencil.

"I was his sister," she answered in a low, unsteady tone. "I hadn't seen him for years, since he ran away from home. Even my husband did not know that I was his sister. But I couldn't let him be buried alone, even in dishonor." Tears welled in her eyes. "I know I risked a great deal by going to his grave," she added. "My husband's reputation, my children's future. The press is a very powerful thing," she smiled wanly, "and I beg you not to print this story."

"I'm sorry," refused Sam. "I can't suppress news that belongs to the public. It wouldn't be fair."

He left the house, haunted by the look of despair in the woman's eyes but elated at the thought that he had a scoop. No other paper would be carrying the story.

He dashed into the editorial rooms and made for the city editor's desk, blurting his tale with youthful enthusiasm. The city editor tipped back in his chair and eyed him without emotion as he talked.

Then when Sam stopped for breath he spoke.

"Never mind it," he commanded. "Kill it, Davis. Forget it. It would make hot reading all right, but this paper isn't in the business of ruining respectable women's reputations and blasting kids' futures. Arnold's sister, you say? Forget it. The dame you saw wasn't anybody."

THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 3:1-4:11 (Print Matt. 3:13-4:11).

GOLDEN TEXT—This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Was Baptized.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Facing His Life Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Triumphing Over Temptation.

I. The Baptism of Jesus, the King (3:13-17).

While the forerunner was discharging his office, the King emerged from His seclusion at Nazareth and demanded baptism at John's hands. The incongruity of this demand with the purpose of baptism brought from John a protest, but upon Jesus' satisfactory explanation, John baptized Him. Touching Christ's baptism, note:

1. Its significance. (1) Negatively. a. It did not mean His mere obedience to the commandment of God, because His entire life had been lived within the will of God. There was not a moment in His life but what was lived fully in accordance with the Father's will. b. Not because He had sinned, for He was absolutely sinless, harmless, undefiled—separate from sinners. This separation was so complete that even the devil could find no occasion against Him (John 14:30).

(2) Positively. Its significance is found in harmony with the central purpose of His coming into the world, which was to secure for His people salvation through death and resurrection. This act was the official entrance upon His work. It was an act of consecration on His part to the work of saving His people through sacrifice.

While baptism is a sinner's ordinance, Christ was baptized not because He had sinned, but because He took the place of sinners to be a substitute for them. In this He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him (II Cor. 5:21).

2. Approval from the opened heavens (vv. 16, 17).

Immediately following His consecration to His work, the heavens were opened and the Spirit came and abode upon him, followed by words of approval from the Father.

II. The Temptation of Jesus, the King (4:1-11).

Being thus commissioned for His work, His ability to meet the one whose destruction He had come to accomplish, must be demonstrated (Heb. 2:14). This temptation was the opening battle of the dreadful conflict between Christ and Satan. In this struggle note:

1. The battleground—wilderness of Judea (v. 1).

The first man was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings, and failed. The second Man was tempted in a bare wilderness, and gloriously triumphed.

2. The method of attack (vv. 3-9).

Since, as the Redeemer of mankind, Christ sustains a threefold relationship, the Son of Man, the Son of God, and as Messiah, each one was made a ground of attack. (1) As Son of Man. This was a test of the reality of His humanity to demonstrate as to whether the humanity which He obtained through the virgin birth was real. The appeal was made to the instinct of hunger. Hunger is natural and sinless. (2) As the Son of God. It was a test as to whether this personality which had taken upon itself humanity, was divine. The devil quoted from a Messianic psalm to induce Jesus to presume upon God's care. God does really care for His own, but to neglect common precautions to do the uncalled for thing, just to put God's promise to a test, is to sin and to fail. (3) As the Messiah. Christ's mission as the Messiah was to recover this world from the devil. The devil offered to surrender to Him on the simple condition that He adopt his method, thus obviating the necessity of the cross.

3. The defense—the Word of God (vv. 4, 7, 10).

Christ met the enemy each time and repulsed him with "It is written." Each time he quoted from Deuteronomy—the book which the higher critics would discredit as unreliable. Jesus had enough confidence in it to use it in this the most crucial hour of the world's history.

4. The issue (v. 11).

The enemy was completely routed. The strong man was bound, so that the spoiling of his house was possible.

To Secure Salvation

"But what can mortal man do to secure his own salvation?" Mortal man can do just what God bids him do. He can repent and believe. He can arise and follow Christ as Matthew did.—W. Gladden.

For the Millions

Christ appeals to the soul as light appeals to the eye, as truth fits the conscience, as beauty speaks to the esthetic nature.—The American Magazine.

IMPORTANT FOR PEOPLE TO KEEP MOUTH HEALTHY

Is Accomplished by Practicing Certain Rules of Cleanliness

Asked to outline the plan of work for the Division of Oral Hygiene recently established in the State Department of Health, Dr. Richard Clay Leonard, Chief of the Division, said: "First of all you want to remember that oral hygiene means mouth health. So far as the individual is concerned, mouth hygiene implies the care that keeps the mouth—with special reference to the teeth—in good health. This is accomplished by practicing certain rules of cleanliness; by special attention to the diet and by the early repair of defects or decay found in the teeth.

"The activities of the division will be limited to children who are getting ready for school and to children already in school. The aim will be threefold—preventive to protect the teeth from the encroachment of decay; corrective, to make necessary repairs; and educational, to advise and instruct children and their mothers as to the diet that will help most to build strong healthy teeth and the care that will keep them healthy and resistant to decay.

"To have healthy teeth you must have a healthy start. You have to go back to the diet and health of the mother to insure healthy teeth for the child. In order that it may help in the formation of strong, healthy teeth, the diet of the mother must be rich in lime salts, that is, in tooth or bone forming minerals. The foods that are especially rich in such substances include milk, butter, cheese and other dairy products, oranges and other fruits, tomatoes and green leafy vegetables. Such foods are necessary not only for forming strong healthy teeth, but for keeping them in good condition all through life.

"Teeth are not always perfectly formed. Often there are slight defects in the structure of a tooth when it comes through the gum. These defects—tiny cracks or crevices in the enamel—offer an easy place for decay-causing germs to start their work. As soon as these tiny imperfections are discovered they should be remedied. A child of three or four years can have such defects repaired with little or no trouble, no pain and little expense. Such corrective work will insure the keeping of the first or 'baby' teeth until the regular time for 'shedding' them. It is of the utmost importance that these baby teeth be looked after with as much care as is given to the second or 'permanent' teeth. A young child's mouth should be carefully examined and if necessary, treated at least once a year by a competent dentist.

"The division of Oral Hygiene plans to continue the school clinics already in existence and to extend the service in other counties. These clinics will be for pre-school children as well as for children already in school."

WE'RE BACK NUMBERS!

Arthur Brisbane, nationally known journalist whose syndicated material reaches millions of Americans each week, compares unfavorably the American with the communist method of handling the farm problem.

The Moscow government, he says, is preparing to spend $420,000,000 of "real money" in promoting the welfare of the farmer, and that it is manufacturing tractors and fertilizers for the farmers in state-owned factories, instead of permitting the wicked capitalists to do this in privately owned plants, as we backward and unintelligent Americans do.

The fact Brisbane overlooks is that the Moscow government is not planning to spend his money, or provide the allegedly cheap tractors and fertilizers for the farmers at all. The Moscow masters are now engaged in taking the land away from the peasants, converting their holdings into state-owned farms, and reducing the farmers to a status of serfs from which even czardom lifted them by imperial ukase. The money is to be spent and the equipment provided to operate farms to produce revenues to maintain in power the million communists who now own Russia.

Strange it is that prominent Americans find so much to admire in a governmental system which makes the citizen a slave to the Russian political machine that has set out to own and operate both public and private property, and which keeps itself in power by free use of the bayonet, the jail, the noose, the exile camp and complete suppression of liberty of speech and of the press.

It is no longer considered original, however, to find any merit in the American way of doing things, and journalists who wish to be considered heavy thinkers find it necessary to pretend to believe that socialists and communists are progressive and that American methods and politcial doctrines are outworn and reactionary.

RESPONSIBILITY

One reads the following dispatch from Urbana, Ill.: "A banker who stole $100,000, and a chicken thief who pilfered 15 pullets, were taken to the same penitentiary yesterday.

"John H. Thornburn, former president of the Urbana Banking Company, who confessed to the embezzlement of $100,000 from the bank, will serve from one to ten years. He was taken to Chester penitentiary on the same train with Coy Leach, of Penfield, Ill., the chicken thief, who was sentenced to serve from one year to life."

The mind leaps to the idea of injustice. And yet the injustice may be less than it seems to be on the surface. The banker may have lived a long and useful life. The deed for which he is suffering may have been the first step and last serious misstep of his life. The chicken thief may be an habitual criminal, one who has preyed on society for a generation. One needs all the facts to judge injustice.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

By HARRIET SAMUEL

With the Christmas holidays at an end, Congress reconvened on Monday. The session, it is prophesied, will run until June or July, since a heavy legislative program confronts both houses, with the tariff bill and prohibition enforcement the principal features.

The fight to keep Senator Robert M. La Follette off the Senate Finance committee will probably be carried to the floor of the Senate. The youthful senator from Wisconsin is backed by the Republican Progressives, while the Old Guard is opposing him. Senator Goff of West Virginia, also a candidate for the appointment, outranks Senator La Follette in seniority and under the usual procedure would have been assigned to the vacancy. The appointment of Senator Sackett of Kentucky as Ambassador to Germany, however, leaves two vacancies. Hence an interesting fight is expected.

Senator Grundy of Pennsylvania, who but a short time ago, just before his appointment to the Senate, was being grilled by the Lobby Investigating committee, has given the Senate a lesson in political ethics. When the roll was called on the question of raising the duty on wool yarn, of which he is a manufacturer, the Senator replied, "I am interested in the industry which is sheltered under this paragraph. Therefore I would like to withhold my vote on the amendment."

The Senator's action has caused quite a bit of comment and also speculation as to whether in the future his example will be emulated by his fellow members of the Senate, when legislation in which they are personally interested is up for consideration.

The War Department appropriation bill reported to the House on Tuesday provides for improvements at Arlington cemetery to link in with the new memorial bridge and the restoration of the Lee Mansion.

The memorial bridge, which will cost $15,000,000, will make necessary changes in the road system at Arlington costing approximately $400,000. The bill carries approximately $110,000 for Confederate-head stones.

The amount appropriated here-to-fore for the restorations of the Lee Mansion in Arlington cemetery has been $100,000, and $71,500 will be needed to complete it. It is estimated that $38,500 will be required for the interior furnishings, many of which have already been purchased and many have been donated. The building and its surroundings, including the slave quarters, will be restored to the condition they were in at the time of the Civil War.

President and Mrs. Hoover entertained the American delegates to the London Naval Arms Conference, their wives and the Rear Admiral who will act as technical advisers, at a farewell breakfast at the White House on Tuesday. The delegation left Washington on a special train on Thursday morning and sailed from New York that evening.

Charter, Indicative of Record, Received During Past Week

Five years of continuous existence was achieved by Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, on December 31, 1929, and the members are now entering upon their sixth year of activity, according to the scoutmaster. The charter to further conduct a troop of Boy Scouts for the sixth consecutive year was received during the past week, showing a large "V" in the background, indicative of their record.

The troop was formed in 1924 by Rev. A. J. Torrey, at that time rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal church, who laid the foundation of the organizaton as a local institution. Through his leadership the Oakland troop made advancement and when he was succeeded by Scott W. Shirer as scoutmaster, the troop remained active. Rev. Paul G. Linaweaver served as leader for two or three months before accepting the pastorship of a church in Washington, and the present scoutmaster has served slightly more than one year.

Thirty-five of the forty-three members of the troop were present at this meeting.

Ralph Kahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kahl, Oakland, joined the troop at its recent meeting. This addition will bring the roster to forty-four members when he has passed his tenderfoot requirements.

BIG SHIPMENT OF LIQUOR FROM MARYLAND SEIZED

West Virginia Authorities Grab Clarksburg-Bound Cargo

The second large consignment of liquor destined for Clarksburg and environs to fall into officers' hands was seized Thursday morning about 3 o'clock on the Northwestern turnpike, east of Grafton at Thornton bridge, and Frank Fredman and Russell Romano, both of Clarksburg, were lodged in the Grafton jail.

In the Ford car which the raiding officers blocked across the highway were three 10-gallon kegs of moonshine. Clarence Duckworth, a State prohibition officer, State Trooper H. K. Debendarfer and Constable Joe Bolinger made the seizure.

The officers waited more than an hour for the oncoming car, on which a tip had been received about midnight. Because of the narrow one-way bridge, alleged accomplices of the runners were unable to pass the raiders and get word of the trap to Romano and Fredman, the constable said.

Cargo Taken on at Maryland Line

It was learned that the cargo was taken on near the West Virginia-Garrett county line, which is said to be a frequent source of supply for the section of Clarksburg and Grafton. Both the liquor and car were confiscated and the men lodged in jail.

State agents in West Virginia made their first big haul late Monday night when the seized a Chevrolet coach near Thornton, with a cargo of 40 gallons. Two men arrested were taken to Fairmont jail for a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Eddy. The liquor is said to have had its origin also in Maryland.

Mrs. Ilda Coddington spent a few days in town with her father, who has been quite ill.

When Emily Ran Away

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

"HEAVENS above, how sick I get of this ride!" and Emily Richmond frowned in disgnat as the crowded trolley car lurched along the rails. "Week in, week out, morning and night—banging on to a strap or wedged in between others."

Then her brown eyes widened and the frown lifted as the car came to an abrupt halt at the drawbridge and Emily caught a glimpse of breakwater and sea and sails on a far horizon. It was always that way on the ride to and from the office where Emily earned good money as a skilled typist. That momentary sight of the sound caught at whatever wanderlust lived in Emily's city-raised heart.

And this morning when she was on her way to give a decided "No" to Peter William. Oh, to get away from it all! To sail and sail and sail—

Deep down somewhere in Emily's heart a tiny voice whispered, "Why not?" Why not take her savings and fare forth into some strange place and seek adventnre?—just once before she grew too old and settled for romance. Peter wasn't offering her romance. No, indeed. Just ordinary, stolid matrimony.

And probably she herself did not realize how much her dread of seeing the look in Peter's face when she refused him had to do with her scheme.

That was how it happened that on that particular morning the office of Horton & Hastings was minus its star typist. Nor did any of the puzzled force picture Emily as she actually was—hurrying first of all to the bank and then to the station; sending a telephone message or two; buying a ticket to the neighboring big city; and, finally settling back in the train with a current magazine, a box of chocolates and a shrug of unconcerned shoulders. Peter felt sure she was ill, and kept impatient tabs on the clock until the noon hour arrived and he could telephone in privacy to Emily's boarding house.

Then when he did he turned white. "Miss Richmond," said Emily's landlady acidly, "had sent an expressman for her trunks!"

Life for Emily had become interesting at last. A modest room in a moderately priced hotel; breakfast as late as she pleased and a varied menu to choose from; sight-seeing tours through the shops; matinees and concerts galore. Just what would happen when the savings of ten years were gone she did not inquire.

Then, oddly enough, so inconsequential a thing as a heavy downpour brought the first tinge of regret to Emily. Shut indoors through a thrifty desire to spare a new suit she had recklessly lavished half a month's salary on, she read steadily for several hours. Then impulsively she threw the book across the bed.

Love—love—love! Was there nothing else to write about? Wasn't there anything else worth while?

An hour later and Emily, driven by sheer boredom out into the storm, took refuge from the penetrating chill of sleety rain in a huge moving picture palace. Settling down in the all but absolute darkness, she gave herself up to watching, at first half-heartedly, then with more interest, the picture on the screen. Strange to say, there was just a reminder of Peter in the stalwart hero. Absurd though it was, under the circumstances, Emily's heart beat a trifle faster.

The story progressed, the plot thickened and resolved, and at last the heroine melted into the Peter-like hero's arms. Emily heaved a tiny sigh. At that moment, out of the darkness at her side, a masculine hand took hold of her arm.

Like a flash Emily leaped to her feet, squeezed past the unpardonably impudent person at her side with never a glance and rushed out into the rain. Then she drew a long breath. She had heard of strangers attempting such familiarities, but had never supposed such things could happen to her. If Peter had been there! But then it was only to lone women that a thing of that sort occurred. Suddenly Emily's eyes filled. That was what she was—"a lone woman in a strange city."

And there came to Emily a longing for the dingy old office, with Jim, the office boy, lounging outside the rail, and Peter working away at his desk over in the corner and her typewriter before her. Work and companionship—why, they were worth more than shopping tours and loneliness, moving pictures and unprotectedness!

"I—I say, Emily, I didn't mean anything when I touched you in there—"

"Peter!" Emily could not believe her ears nor yet her eyes, although surely this man at her side was the man she hadn't wanted to marry.

"Yes, dear," said Peter shamefully. "Here I am. I hunted up the expressman who took your trunk and traced you to the city and found your name on the hotel register. And, oh, perhaps I was unpardonably curious, but when you realize, it was because I love you, Emily! Today I followed you into the theater and after a while got a seat at your side, although I kept my head turned so you would not recognize me. Then at the end your sigh was too much for me. Oh, Emily, when are you coming back?"

Emily slipped her arm through Peter's. "When is the next train, dear?" she asked huskily.

PUBLIC SCHOOL GRADUATES IN COUNTIES SHOW GAIN

Statement of Department of Education Says Increase in 1929 over Previous year Is 570

Last year's record of the county white elementary schools showed an increase of graduates and a decrease in the number of failures as compared with 1928, according to a statement issued Saturday by the State Department of Education.

The number of graduates was 9,928—4,742 youths and 5,186 girls—an increase of 570 over 1928.

"If the school population were stationary," the statement continued, and every pupils completed a grade each year and remained to the end of the elementary school course in a county having seven grades, the maximum possible number of graduates for each one hundred elementary school pupils enrolled would be 14.3, and in a county having eight grades 12.5.

Variation In Counties

"The various counties having seven grades ranged from 12.7 graduates in Cecil to 8.4 in Calvert for each one hundred white elementary school pupils enrolled in 1929, and for the eight grade counties the variation from 8 in Washington to 7.1 in Anne Arundel.

"From 1928 to 1929 the number and per cent of elementary school graduates increased in all except eight of the counties. Cecil, Frederick, Montgomery, Garrett, St. Mary's, Worcester and Somerset showed large increases in both the number and per cent of boys and girls graduated. On the other hand, Wicomico, Talbot, Queen Anne's, Baltimore, Harford and Charles counties lowered their rank appreciably because of a decrease in number and per cent of graduates. Baltimore, Calvert and Howard counties are the only ones in the State in which the number and per cent of boy graduates exceed the number of girl graduates.

"Accompanying an increase in the number of graduates is a decrease in the number and per cent of pupils in the white elementary schools who were not promoted. In 1923 there were 22,021 pupils not considered by teachers ready to undertake the work of a higher grade By 1929 this number had been reduced to 14,756, or 14 per cent of the white elementary school pupils enrolled.

"The disparity between failures of boys and girls continues to the advantage of the girls. The per cent of boys who failed in 1929 is practically the same as the per cent of girls who failed in 1923—just over 17 per cent. In 1923, over 25 per cent of the boys were not promoted. There are, therefore, 8.5 out of each 100 in 1929 who were ready for work in a higher grade who in 1923 would have been repeaters. In 1929 just over eleven out of each 100 girls were not promoted, which is over six fewer than in 1923.

Concerns Problem Children

"There will always be some failures among pupils who are out of school for long periods during the year for illness of employment and among mentally handicapped children who cannot do the work planned for the regular classes. Few of the counties have thus far found it possible to organize special classes for these problem children, largely because they are scattered over the county.

"The percentage of failures among the counties varies for boys from 8.8 in Frederick to 25.3 in Calvert, while for girls the range is from 7 per cent in Frederick and Cecil to 15.8 in Baltimore county. From 1928 to 1929 decreases in the number of failures are especially marked in Frederick, Somerset, Howard, Montgomery and Garrett counties."

Inventory-itia.

Betty and Andalusia, the Gold Dust twins of the Oakland Pharmacy, were on their ears the early part of the week. They had a touch of inventory-itis and were looking at all the bottles in the store for a remedy. It is doubtful if they found any cure until the last bottle had been taken from the shelves, polished and replaced. Dr. Pip's painless pills for painful people, Lydia's vegetable compound, Cod's liver toner, Andalusia's panacea for all aches, and even Betty's hemorrhage eliminator, were all tasted.

The pair got so disgusted before it was over that they went into a conference in the furnace room and composed the following spasm:

It's six of this and three of that;
We've too much of this on hand.
Here's stuff galore; what's this for?
There's enough to furnish a band.

It's this time of year
That all us clerks fear—
It's just the old annual story:
Taking down marking down putting it back—
We'll soon be through—inventory.

Tub Contestants Taking Shape

The first leg of the journey in the bathtub singing contest is now underway with all contestants getting in shape for final judgment.

Some sing like calves according to inspector Kerins while others seem to be getting along swimmingly. On one of his preliminary rounds Jim Kerins said William Gibson was singing "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" in a haunting manner—there was just the ghost of a resemblance to the original air.

The new entries in the contest include Frank Smouse, Max Jarboe, Cecil Smith, Wade Hinebaugh, Jesse Ashby, Gilbert Yutzy, Bob Hoffman, Harry Stemple, Bill Whorton, Wellington Yutzy, Henry Lauer and Willum Frazee.

Bobby Hoffman went to sleep in the tub the other day, kicked the stopper out and when he awoke he thought he was on the Sahara Desert, so he started to sing the "Desert Song," and just in time, too, for Inspector Kerins was putting his earphones to the keyhole at the moment he began.

The Inspector will have to call again to hear Jesse Ashby, for at the crucial moment he lost the soap as he was on the strains of "Mother, May I Go Out to Swim?" and the noise that followed as he made continuous dives for the non-floater sounded just like so much blub-blub-ti-oh. Kerins at first thought it was Helen Kane in there.

Wellington Yutzy was singing his awan song; Henry Lauer was practicing the notes of "Where the Reiver Shannon Flows" and Cecil Smith was doing "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" with whistling accompaniment by the radiator plug.

Wade Hinebaugh was putting forth all his basso profundo on "Old Man River." Willum Frazee went waltzing through the "Su-wan-nee River" and took all high notes on Fox-trot.

Harry Stemple wasn't ready to give his selection but was caught by Col. Bell last Sunday afternoon on the banks of Broderick's Run practicing for the event.

A Marvel in The Bathtub

* * *

The contest is due to end on Saturday night at twelve o'clock so that all who want to enter the contest may do so and not have to take any extra baths. Just send the name of the musical selection to Inspector Kerins and the time he is to call at the keyhole and you will be judged with the rest.

H. C. Sincell says he doesn't give a whoop for singing in the bathtub, but if there is a contest for sleeping in the bathtub full of hot water he will run anybody a race and come out head first, with his hair dry.

International News For Young People

By LUCY MEACHAM THRUSTON

Two things particularly in this Christmas-New-Year's season of 1929-30 make us realize how closely the world is being bound together. One is the broadcasting from continent to continent of Christmas music and the other is the fact that, barring the naval parley in London, the major questions of the early days of the New Year are mattera of the Far East. As for the music one longs for an exulting expression like "All the world linked together by golden notes," or some almilar phrase. Sitting in a home of the United States those tuning in could hear over their radios programs originating in England, Holland, Germany. They might also have the knowledge that the Christmas eve music from Madison Square, New York, had been available for America, Europe, and Australia. And this was Christmas music for cheer and goodwill, of peace on earth.

Of the two major questions in the Far East the fact that one, the dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria, is to be settled by pacific means is causing international rejoicing. This question affected not only Russia, China, Japan, but had tentacles which might draw in other nations. Russians had mobilized on the Manchurian border, so had Manchurians, Russian airships had bombarded Manchurian towns and yet it has been stated that no conquests will be claimed, no reprisals asked. A conference will be held in Moscow to consider questions between the two nations, the status quo of the railway has been restored, and full resumption of diplomatic relations is expected. This triumph for peace is a cause of rejoicing. The other question of the Far East is being watched with anxiety. India is asking of England the status of Dominion, parallel with that of Canada and South Africa. This there is willingness to grant after "working towards it," but the latest word is that Ghandhi and thirty other leaders of Indians are asking even more severance and independence than this would bring. England holds to her overlordship, Conservatives and Liberals alike taking this view. The Labor party is on the side of Indian demands, certainly so far as Dominion status is concerned. Ghandhi and those with him threaten passive resistance if the points they present are not granted. What will be the outcome? And India's anxiety is that of the world at large. The peace which comes with the knowledge that two great countries, China and Russia, are adjusting their difficulties by pacific means is the peace of other nations also. Both links of goodwill Christmas music and thrill of rejoicing and of anxiety are proof of the close drawing together of the interests of the earth.

The Japanese delegation to the naval parley to be held in London and which visited the United States is now in London. They were officially welcomed by Sir Ronald Lindsay who has recently been appointed British Ambassador to the United States.

In response to the request of the President made in his opening address to Congress the House has passed a resolution for a commission to be appointed which will investigate conditions in India.

Growers Advised To Buy Certified Seed Potatoes Now. Half of 1929 Crop Already Sold

While 40,488 bushels of certified seed potatoes were produced in Maryland during the past season, heavy demands from out-of-State buyers promised to exhaust the supplies before all of the growers of the State are supplied according to Dr. R. A. Jehle, plant apathologist for the University of Maryland Extension service.

Final inspections of potatoes grown for seed in this State were completed by Dr. Jehle some weeks ago and so far over 15,000 bushels have been sold, principally to New Jersey growers. In all, there were 580 acres under supervision, 200 of which, however, were disqualified for various reasons. The 103 growers engaged in producing seed for certification will have available for sale, 29,567 bushels of Irish Cobblers, 4,387 bushels of Russet Rurals, 2,360 bushels of Green Mountains, 2,330 bushels of White Rurals, 1,665 bushels of Jersey Redskins, and 179 bushels of several other varities.

Maryland potato growers who desire high quality certified seed for next spring's planting should not delay in making purchases, according to Dr. Jehle. If they do they may be forced to look elsewhere for seed that probably will be no better in quality than the Maryland-grown stock. Demand for the Maryland supply, it is said, is particularly keen in New Jersey and Virginia where the quality of the Maryland product is well known. Nearly half of the present crop is already sold.

Many State growers have been partial to Maine potatoes in past years says Dr. Jehle, but there is no good reason for their preference, especially since certification has resulted in the production of equally good quality in this State. The Eastern Shore, it is said, is producing a small-sized cobbler equally as good as any northern grown seed and in many respects it is better.

"I'll Never Let You Know"

By LILLIAN M. MOSSELLER

(Copyright.)

"THE male of the human species has not the capacity to receive a woman's love—therefore she must have a God."

This astounding observation was made by Dolly Simpson, so designated by her family and friends ever since she arrived in this world weighing only three pounds. She was taken to the hospital and put into an incnhator.

Because she was an incuhator child —as some one had hrightly remarked —she had heen incubating ideas ever since. At the age of twenty-six she was quite successfully incuhating plays for her mother and the "talkies," while I directed them. It was a new game for us—from the legitimate—to the "talkies"—and she should have heen quite happy over our success. Bnt was she?

She sat huddled in a very small corner of a very large armchair in her Fifth avenue apartment, gazing over the dust-colored tree tops of Central park.

"What good is charm, I'd like to know, if it does not hold the fidelity of the man one loves?" She looked at me inquiringly.

"Perhaps he is not the right man for yon," I suggested.

"I know why," she continued, ignoring my remark. "Because I let him know it—I wanted to have the satisfaction of expressing my love—else why love? I visioned us basking in the mutual glory of our love for each other—only it didn't happen that way. He used my love—used it to satisfy his vanity. I learned that he continued his armours with others who came hefore me. He is a Lothario to them all," she smiled.

"Perhaps he isn't worth loving," I longed to suggest, hecause I knew the man in question. But I knew that her retort would be:

"No man is." And I did not care to be included in her generalizations. It was not capacity to receive her love—that I lacked—it waa opportnnity.

"I was premature in my acceptance of him," she mnsed. "I should have used the proper gulle man demands of a woman—I shonld have kept him guessing and miserahle."

"I sm sure he loves yon," I consoled.

Again the ignored me.

"I was one of those hahies suggested hy Maeterlinck—waiting to he born. Only, I couldn't wait—I was overeager—my parents weren't ready for me, hut I slipped in on them anyway. A premature impulse—some people are that way all through life—never waiting nntil the time is ripe hnt nnfortunately acting on impulses. It is a form of impatience, I suppose." She sighed. "Somehow I cannot reconcile myself to ..ving Bill up to his philandering. Yon never philander—never wander away—do yon, Harvey?" She knew why.

"You are so stahl.. Why isn't Bill like yon?" She stared at me unexpectedly. It seemed almost an effort on he" part to speak of Bill again, which was unusual. Her mind was evidently running a douhle channel.

"Well, old Bill, I think I shall have to call a halt. I have never liked the idea of managing a man, hut men want to he manaed—they deny it verhally, hnt if their wives and sweethearts don't nse gulle and artifice on them they tnrn to women who will. So here goes. I can't lose you, Bill." So saying, she arose and went over to her desk. Entertaining for me—what? She wrote a short note, then gave it to me to read.

"Yon are an old friend," she stated. "So I am going to let you in on this little drama of life." She smiled mysteriously as she watched me read.

"Dear Bill:

I have found thnt our love is a mistake.

Good-hy forever.

DOLLY SIMPSON."

She called a messenger hoy.

"Poor Bill," she sighed. "Stick around, Harvey, and watch the fireworks."

Feeling rather uncomfortahle hut curious, I sat in a corner in the hreakfast room. I had not long to wait.

There was an imperative knocking at the door.

She opened it. "Why did yon come?" she demanded angrily.

Bill made a vain attempt to take her in his arms. I heard him say: "Because I love yon! Why did yon write that note?"

But she soon sent him off with convincing finality.

When he had gone she came into the hreakfast nook and sat heside me in the dark. I was too miserahle to speak.

She had charmed him, all right. I must make a show of heing pleased for her sake.

"Well, he is yours, Dolly."

She was crying softly, I exclaimed in surprise. For she was not the crying kind.

"Oh, Harvey, can't yon aee it is yon, I want?"

My throbhing, acbing arms went around her. After a moment she drew back to get her hreath and said in a tremnlous voice:

"Bnt I'll never let yon know it! I'll never let yon know it!"

SHIP'S PASSENGERS AT SEA TALK HOME OVER TELEPHONE

Top: President Gifford of the A. T. and T. Co., Federal Radio Commissioners, ship line officials and newspaper men inaugurating ship to shore telephone service. Bottom left: Commodore H. A. Cunningham, commanding officer of the Leviathan, who opened the service. The Leviathan several hundred miles out at sea.

Progressive America, not satisfied with talking hy telephone on land, snanning the ocean, and from moving airplanes, can now talk to ships at sea.

Picture a gigantic ocean liner plowing thro gh the waves mountains high, hundreds of miles from shore, with passengers ahoard, maintaining telephone conversations with friends and husiness associates on land. This sounds incredihle, hut it is a true statement of facts nevertheless.

Telephone service hetween the Leviathan, queen of the American merchant marine and the nearly 20,000,000 telephones connected with the Bell System was recently inaugurated. Since that time the ahip's passengers have availed themselves of the opportunity of communicating with their homeland while en route to or returning from Europe.

Ship to shore telephone service was opened hy Walter S. Gifford, President af the American Telephono and Telegraph Company, in a conversation with Commodore H. A. Cunningham of the Leviathan. Members of the Federal Radio Commission, naval officers, representatives of the Department of Commerce, shipping heads, and newspaper and press association executives also talked from New York to Commodore Cunningham and others on the Leviathan. Congressman Frederick A. Britten talking from Washington also conversed with the Levia than's commander.

In opening the service President Gifford said:

"Telephone service with ships at sea is new. But like all such developments in telephony, we expect that it will spread from one ship to another until within a few years what is now a novelty will he a commonplace, and people will think no more of calling a friend on any ship at sea and anywhere at sea that the ship may he than they now do of telephoning from one city to another."

U. S. CAPITOL SWITCHBOARD SERVED BY 2,000 TELEPHONES

First Telephone Installed in House of Representatives for Trial Fifty Years Ago. Now Make 27,000 Calls Daily Over System

The U. S. Capitol switchboard showing operators establishing connections. Insert, Mrs. Harriott G. Daley, veteran chief operator.

Congress does not always approve of the many projects submitted to it as being useful for carrying on the affairs of government. But one service that this body of law makers finds useful and which waa installed on approval, is the telephone.

Fifty years ago when the telephone system was first being estahlished in Washington, the officials of the National Telephonic Exchange Company, predecessors of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, asked the privilege of installing a telephone in the Capitol on trial.

Several months later William H. Barnard, secretary of the company wrote Congressman L. P. Morton, later vice-president of the United States, asking if the use of the telephone at the House of Representatives was satisfactory and, if so, if he would please pass for payment the hill of $12.50 then pending.

Following this letter came the request for the installation of an additional telephone in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms. A short time later a private line connecting the secretary of the Senate with the pnblic printer was provided.

Individual telephones and private lines served the Capitol and House of Representatives for several years. Then on Decemher 2, 1897, a one-operator's position switchhoard with thirty telephones in service was installed in the Capitol for the use of the Senate. The first telephone switchboard system in the House was placed in operation July 21, 1898, at which time there were fifty-one telephones in service.

These two private branch exchange systems were operated respectively for the Senate and House of Representatives until 1901, when a four-position switchboard was installed and the service of both the Senate and the House was supplied from one system. Subsequently the size of this switchboard was increased to twelve operators' positions. In 1925 it became apparent that it was necessary to provide more adequate equipment. The new switchhoard waa placed in service November 28, 1925, with 1,603 telephones in operation. Thia numher has now increased to 1,916. More than 27,000 calls are made daily from this system.

KEEPING BABY WELL IS PROBLEM AT THIS TIME

Health Department Tells How to Build Up Infant's Resistance

"Digestive troubles and colds are two dangers from which babies should be safeguarded at this time of the year," Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said recently. "The best ways to build up a baby's resistance to disease are these:

"First—Through regular medical supervision. Have your doctor see the baby at regular intervals—at least once a month until the baby is six months old; then every two months for the next six months, and after that every two or three months until the child is two or three years old. Remember, we are talking about the well baby. Don't wait until the baby is sick. Let the doctor advise you how to keep the well baby well. It pays better in every way.

"Second—Through proper feeding. Mother's milk is the right of every baby. At the end of six months your doctor may advise mixed feedings, supplementing the mother's milk by one or two bottle feedings. Let the doctor be the judge of this. Cow's milk when given to the baby should always be boiled one or two minutes before the feedings are prepared. By the time the baby is two or three months old, you can begin giving him a teaspoonful of orange juice every day, gradually increasing to three or four teaspoonsful daily. You can begin giving from one-half to one teaspoonful of cod liver oil at this time, also.

"Third—By care in bathing. The best time for the well baby's bath is in the morning before the second feeding. The bath water should have a temperature of 95 degrees at first, decreasing gradually to 80 degrees by the time a baby is a year old.

"Fourth—By letting the baby have plenty of sunshine and fresh air.

"Fifth—By seeing that the baby has plenty of sleep in a quiet place. A baby should have a regular bedtime at night—not later than six or seven o'clock for the baby under a year old—with a nap in the morning and another in the afternoon. The baby should sleep in a well ventilated room but protected from drafts.

"Sixth—By dressing the baby according to the weather. The baby's feet should always be kept warm. The extra clothing put on when the baby is taken out should be determined by the temperature, not by the season.

"Seventh—and very important. By keeping the well baby away from people who are sick. Neither the well nor the sick baby should be exposed to other people's colds, or to other children's illnesses, because these diseases are especially dangerous to young babies."

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN
Home Demonstration Agent

When cold, snappy January afternoons are upon us, in what more gracious way can we show our hospitality than by serving our callers a steaming cup of tea? Our "at homes" may be impromptu, with unexpected, yet welcome callers dropping in for a few minutes of sociability. Or we may invite our friends to come some afternoon when without worry or work, we may dispense that delightful hospitality which is found at its best when tea is being served.

These cold days, we want to serve with our tea something which is heartier than what we might serve in summer time. Here are some suggestions from which you may make your choice. When the group of guests is small, so that it is not hard to keep a supply of hot toast on hand, cinnamon toast is especially nice to serve.

Cinnamon Toast

Eight slices bread ¼ inch thick, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 3 teaspoons cinnamon, 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons powdered suga.

Cut the bread in narrow strips and remove all crusts. Toast to a golden brown. While hot spread with creamed butter to which the vanilla has been added. Sprinkle with the sugar mixed with cinnamon. Put in hot oven until the sugar is melted. Serve with hot tea.

Gingerbread is a January dainty of long standing, and you will find that the following recipe is unusually delicious:

Gingerbread.

One-quarter cup butter (or butter substitute) ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, ½ cup molasses, ½ cup sour milk, 1¾ cups flour, ½ teaspoon soda, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Cream butter and add sugar gradually. Add egg (well beaten). Mix and sift thoroughly all dry ingredients and add alternately with the molasses and sour milk (thoroughly blended together). Bake as a loaf cake at a temperature of 350 degrees F. If oven has heat control or in a moderate oven for 35-40 minutes.

MT. LAKE PARK

Most communities dearly love a mystery—or a scandal. Either is acceptable—the latter preferred. In this instance the Park had to be satisfied with the former.

On one of the bright, sunny days of the past week two gentlemen of our acquaintance, looking through the denuded oaks in the direction of the lake were surprised to see standing in the rear of the Moomaw property an airplane. How come? One passing over the Park, with motors roaring is quite usual. But a plane at rest! That is quite another matter. Was it a forced landing? Was the pilot, lost in the fog, off his course, out of gas, forced to take his chances of landing safely, or did he crash?

Remembering reading the news of the capture by Coast Guards of case upon case of "Golden Wedding Rye," my friends wondered if some air-minded rum runner was carrying the glad tiding along with a few bottles to the hard-working bootleggers of Oakland—if any. Could it be possible that a love sick couple from a neighboring State was seeking the latest method of travel to escape the ire of a pitchfork-armed father? Was love's young dream shattered by a tail spin? The mystery was getting exciting. Quick, Watson! the needle! Sherlock was on the job.

They started for the scene of the mystery and the nearer they approach the more certain were they that some dreadful catastrophe had occurred and that death stalked the lake side.

At last they arrived at their destination, and sure enough it was a plane. It was tri-motored, the motive power being furnished by three discarded motorcycle engines. The wings were missing. It had skids instead of wheels. The cock-pit was ready for occupancy—all seemed to be complete execpt the wings. But perhaps this was a new contraption that flies without wings. Well, there it was, and the mystery still unsolved.

211 DEATHS DURING 1929 IS STATISTICIAN'S REPORT

144 Are Adults and 67 Are Children—Cerebral Hemorrhage Claims Largest Number

A total of 211 deaths from various causes were reported to Miss Julia Rowan, county statistician, for the year 1929, 67 of which were children. One hundred and forty-four adults—74 males and 70 females—constituted the remainder of the deaths. Cerebral hemorrhages caused 23 deaths and nephritis and broncho and lobar pneumonia were the cause of the next highest number with 15 each.

"Human life is sacred," Miss Rowan said, "and when a human being passes from our life it is important that an immediate record be made of all the essential details of the event.

"It is well established by years of experience that an accurate record in all cases cannot or will be made unless the law requires it. Such a record should include the facts relating to the place of death, the hour, full name, age, sex, color, occupation, civil conditions, his or her father's full name and birthplace, his or her mother's maiden name and her birthplace.

"A very important requirement is a statement by the attending physician or health officer as to the cause of death. The health officer should be notified at once in case of suspected sulcide or murder, or where bodies are found dead from accident or natural causes, so he may make his investigation and decision.

"These facts may be of the greatest legal and social importance. Certificates of death or certified copies are constantly required in court and elsewhere to establish necessary facts. Pension or life insurance may depend on proper evidence of the fact and cause of death. Titles and rights to inheritance may be jeopardized by failure to send in such records.

"Death certificates should be registered in order that public health agencies, national, state and municipal bodies may know the cause of death and act promptly to prevent epidemics. All deaths should be registered in order that individual cities and localities may learn of their own health conditions by comparison, and discover whether or not preventive measures in diseases are successful."

The report gives the cause of death and the number as a result of the several diseases for the year 1929 as follows:

Arterial scelerosis, 10; angina pectoris, 2; acute dilation of the heart, 1; cancer, female, 11, male 1; chronic heart disease, 12; chronic interstitial nephritis, 15; cerebral hemorrhage, 23; chronic pericarditis, 1; endocarditis and myocarditis, 13; broncho and lobar pneumonia, 15; pulmonary tuberculosis, 8; diabetes mellitas, 2; insanity, 1; hymphanyltis, 1; influenza, 7; senility, 8; uremia, 1; suicide, 1; alcoholism, 2. Accidental deaths were causes by drowning, 1; burns, 1; coal mine, 2; automobile, 2; railroad, 1; airplane, 1.

The number and cause of infant deaths (up to seven years of age) were as follows:

Premature birth, 19; colitis, 9; intestinal influenza, 1; spasms, 3; meningitis, 2; broncho pneumonia, 4; acute poliomelitis, 1; heptic abscess, 1; malnutrition, 2; empyemia, 1; intercerception, 2; endocorditis, 1; congenital hydrocephalus, 1; unknown, 3 (no physician called).

MISS "BECKY" MILLER IS SERIOUSLY HURT IN FALL

Nose Is Broken and Right Arm Crushed at Wrist and Elbow

Miss Rebecca Miller, who will be 93 years old in July, had her right arm broken at the wrist and elbow, and her nose broken when she fell down the steps at the home of Dr. Henry W. McComas Monday night about 11 o'clock.

Her room is directly at the top of the stairway and it was thought that after she had turned out her light to retire she was unable to find the bed, and in her search came to the head of the stairs. She was made as comfortable as possible in a downstairs room where she was given medical attention.

Miss "Becky", as she is known, was born July 7, 1837, at Salisbury, Pa., and has been a resident of Oakland for more than a half century. She sits at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. McComas, where she has resided for many years, and reads all the latest novels with great enjoyment and converses about them and news events of the day along with the best in the house.

She was in fairly good health prior to her accident and always ate three hearty meals each day. She has taken care of three generations, Mrs. H. W. McComas, Mrs. McComas' daughters and sons, and her children's children. Three presidents of the United States have been seen by this aged woman, which does not seem so much out of the way until they are named: Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison.

WILL HOLD HEARING IN PROPOSED POWER PROJECT

West Virginia P. S. C. Soon To Consider Blackwater and Cheat River Engineering Plans

A hearing is to be held before the West Virginia Public Service Commission shortly in connection with the proposition of the West Penn Public Service Company to harness the Blackwater river near Davis, W. Va., along the Western Maryland Railway, 20 miles south of Oakland, with a series of dams. It is expected work will start on this power project in the spring.

At least three dams are to be built in the vicinity of Davis. The first will be seventy-eight feet high and will be two miles above Davis, at the mouth of Yellow creek. This dam will back the water for about two miles through the only opening in Brown's Mountain, in Canaan Valley, where a lake several miles square will be formed in the heart of the Canaan basin, extending north up Little Black and south around the Coffman farm. Part of the Bowman and Carwell places will be under water.

Location of Second Dam

The second dam will be a mile and a quarter below Davis and just above the Blackwater Falls. This dam will back water up to near Front street, Davis, and will cover the site of the depot and the old lumber mill of the Babcock Lumber company, including the site of the planing mill and the Western Maryland Railway engine house.

This dam will be built as soon as the first has been completed. The plan, it is understood, is to cut a tunnel or canal across the mountain to North Branch, near Douglas, on the Western Maryland Railway, through which the water will be taken. The flow of water will be so arranged, it is said, that the picturesque falls, the mecca for thousands of visitors every year, will not be destroyed.

To Be Built In Canyon

The third dam will be built in the Blackwater canyon, about a quarter of a mile below the mouth of North river, which is the stream that comes down from Thomas. This dam will be ninety-eight feet high.

Other dams to be built later, according to the announced plan, include one 145 feet high across Cheat river, about two and three-quarter miles below St. George, that will back the water up to within a few miles of Parsons and also along the line of the Western Maryland.

Three other dams are proposed—one 170 feet high, across Cheat river, one mile below Rowlesburg; and 60 feet high, across Cheat river, one and three-fourth miles above Albright, in Preston county, and one 106 feet high, across Cheat river near Beaver Hole, half a mile below the Monongalia and Preston county lines.

Two others are proposed lower down on Cheat river and two on Big Sandy creek, in the same section, with others on Shavers Fork, Gladys Fork, Dry Fork, Laurel Fork, and possibly Otter Fork.

This power system will link up with that of the West Penn in Pennsylvania.

No Temperature Record Broken, Although Weather is Quite Springlike.

Although Old Dame Thermometer hung around the marks between 50 and 66 during the daytime of the past week, no temperature records were broken, according to the readings of the mercury at the government station out at the Weber greenhouses, located a mile east of town.

Records at this station show that a good many years ago January weather was much more unusual than it was earlier during this week and the mercury was pushed upward to 72 degrees, a temperature much higher than was being recorded at the time in the Valley of Virginia.

The weather, however, during the past week was sufficiently springlike to bring snakes out of their winter quarters on Snaggy Mountain and even a groundhog was reported as having been seen just about three weeks before his appointed day to appear on nature's stage.

THIEVES ENTER CREAMERY AND KAHL'S PLANING MILL

No Clue as to Identity of Robbers Has Been Discovered

No clue as to the identity of the thieves who broke into Kahl's Planing Mill and the Oakland Creamery on Monday night, has been discovered, according to W. D. Casteel, sheriff.

Entrance into both places was effected by prying windows open in the rear of the buildings. The filing cabinet in Kahl's Mill was forced open with a wedge bar and about $5 taken. A little over two dollars was obtained from the cash register of the Oakland Creamery company.

Sheriff W. D. Casteel made an investigation the next morning when the robbery was discovered and found tracks leading from the rear of the mill to the rear of the creamery, but nothing further could be discovered.

Whether or not the robbery was committed by two strangers who had been seen in that vicinity earlier in the evening, or by local "talent" could not be determined. Officers were inclined to think that it was not a local job.

MAPLE SUGAR PRODUCERS HELD MEETING YESTERDAY

Guy Stanton, Grantsville, Made President of Organization

Officers were elected and many problems concerning the maple sugar industry in Garrett county were discussed at the first meeting of the board of directors of the Garrett County Maple Products Association, which was held on yesterday afternoon in the office of the County Agent in Oakland.

Guy Stanton, Grantsville, recently named as a member of the board, was elected president; Russell Harvey, of Ryan's Glade, vice-president, and Mrs. Evelyn Glotfelty, secretary-treasurer.

The method of inspection, the kind of label, the feasibility of having a seal and the size of the standard can, were all discussed at length by those in attendance. A can 5½x5½x9 in., one gallon capacity, was decided upon and the label will have upon it in appropriate form, "Crest O' the Highland."

Dr. F. B. Bomberger, head of the State Department of Markets and Inspection service; F. B. Trenk, forestry specialist; H. C. Buckingham, district forester; A. L. Sines, district fire warden, with County Agent Carter, were present at the meeting and took part in the discussion of the questions before the board.

Other members of the board present included John Horchler, Salisbury, Pa.; Charles Wiley, O. C. Buckle and Mr. Shawley, Bittinger; Boyd Steyer and Scott Harvey, Ryan's Glade. The board will be increased by the election of two additional members at some time in the early future.

Stone Bridge Near Grantsville Is Given Editorial Praise

In a recent editorial reference to the old stone bridges of Maryland, the Baltimore Evening Sun had the following to say about the structure on the National Highway near Grantsville, Garrett county:

"For true and striking loveliness, however, the old stone bridge which its admirers place above all others in Maryland is the one that spans Castleman River on the National Highway just east of Grantsville. There it is, well past the century mark, a memorial to the engineers who carried the famous road west from Cumberland and the headwaters of the old canal to open up the wild western regions beyond the Appalachians.

"An appreciative motorist will not cross it without first stopping and making a side trip on foot to gain a view of its full sweep, but thousands do cross it in ignorance of its colorful past and its present beauty. This is because it is too efficient to be a good advertiser. It supports the State's great motor artery as easily as it did the eight and ten horse teams of the pioneers who moved westward to make come true the dreams of that visionary, G. Washington."

Brotherhood to Meet

The January meeting of St. Mark's Lutheran Brotherhood will be held on Tuesday evening of next week in the church. Rev. W. P. Cline, Jr., of Fairmont, W. Va., who is president of the Synod of West Virginia, will be the speaker of the evening.

The program is in charge of E. P. Kahl, Stanley Stahl, Robert Stewart, Floyd Wensell and Ralph Turney.

NATURAL GAS TO BE PIPED INTO GRANTSVILLE SOON

C. & A. Gas Company Engineers Now Surveying Line—May Be Furnished Consumers in March

Preparatory to laying gas mains which will supply Grantsville, Garrett county, with natural gas, an engineering corps of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company is surveying a line from Grantsville to the Pennsylvania State boundary, it has been announced.

Gas will be piped through one of the pipe lines originally owned by the Standard Oil Company which run from the Morgantown district to Philadelphia and which are just north of the Maryland State boundary in the State of Pennsylvania. At a point to be indicated by the engineers the main line will be tapped and gas will be led to Grantsville, where, it has been announced, service will begin about March 1st provided weather conditions permit.

The six miles of gas main from Cumberland to the Pennsylvania line has already been laid and this connects with the main line leading to Philadelphia. A two-mile connecting link between Grantsville and the line in Pennsylvania is only necessary to complete the service into Grantsville.

Representatives of the gas company have completed canvassing the town of Grantsville and practically every property owner has signed an agreement to use the product and are much interested in being able to have this great convenience and labor saver brought into the town.

An ordinance granting the C. & A. Gas Company a franchise to serve Grantsville with natural gas was introduced at a meeting of the Town Council of Grantsville on July 8 of last year which was passed by that body and rates to be charged prospective consumers of gas were approved by the Council.

When this line is completed the gas company will serve the following towns in Garrett county: Oakland, Mountain Lake Park, Deer Park, Loch Lynn Heights, Hutton, Bloomington, Kitzmiller, Dodson, Gorman and the vicinity on the Maryland side of the Potomac river opposite Bayard, W. Va.

PEERLESS AND FAIRSWEEP PERFECT IN ATTENDANCE

Fairsweep School Wins Banner Second Time in Two Months

Peerless and Fairsweep, both of which are one-teacher rural schools in Garrett county, had 100 per cent each in attendance during the month of December, John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer, has just announced. This is the second 100 per cent record in two months for Fairsweep school.

Strawberry Hill led the two-teacher schools in attendance with an average of 96.8 per cent. Kitzmiller led the graded schools of the county with 95 per cent, and Kitzmiller likewise led the high schools of the county with 94.9 per cent in attendance during the closing month of last year.

Seventy-two of the 97 one-teacher schools were above the standard of 88 per cent; seven of the 10 two-teacher schools were above the standard of 90 per cent; five of the 8 graded schools were above the standard of 92 per cent, and two of the six high schools were above the standard of 94 per cent.

The one-teacher schools averaging 95 per cent or above include Peerless, Fairsweep, Short Run, Pine Swamp, Engle, Herrington, Bond, Fort Hill, New Germany, Shook Shop, Winding Ridge, Chestnut Grove, McKenzle, Dry Run, Selbysport, Manadier, Black Hawk, Sebold, Highland, Mt. Zion. Pine Swamp had the percentage of attendance in December of 1928, with 98.7 per cent.

None of the high schools went below 90 per cent, while the lowest mark for graded schools was 87.9. Two-teacher schools had a low mark of 83.9, while the lowest mark made by one-teacher schools was 75.5.

Grange Officers Installed

Paul Friend was installed as master of Pleasant Valley Grange at the regular meeting of the organization held on January 9. Other officers installed were John H. Carter, overseer; H. L. Porter, secretary; M. H. Moon, treasurer; O. T. Graser, lecturer. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. The next regular meeting of the grange will be held in April.

THE AUTHOR'S WIFE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

GROVER KING, bachelor, was interested in just two things in life. One was keeping the taxes as low as he possibly could—that being his sole reason for bothering to be the president of the school board of district 63 year after year. The other thing was the matter of being punctual. He always said the reason he had never married was that women always kept a man waiting. He said that by nature they were unpunctual or tardy or indolent or plain lazy, whichever way one wished to put it. Grover King himself was never late. If he called a school board meeting for half past seven in the evening he planned to arrive not later than a quarter past the hour so that when the clock struck he could also strike his gavel and start proceedings. The proceedings that he liked best of all to start were any and all items of business that pertained to the spending of moneys for large things like school equipment or the new school building, which every one in the district wanted in a half-hearted fashion. But when Grover King started to talk about the horrible, life-crushing taxes that would be laid upon them if they voted the bonds through and built the new school it was small wonder that the pedal extremities in the district grew, if not cold, at least chilly.

So the years went along until Grover King was in his thirties. One by one the school teachers had either married or left to teach in schools where buildings were newer and the equipment more plentiful. The teachers had, without exception, cast glances at Grover King, for he was handsome and young and very well to do even though he didn't want to pay high taxes. But being young and heedless they always proved to him in one way or another that they were unpunctual and their charms were gone for Grover King.

Then Persia West took the school. She was almost thirty but not quite. Her coming brought no quiver of interest to the heart of Grover King. He was weary with the sameness of young school teachers. The very first day she said that the children needed more playground equipment.

"But that costs money," he objected.

She laughed. "So it does. Of course. Everything costs more or less in one way or another. And it isn't for me, you know! I have no intention of swinging in the swings nor using the trapeze nor even sliding down the long chute. I never had such equipment when I was a child. I lived in a city and we just had a cinder playground. But they do have such things nowadays and I want children to have them."

Grover King remained adamant. He was surprised that she clung so persistently to the idea. As a rule the school teachers had always relinquished any idea immediately when they saw that it was out of harmony with his ideas.

"Then it means a play," she said wearily. "Can you write a play or a pageant, Mr. King?"

He stammered. This was quite out of his line, but he hated to admit any defeat. "I could do a play much better than a pageant," he said guardedly.

"Good!" she accepted. "We'll begin rehearsals as soon as you let us have the manuscript. I always find home talent plays go so well when the writer, too, is home talent. If we get enough from this first one for the equipment we may branch out and put up the new school with play money. It's certain the children will appreciate a school they have helped build that way."

How he struggled through the play only he knew. It wasn't, truth to tell, much of a play when it was completed. But he was proud of it. He felt that if it had the proper lighting and costuming and a lilting song or two added it would go on Broadway. He attended rehearsals regularly. He helped paint the scenery and write the bills.

"We'll let no one in who is not on time," suggested Persia West. "That's the way the best concert companies are doing. Those who pay their money and are punctual should enjoy the first of the show without being disturbed by the swishing in of late comers."

She was a girl after his own heart. He agreed that she was right, absolutely and unequivocally right. They printed this statement on the bottom of every ticket.

The ticket sale far surpassed any ticket sale ever held in the township. A week before the affair was to be held they had to hire the opera house in order to have enough seats. Grover King was as excited as a bride on the marriage morn. He went to the barber and had a hair cut, a facial, and an oil rub—all of it. Then he decided that perhaps a turkish bath would settle his nerves. After that he was so sleepy he took a nap, just a little nap he promised himself, to put in the four hours before the play would start.

But alas, and alack, as the fairy stories used to say, Grover King fell asleep and slept—Grover King, the punctual—five hours.

He fairly ran all the way to the opera house. A strange man had taken tickets and was now drearily counting them over. Grover King threw down his pasteboard and started to fling his way into the darkened house. His play!

"Not late comers admitted," snarled the ticket man.

There were words.

"I wouldn't admit the author himself," said the man finally. "It says so on the ticket and the lady teacher was most particular on this point. She said the president of the school board said so, too."

"But I am the author," said King.

The ticket man only laughed and waved him away. King was large enough to have forced his way in but there would have been a scene. People would have laughed.

"I'm the president of the school board," he went on.

Again the ticket man laughed scornfully. "Now I'll tell one," he said with mirth at the old and well-loved joke.

King went outside and watched the play as best he could from a tall window ledge. It was a good play and the night air being crisp stimulated King. To be sure he was uncomfortable crouching there on the window ledge. But after a while he had to laugh at the situation. Prompt? Punctual? Well, he was hoist by his own petard. He could see Persia West from his side view of the stage. In the wings she gave all the help that could be given and his play was a success. She was, be remembered, the only teacher who had ever followed her own convictions when his were not identical. They were calling for the author now and King had to call in at the window to be admitted.

When he finally got inside the building and went out on the stage he dragged by the hand an unwilling teacher, Persia West. There were glances and comments. King was content. If only Persia's ideas would coincide with his—he worried about that.

He didn't need to, though. Persia was already making plans for him to write a Broadway success. And she—why, she was going to be the author's wife!

Luscious Papaya Draws Encomiums From Cobb

Giving credit where credit is due, I must own up that under the shingled mansards of the hotel in Panama City I made the acquaintance of the papaya. I met it there and immediately contracted an affection for it which lingers with me yet.

Impious slanderers have dubbed it an edible gourd, which is a deliberate insult. It is a smooth-faced melon-like thing that grows on a tree. If it be of the pawpaw breed, as naturalists assert, only a sense of restraint deters me from referring to it as the heavy sugar pawpaw of the Southland. It is greenish or yellowish without, and within it is salmon pink meaty luciousness and little, beady black seeds.

Science may have its say about the papaya's evolution and ancestry, but I prefer to appraise it according to a softer, more sentimental theory of my own. I claim it is a love-child.

Once, long eons ago, beneath the ardent tropic moon, some lusty cantaloupe led astray a trusting sapodilla. Dear, yielding, rosy-cheeked papaya, which takes after both its parents, was the outcome.

Eaten at the beginning of a meal, it is an appetizer of merit; eaten at any stage of the meal, it is a prime digestive, since it is rich in pepsin. It hops right in and digests whatever else you put in your hoppers; that's what they say for it.

And the taste of it! The mango, to which it may be distantly related, tastes like turpentine when it doesn't taste like scented soap, and the common papaw smells like a sanitary barber and frequently acts up among your insides like the wrath to come; but with the papaya, pretty is as pretty does, and it certainly does sit mighty gracefully on the tum-tum after leaving the palate with its fragrant juices all the way down.—Irvin S. Cobb in Hearst's International Cosmopolitan.

Macaroni Chinese Dish?

Macaroni appears to have been the invention of the Chinese. It was introduced into Europe by the Germans from whom the Italians learned of it. By the Fourteenth century they were the only people enjoying it. The method of manufacturing it was held a great secret. Later, however, this secret leaked out to a cook in France, and it is recorded that Louis XIII was induced to order it in an inn in Tours. He was so favorably impressed that he had his own cook study the method of preparation.

Needle in History

The needle was known in very ancient times, its invention being ascribed by the ancients to the goddess Beitona. The earliest instruments of the kind were fashioned of wood or fish bones, and did not have the eye, but were used after the manner of the awl. The Babylonians, Egyptians and Phrygians did embroidery. In Pompeii both ordinary and surgeons' needles have been found. The Chinese appear to have been the inventors of steel needles.

Good-By, Nurse!

Her husband had just come home and had his first meeting with the new nurse, who was remarkably pretty.

"She is sensible and scientific, too," said the fond mother, "and says she will allow no one to kiss the baby while she is near."

"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near."

The nurse was discharged.

BEWARE OF STRAY DOGS, HEALTH OFFICER WARNS

226 Marylanders Treated For Prevention of Rabies Last Year

Over five times as many persons in Maryland were bitten by rabid animals and were given the Pasteur treatment in 1929, as a preventative against rabies—hydrophobia—as was the case ten years ago. In 1920 the number of persons treated was 41; the number last year was 226. The steady increase, from year to year, in the number of applicants for the Pasteur treatment, by persons who have been bitten or otherwise injured by rabid or vicious animals is shown by the records of the Pasteur Division of the State Department of Health. The total number treated in 1928 was 161.

The records for 1929 show that of the 226 persons who were given the Pasteur treatment during the year, 167 were threated by the Chief of the Division, Dr. C. W. G. Rohrer, and 59 were cared for by their family physicians. There were 437 additional applicants who were given the necessary emergency aid but for whom the Pasteur treatments proved to be unnecessary, as the animals inflicting the injuries were found to be normal.

The Pasteur activities were taken over by the State Department of Health in 1915. Previous to that all treatments were given at the Pasteur Institute established in 1898 in connection with the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Until 1921, all treatments were given in Baltimore City and patients from different parts of the State had to spend the three weeks that were necessary to complete the treatments in Baltimore. That year a change was made in the method of administration which made it possible for the patients to be treated at their homes by their family physicians. In 1928, another change was made which cuts down the number of treatments from 21 to but 14.

Since 1915, 1354 persons have been given the protective treatment against rabies—807 by the Chief of the Pasteur Division and 547 by their family physicians. In addition to the persons treated after injuries by rabid animals, there have been 2500 additional applications for emergency treatments in the last ten years from persons who were injured by stray, or vicious, but not rabid animals.

The number of animals, either rabid, or vicious, involved in the injuries that have been inflicted, has ranged from less than 40 in any one year to 148 in 1929. Laboratories examinations in 1929 gave positive findings of the presence of rabies in 54 dogs, 3 cats and one sheep. During the last ten years, while dogs have been the most frequent offenders, many other domestic animals have proved to be rabid. The number for the ten year period has included 462 dogs, 20 cats, 3 cows, 3 calves, 1 horse, 1 mule, 1 sheep, 1 pig and 1 grey squirrel.

Warnings have been repeatedly given by the State Department of Health of the danger from stray, sick or strange dogs, especially from dogs that are allowed to run at large, and also from stray or sick cats.

Potomac To Be National Waterway

Government Plans to Connect the Potomac With the Ohio River, Completing a Project Begun By Washington in 1785—Cutting a Channel Under Mountains a Major Engineering Problem—Survey to Cumberland Completed—Enormous Tonnage Could be Moved by Water Without Injury to Rail Lines

Engineers of the United States Army, under the direction of Maj. Brehon Somervell, have completed an intensive atudy of the Potomac River from Cumberland and Washington to sec if it can be made navigable the year round and have found that the project is altogether feasible. They are now at work surveying and studying four routes from Cumberland to Pittsburgh, so as to link up the Potomac with the Ohio over the Monongahela. When this aurvey is completed a report on the whole project will be made to Congress, by whose authority the study is being made.

A year ago Congress passed a bill, known as House Bill 308, which directs the Engineer Corps of the Army to make a study and survey of all the navigable rivers in the United States for water power development, flood control, navigation and irrigation possibilities. The survey just completed is perhaps the most important in the group of assignments falling under the scope of the bill. When and if it is carried out it will give a 12-foot channel from Washington to Cumberland that will permit 1,000-ton barges to navigate from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk to the rich mineral fields of Ohio, West Virginia and Maryland, on the Potomac project, and a 9-foot channel from Cumberland through the same region and also through the Pennsylvania industrial and mineral region which has Pittsburgh for its capital. The channel from Cumberland to Pittsburgh will probably not be deeper than that on the Ohio river, which has just been canalized to a depth of 9 feet.

It is planned, in the canalization of the Potomac, to construct 27 dams between Washington and Cumberland. Four of them will be power dams, capable of supplying over 1,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of prime power in one year. Three of these power dams will be located at the falls just above Washington, one at Little Falls and two at Great Falls. The fourth dam would be high up in the mountain section near Harper's Ferry. This development would necessitate destroying the present Chain Bridge, but it would be replaced by a splended concrete structure built a little below the present bridge and over the power dam.

The power dam at Little Falls will create a lake behind it over which navigation can flow to Great Falls, and there a canal a few hundred feet long, 200 feet wide and 12 feet deep, will be built around the falls. This is the only artificial canal in the entire project outside of the bed of the stream.

On the Potomac proper there will be sixteen movable dams with locks long enough to barge through the longest tow that now moves over the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. This unit will probably have to be maintained, as the Ohio River project is complete and in operation and is the largest project of its kind ever undertaken by the Army Engineering Corps.

The power dams on this Potomac project will cost $60,000,000. They will furnish enough power to pay for the project; that is, the revenue derived from the sale of power will pay the interest on the bonds, keep up the sinking fund to retire the bonds and care for the annual operation of the great canal. What the other dams and the locks will cost has not yet been figured out and is not to be contained in the preliminary report to the chief of engineers, Maj. General Lytle Brown.

As an engineering project, the canal to Cumberland, it is said, offers no new or very interesting problems to the engineers, but the project linking up the Potomac with the Ohio River will probably prove to be one of the most intricate these able men have ever undertaken to work out. A great obstacle to be removed is carrying the canal over the Alleghany Mountains, which is the physical problem confronting the engineers. In order to do this, they are going to carry it under the mountains, and this will be the only tunnel, in this country at least, through which a navigable stream carrying 1,000-ton barges will run.

In studying the four possible routes from Cumberland to Pittsburgh the engineers must find one route on which can be develpoed sufficient water power to pay for the project. At least this is the objective now aimed at. Also must be taken into consideration the question of sufficient tonnage moving both ways to make the canal a practical proposition. This throws on the engineers the responsibility of the engineering problem to be solved and also that of the possibilities of the development of the country through which the canal will move. Their studies of the Potomac project, embracing historical matter, economic data and engineering problems, indicate the scope of the major investigation.

An undertaking very similar to this whole project from Washington to Pittsburgh is now being developed in Europe and has been in process of development for a number of years past. It is called the Rhine-Danube Canal. When completed it will have 47 power and movable dams. It runs through a terrain similar to that through which the Cumberland-Pittsburgh project will run; it offers like engineering problems, and it barges now, on the part in operation 1,000-ton barges of heavy freight. When it is finished it will link up the Baltic with the Black Sea and will be the longest inland waterway in the world. When the Potomac-Ohio project is completed it will make a waterway from Norfolk and Baltimore and Philadelphia to the Gulf via New Orleans, the longest interior navigable stream on this continent, if not in the world.

No emphasis is being placed on the fact that this project is also a national defense necessity. By use of the Delaware & Chesapeake Canal, which connects Elk River in Maryland with Delaware River, valuable commerce can move from the great Mississippi Valley over this Potomac-Ohio Canal to Baltimore, Philadelphia and into New York over the Raritan and other waterways. In time of war this would be an invaluable asset, as valuable, it is aaid, as the system of national highways which the Government has assisted the States in building.

In a study of the traffic possibilities of the Potomac development, it is found that on three classifications alone over twenty million tons of freight now move annually over the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania railways from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk through the Cumberland gateway to the region beyond. Thia is heavy freight, aome of which could be moved on barge lines. Of this tonnage it is estimated that the barge line could handle 10 per cent without materially damaging the income of the rail lines. The cheaper barge rates would have shippers in these three classifications alone $3,227,556.80 a year; and the tonnage would give the barge line annual gross carnings computed at $11,-317,644.74. The cost of the barge haul for an average haul of 356 miles would be $2.40, and the rate per ton mile would be about 6.9 mills on existing tonnage. Reports of the rail lines show that their tonnage has had an annual Increase of 12 per cent. The local tonnage between Washington and Cumberland, consisting chiefly of coal, would be a considerable item in the operation of the barge line.

In making the study of the Potomac basin the engineers found that while now it is primarily an agricultural region and one of the richest in the continent, it has great possibilities for mining and for Industrial development. It is particularly rich in raw materials for the manufacture of steel, lime, cement and chemlcal products. Its chief minerals are coal, limestone, slate, clay, granite, iron ore, manganese, barite and silicious sandstone. Many of these are now mined for commercial purposes.

This region is also extremely rich in coal, and at one time the production of the Maryland mines alone reached nearly 5,000,000 tone a year. Labor disputes and the abandonment of the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal cut this production nearly in half. The actual reduction was 40 per cent over a period of sixteen years.

The industrial development now centers in Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frederick, Alexandria and Washington, where the chief articles manufactured are automobile tires, celanese (a form of rayon), steel, tinplate, lime, cement, brick, flour, furniture, and organs. It is thought that the development of this waterway, with its production of cheap power and with available native American labor, to say nothing of the salubrious climate and cheap navigation to tidewater, to rail centers and to great markets, will speed the growth of its industries and the building up of its cities and chief towns. There is a paper mill at Luke, Md., for instance, which gets all its raw material from Baltimore and Philadelphia. This wood pulp comes either from Canada or from Europe and moves from seaboard by rail to mill. The possibilities of the canal for the development of this one industry are said to be almost limitless. If one writes down the large cities on the banks of the entire Mississippi River system, the market for the paper made in the mills is seen to be larger than any possible development of the mills in the next half century could supply.

It is the hope of Congress and the Government that eventually all heavy freight can and will move over the canalized streams of the country when the full system is finally developed. This is evidently the purpose back of this survey. When the Potomac project is completed, the steel mills of Baltimore and Philadelphia, for instance, can draw their raw material from the mines and quarries along or near to the Potomac, moving them on the barge line at a considerable saving in freight chargcs. And on the back haul the tire factories and rayon plants and other mills can get their raw material from the seaports at a similar saving in haulage.

Coal mining was an important industry in the Cumberland region as far back as 1810. During the period 1826-40, when the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was building, a small fleet of boats carrying from 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of coal, made the trip to Washington each year, and the boats were broken up on arrival at the Capital and sold for timber or firewood. (They were similar to the barges Abraham Lincoln carried to New Orleans loaded with produce and sold.) In 1850 the first barge of coal was carried on the new Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, and by 1875 the tonnage had grown until that year 916,000 tons were brought to Washington and the ports to the east. By 1920-21 this tonnage fell to 194,000 tons, due to the smallness of the canal, to damage to the waterway from floods, and to the fact that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad had acquired control of the canal and had cut freight rates below what the canal could charge and exist. Labor disputes also cut down the tonnage.

George Washington is the father of this canal project. It was the apple of his eye. His diary, published in four large volumes, contains more reference to the canal than to any other matter that attracted his notice in his long and busy career. To his urging and at his instigation the first canal company was organized by laws passed by the Assemblies of Virginia and Maryland, and in 1785, when the Potomac Company was organized, he was made its first president. He personally surveyed the route of the original canal. He rode his horse up and down both banks of the river beyond the falls and to Seneca and beyond looking for a route. He rode in a boat through the treacherous rapids trying to find a way up the river. At Harper's Ferry he endangered his life in a boat and only came ashore at the urgent pleading of his friends.

Private capital furnished the $700,-000 necessary to carry out the initial project, and to this he subscribed liberally. When the company's engineer advised a lateral canal, Washington took the field and painstakingly surveyed a route himself up the stream, recommending that the obstructions in the channel be removed to forward navigation. The engineer, a Mr. Rumsey, invented a boat that could be propelled against the stream, and Washington thought so much of the invention that he furthered its development and made Rumsey the first engineer of the canal. Later he helped Rumsey in his invention of the first steamboat, an invention popularly attributed to Robert Fulton. One finds several references in the diary to this man ard his inventions. He proved to be impractical as an engineer and was removed.

The Potomack company completed the canal and opened it to navigation in 1802. It provided a lateral canal around the falls above Washington and opened navigation to Cumberland. The commerce it carried from 1779 to 1817 was 106,834 tons, employing 9,944 boats and having a value of $7,-002,370. This was not insignificant when one considers the time and the infancy of the country. But the Potomack company was only moderately successful, for Washington's strong hand was not on it during his Presidency, and after his death it went into bankruptcy and transferred its charter to the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Company in 1826.

The present canal was completed in 1850 at a cost of $11,071,176, subscribed by the United States, Maryland and private interests. It is a lateral canal, following the Maryland shore to Cumberland, having 75 locks with an average lift of 8 feet, and giving a maximum depth of 10 and a minimum depth of 6 feet of water. The locks are only 15 by 100 feet and can pass boats having a tonnage of no more than 122 tons. In 1889 the canal was damaged by flood and was out of commission two and one-half years. In 1894 another flood damaged it so badly that it has not since been in use. The boats that plied its waters have disappeared; the terminal at Cumberland has been dismantled and the canal is dry except for a small stretch between Little Falls and Georgetown, which is used as a headrace for aome mills in Washington.

Washington's original idea was to develop a water route from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic. Detroit was one of the objectives and Baltimore the other. He was looking at the problem as one of national defense as well as of national development, and the longest item in his diary, some eight or ten pages, is devoted to a consideration of thls problem. In this discussion he gives tables of distances contrasting navigation from Detroit over the St. Lawrence to the Atlantic, and from Detroit over the Ohio route to Baltimore. It is remarkable that he posed the same question that the Army is now considering, canalizing the Monongahela to Pittsburgh and linking up it or one of its several branches wlth the north branch of the Potomac for continuous navigation to the sea.

"The way is plain, and the expense, comparatively speaking, deserves not a thought, so great would be the prize," is the conclusion this eminent man reached and entered in his diary October 4, 1784. This long entry, which begins: "The more the Navigation of Potomack is Investigated and duly considered, the greater the advantages arising from them appear." It is very much like a scientific report based on a long survey and close study made by himself, which, indeed it was.

It is interesting to note that he considered the State of Pennsylvania the grotesque obstacle to the development of the project. This opposition he thought would cause the western part of the State to secede, as a political necessity. But happily this was averted. In this entry he thus delineates the genesis of this movement.

"It may be said perhaps, that as the most direct route from the Lakes to the navigation of the Potomack are through the State of Pennsylvania—and that the interests of that State are opposed to the extension of the Waters of Monongahela, that a communication can not be had either by Yohiogany or Cheat River—but herein I differ—an application to this purpose would in my opinion place the Legislature of that Commonwealth in a very delicate situation. That it would not be pleasing I can readily conceive, but that they would refuse their assent, I am by no means clear in. There is in that State at least 100,000 Souls West of Laurel Hill, who are groaning under the inconvenience of a long land transportation. They are wishing, indeed looking, for the extension of inland Navigation; and if this can not be made easy for them to Philadelphia—at any rate it must be lengthy—they will seek a Mart elsewhere; and none is so convenient as that which offers itself thru certain consequences there of an attempt to restrain the extension of the Navigation of these Rivers (so constant with the interest of these people) or to impose any extra duties upon the exports or imports, to or from another State, would be a separation of the Western Settlers from the old and more interior Government, towards which there is not wanting a disposition at this moment in the former."

Western Pennsylvania and Ohio will benefit more, it is believed, by the canalization of the Monongahela and the linking up of the Ohio with the Potomac than any other part of the country; and it is not thought that the project will meet with the objections that the first efforts to canalize the Ohio met with from the coal men of Pittsburgh.

Jack, His Dad and Vivian

By CORONA REMINGTON

"YES, I'd love to do it, but father doesn't approve."

"Jack Stamford! Isn't it your $5,000 you want to put into this business, and aren't you of age, and haven't you enough sense to do a little thinking for yourself once in a while? Sometimes you make me so mad I could cry."

Vivian Shippe jamped up from the davenport where she had been sitting beside her fiance and hurriedly dabbed at her eyes as she started toward the door. In one stride he was beside her and had her in his arms.

"Oh, but you don't understand," he pleaded. "I'm all Dad has, and he's watched over me and cared for me and advised me ever since I was in kindergarten. It would kill him if I went agsiast his wishes. I always coasult him about everything."

"I see you do," she aaswered dryly.

"That hurts, Vivian," he said quietly.

"Well, even if you lost the money, I'd rather you'd plunge in and see what you can do for yourself. It looks like a good chance to me even if I don't know much about business."

Almost imperceptibly the man shook his head aad sighed. "I don't kaow what to do; heaven knows I don't. Well, I promised Dad I'd he back by ten. He waats a gsme of chess toaight, and his old crony at the club's goae hack oa him."

Reluctantly they parted, aad Vivian weat up to her room more depressed aad discouraged than she had heen In weeks. What sort of maa was Jack's father, aayhow, she wondered. She had aot lived la Morristown long, and she had always dodged when Jack had aaggested hringiag his father aroand. Somehow she dreaded this man she had never met. He must he an overbesring, domiaeering sort of creature, she reflected.

What could he doae to break Jack loose? As things were aow he would never he a man. How she would love to tell the old man what she thought of him! As the Iden flashed throagh her miad her lips straightaaed oat into a grim little line of determiaation.

The aext morning at breakfast her family noticed that she seemed to he preoccupied, snd just a little excited.

"I'm going uptown," she told her mother, after breakfast.

"What for, dear?"

"Oh, it's a secret mission—some reform work," she answered lightly.

A momeat later she was deftly backing the little green car out of the garage and plaaning her campaign. As she stopped in froat of the tall office building her coarage almost failed her.

"Mr. Stamford," she hegaa, as she coafroated a rather haadsome middle-aged maa in the presideat's office of the Loagace Iron works, "I'm Vivian Shippe, Jack's fiancee."

"Jack's what? Why, he never told me!" ejaculated Stamford, sealor.

"I doa't hlame him," answered the girl, coolly, feeling her composare coming hack, "and that's just what I've come here to talk to you about. You are simply ruiaing Jack. He hardly dares to breathe without your consent, aad he has about as much initiative as a three-year-old. He's a molly-coddle, thst's what he is, and it isn't his fault, either—it's yours, all yours. You think you're a devoted father, but he has ao worse enemy in this whole world thaa yoa."

Stamford, red and splutteriag, opened his mouth to speak, hut Vivian silenced him with a look and went on:

"He waated to start out la husiaess for himself, but you discouraged him. What if he did lose a few thousand? I'd rather have a maa penailess who had tried and who had a backbone of his own than one who was acared to veature aaythiag. I'm goiag to marry him because I love him, but I'd almost do it if it was oaly to save him from you, his devoted father."

"That's all I have to say," she ended. "I don't care how much you hate me—that'll do you good, but think over what I've said, will you?"

With a nod she was gone. Once back in her car an outhurst of pent-up emotion swept over her and her hands on the steeriag wheel trembled so that she could hardly drive. Reaching home, she rushed up the back stairs to her room and locked herself in. Two hours later the telephone rang.

"Say, dearest, got to see you right away. Coming aow."

In a flash he had hung up and the girl had just time to dah some powder on her tear-stained face aad straighten her tousled hair.

"Whoops! The best news. It's a corker. Dad's a trump—always told you he was—called me up sad we just had an interview and he told me he'd reconsidered the matter about my goiag into business and thought it was a good plan. Just as 'f that wasn't knockout enough he calmly handed me a check for $10,000 so as to give me a good start."

"What a perfect dear he is!" exclaimed Viviaa.

"Yes, hut he acted awfully funay. I was a little worried for a while. After we got through he said, 'Soa, if yon have a best girl or snythiag of that sort, tell her that love is often blind, but not always incurably so.' I tried to get him to explaia, hut he just laughed and put out his haad."

"The dear," said Vivian softly. "I believe I'd like to meet him now. I just know I'm going to love him."

GRANTSVILLE GOING FORWARD

The Republican extends its congratulations to Grantsville, for through the progressiveness of the citizens of that town and the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company, natural gas will soon be available to every resident in that municipality.

It is just one instance where cooperation means better things. Had only a few citizens of the town wanted the product and had only a handful been willing to sign an agreement to use it, should it be piped into their town, then preparations for laying the gas line would never have gone forward.

But as it is, practically every property owner in Grantsville contracted to use gas and this attitude of progressiveness, which has always been a valuable asset in the Grantsville section, is again bearing fruit.

The town is already enjoying a twenty-four hour electric service and this added commodity will still further enhance the desirability of people to live and carry on business in the beautiful old town on the National Highway.

It is The Republican's contention that when one community in the county shows a progressive spirit that fact adds materially to the progressiveness of other communities.

The achievement is due in a large measure to the wide-awake, up-and-doing spirit that pervades the Grantsville people.

BOOT-LEG PACIFISM

Politicians and journalists who in one breath complain that there is laxity in liquor law enforcement and in the next abuse prohibition agents and members of the Coast Guard because an occasional rum-runner is killed, are not exactly consistent, to say the least.

Whatever one may think of the general policy of prohibition, certainly there is no room in this country for sympathy with gangs of law-breakers who employ gunmen for the purpose of carrying on the traffic of smuggling and boot-legging. The head of the national Coast Guard is right in saying that such desperadoes, engaged in lawiessnes for the money there is in it, cannot be stopped by friendly gestures and sympathetic admonitions.

Surely the prohibition agent or member of the Coast Guard who goes out to meet gunmen is not to be blamed if he arms himself against the certain use of weapons in an emergency and shoots to stop a fugitive lawbreaker or to save his own life. There are no tears shed in certain quarters which weep copiously over mortality among rum-runners, when a prohibition agent or member of the Coast Guard is killed in the performance of duty.

There is a good deal of significance in this outcry of certain metropolitan journals and politicians when a smuggler or boot-legger is hurt. And that significance is not pleasant to contemplate.

NEUTRALS NOT ABOLISHED

A statement in a recent official British paper to the effect that in future wars there would be no neutrals and therefore no question of neutral rights, led to rumors and statements here and abroad to the effect that under the Kellogg treaty the United States, in case of war between two other powers, would be called upon to take sides after deciding which nation was the aggressor and that we had therefore succeeded in getting into some sort of a league after all.

These theories were finally set at rest by a statement from Secretary of State Kellogg to the effect that the British paper quoted referred only to the covenant of the League of Nations and not to the Kellogg Pact and was a reiteration of the League theory advanced at the time the covenant was formed, to the effect that the League abolished neutrality and that all members were bound to act jointly to punish an offender against the League or its agreements.

It has been the American idea that the Kellogg Pact if it were a peace pact, could only be enforced by the power of public opinion. Otherwise it might easily become a pact of war instead of a pact of peace. In fact it was one of the chief objections offered in the Senate to our joining the League that because neutrality would be abolished we would be bound up in all sorts of European quarrels and misunderstandings in which we had no interest. The statement of Secretary Stimson in commenting on the British white paper, should therefore be effective in clearing up the situation.

While this incident may not be so important in itself, it certainly does illustrate the difference between the American and European views of international affairs. In Europe for centuries, the nations have been pitted one against the other, and collectively in alliances and ententes designed to preserve the balance of power, in time of peace or to gain advantage over the other fellow in case of war. In America it has been our desire from the first to avoid entangling alliances with all nations, and to cultivate friendly relations with each. In order to do this we have sought to promote peace by mutual understanding and general agreement to arbitrate all difficulties.

The misunderstanding arising from the British white paper therefore is another proof of the fact that it will pay us well to proceed carefully and cautiously in our agreements with all other nations, keeping at all times in the forefront the time honored policy of friendship with all nations and entangling alliances with none.

The Linotype and Its Inventor

This article that you are reading was composed on a Mergenthaler linotype machine. Ottmar Mergenthaler, a Baltimore mechanic, delicate and of the dreamy type, worked patiently for years in its invention, and when he explained to his fellow workmen on the Baltimore News that his machine, when completed, would do the work of half a dozen type setters the union printers looked at one another and smiled knowingly. But at last the dream of Mergenthaler was realized and his first linotype machine made its appearance for the first time at the Chicago World's Columbian Exposition in 1893. The first operator upon this machine was Edward Hirsh, of Baltimore. Publishers, editors and printers (among whom was the editor and publisher of The Republican) collected around Hirsh to see the machine, and all were skeptical and many said it was not practical; would cost too much to install and would always be getting out of order—just as the skeptics ridiculed the early automobiles and flying machines.

But the Mergenthaler machine, the dream of this Baltimorean, is now used throughout the world, and it is a very poor country newspaper that doesn't boast of owning one or more of these labor-saving devices.

In addition to be an interested observer of the first machine at the Chicago Fair, the publisher of The Republican had its operation and possibilities fuliy explained by Mr Hirsh, who also gave him one of the lines of type cast by the machine. This type line is still preserved in The Republican office and differs but slightly from the lines being cast today. It was more than twenty-five years later before the first linotype was installed in The Republican office.

SORE THROATS AND COUGHS

Quickly Relieved By This Safe Prescription

Here's a doctor's prescription that is really throat insurance. Sore or irritated throats are relieved and soothed almost instantly with the very first swallow. About 90 per cent of all coughs are caused by an irritated throat; consequently for most coughs too there is nothing better than this famous prescription—it goes direct to the internal cause. It is put up under the name Thoxine and is guaranteed to stop coughs and relieve sore throats in 15 minutes or your money will be refunded. Singers and speakers find Thoxine very valuable.

The remarkable thing about Thoxine is that while it relieves almost instantly it contains nothing harmful, is pleasant tasting and safe for the whole family. Ask for Thoxine 35c., 60c., and $1.00 bottles. Sold by Gonder's and all other good drug stores. —Advertisement 48-1t.

BOB MARTIN IS AWARDED SUM OF $100 MONTHLY

A. E. F. Boxer Gets Award for Injuries in Fights Overseas

CHARLESTON, Jan 11.—Bob Martin, former West Virginia boxer, who battled his way to the boxing championship of the A. E. F. during the World War, has been granted compensation by the federal government upon a claim based upon injuries suffered in the ring.

Captain C. M. Jones, state service officer, announced here today the West Virginia fighter has been awarded compensation of $100 a month for life by the United States Veterans' bureau for permanent disability caused principally by the battering received in 60 fistic encounters while in the service.

Jones, who pressed Martin's claim for compensation before the veterans' bureau, submitted to it a record of Martins' fights for the purpose of showing that the boxer's disability was due to the many blows he had received in the ring. Jones said the West Virginian had participated in a total of 60 boxing bouts while in the service, winning 54 by knockouts, four by decisions, losing one and getting a draw in the other.

Has Brain Tumor

Martin for several years has been suffering from traumatic brain tumor, Jones said, and has not been able to support himself or his family. Two years ago congress passed a pension bill allowing him $20 a month, which he has relinquished by accepting the larger compensation. The former fighter also has received state aid, the receipts from a few benefit boxing matches and funds from a boxing association.

The ex-soldier-fighter was placed on a temporary total disability rating August 7, 1928, by the government which allowed $100 monthly on that basis until October 5, 1929. The rating as of January 11, 1930, places him as totally disabled for life with the same monthly amount. Martin will now receive $1,600 back pay dating from August 7, 1928, Jones said.

In his statement to H. G. Hooks, manager of the Charleston regional office of the United States Veterans' bureau, Jones listed more than a dozen fighters who had punished Martin severely in the army fights.

In 32 Fights

In the qualification fights for the A. E. F. championship Martin fought 32 contestants, defeating 28 by knockouts and four by decisions, Jones' list showed. In the fight with Fay Kiser at Cirque de Paris, France, April 26, 1919, for the championship, Jones said "According to authorities on fighting and sport writers, this was a specially hard fight, and the claimant's opponent rendered blow after blow on the claimant's head. It seems to me that it is reasonable to presume that this fight was the beginning of the claimant's present disability."

The only one of the 60 fights that Martin lost, according to Jones' report, was one with Gene Tunney. The fight that was declared a draw was that with Sergeant Ray Smith. Both these battles were fought on French soil.

After leaving the army Martin participated in several bouts, but appeared unable to continue the pace he set in the army and after a few years dropped out of the game.

Martin, whose home was at Terra Alta, Preston county, for some time, has been living at Nitro, near here. He is a brother of Alvey R. Martin, of Oakland.

Lesson for January 19

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:12-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Chooses Some Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Begins His Ministry.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Began His Ministry.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Comprehensive Program of Jesus.

Jesus began His official work as Messiah at Jerusalem where He presented Himself to the men of the Jewish nation.

I. The King His Own Herald (vv. 12-17).

1. The reason for this (v. 12).

The news of the imprisonment of John the Baptist caused Jesns to forsake Jndea and go into Galilee. The fate of John was accepted as foreshadowing His own. The rejection of the forerunner meant the rejection of the King, whose advent he proclaimed. Because of this He withdrew from the metropolis and went to the remote regions where His work would attract less attention.

2. To whom the proclamation was made (vv. 13-16).

It was to the people at Capernanm in fulfillment of Issiah's prophecy (9:1, 2). These people were not blessed with such privileges as those in and aronnd Jerusalem. Thns we see that the darkest and most corrupt of the provinces was getting the light first. In this we see a foreshadowing of the present age, when the gospel of the grace of God is being preached to the Gentiles.

3. His messsge (v. 17).

"Repent, for the kingdom of hesven is at hand." This is the same kingdom which John the Bsptist and the Old Testament prophets proclaimed. It means the Messianic earth rnle of Jesus Christ. It is for this we pray when we intelligently say, "Thy kingdom come." At that time the light will hreak forth which shall ilnmine the whole earth.

II. The King Calling to Himself Assistants (vv. 18-22).

1. His command of authority (vv. 18, 19).

He did not endeavor to persnade them, and He did not use arguments but issued the mandate. To command is the King's prerogative—not to argue or entreat.

2. The station of the servants called (vv. 18, 21).

They were men of lowly birth and occupation—fishermen. God chooses the foolish things of this world to confound the wise snd the weak things to confound the things which are mighty (I Cor. 1:26).

3. They were called to definite service (v. 19).

"I will make yon fishers of men." He had previously called them to be disciples (John 1:36-42). He now called them to service. This call therefore was not the gospel call to sinners which is "believe on me," but the call to service of those who have already heeded His call to discipleship. The qualities which made for good fishers—patience, bravery to fsce the storm and the night, the perseverance which toiled sll night though no fish were caught—wonld make for good fishers of men.

4. Their prompt ohedience (vv. 20, 22).

They pnt their trust in Him who called, believing thst He was able to supply their needs. There is no time for delay when the King commands.

III. The King's Triumphant Progress (vv. 23-25).

He went the whole ronnd of Galilee, teaching the Scriptures, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom, and healing all manner of diseases. He did a threefold work:

1. Teaching the Scriptnres in the synsgogues (v. 23).

The revelation of God needed to be explained. This is what He was doing in Nazsreth (Lnke 4:16-22). Such is the primary bnsiness of every minister.

2. Preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom (v. 23).

The King who was present and was heralding His own mission, was ready to establish His kingdom if they wonld have been willing to receive Him.

3. Healing all manner of diseases (vv. 23-25).

"His fame went throughout all Syria, and they brought nnto Him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases snd torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were innatic, and those that had the palsy; and He hesled them."

What God Has to Tell Us

If we think no more of ourselves than we onght to think, if we seek not onr own bnt others' welfare, if we are prepared to take sll things as God's dealings with us, then we may have a chance of catching from time to time what God has to tell us.

Paying Toll to the Devil

He who does evil that good may come pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.—J. C. and A. W. Hare.

THE PASSING SHOW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

The anti-Ritchie Democrats at the close of the week find themselves greatly cheered by the situation. They feel, according to reports, that the hardest part of the battle has been fought and they now express the greatest confidence that Governor Ritchie will never make a formal announcement of his candidacy for the fourth term nomination he so ardently desires.

Up to this time, it is declared, the Governor and his advisers, including Brooke Lee, ex-Judge Walsh and some others, have failed to realize the true situation in the counties as well as in Baltimore City. They fail, it seems, to realize the strength of the sentiment against the fourth term and the indefinite continuance in office that a fourth election would mean. And more important than anything else the Governor and his advisers have not yet found out that much of the support on which Ritchie counts will be lacking when the bugle blows for the final heat in the race.

The Governor's address at the Concord banquet is accepted as his big effort to win applause and it is figured by the opposition that it was a failure. There were as many anti-Ritchie men at the banquet as there were Ritchie men, say those best informed, and there have heen no signs of desertion in the ranks of the antis.

An urgent matter of the McIntosh supporters now is to complete the slate for the primary no matter what His Excellency finally does. There are three places besides the Governorship—the Attorney General, the Comptroller and the Clerk of the Court of Appeals. In the make-up of this slate it is proposed to recognize Western Maryland, the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland. There are, it appears, plenty of candidates but the thing is to pick the ones who will draw the most support.

Governor Gets Self Into More Limelight

With the cooperation of the managers of the Concord Club banquet the Governor was given great opportunity to speak his piece on Wednesday evening and it was the same old stuff. Great praise for his own administration—not a word for anybody else's administration. Always the big I. Always the magalomaniacal outpouring.

Reminds me that two years ago when the last Concord Club banquet was given the hero as staged by Toastmaster Loden was the late John S. (Frank) Kelly. On that occasion Loden it was who put the crown of city bossism on the Kelly head. Now Kelly has passed on and Loden hands the crown to Ritchie. The latter is to be the Kelly successor as city boss for the Democrats. We shall see what we shall see before the end of the year.

The President of the Senate was not invited to praise himself and so the Governor had a monopoly and that, too, right after the faithful ex-Judge Walsh had shipped down from Allegany county a spontaneous petition beseeching His Excellency to run for a fourth term and presumably to go on to the Presidency.

True it was that one Saul Praeger of Cumberland, had punched a few holes in that spontaneous petition business by making a statement of the facts. But the Governor had the banquet while the opposition, sitting around on the chairs provided at so much per chair, had to keep their mouths shut. The most they could do was to refrain from helping the Ritchie shouting.

When the anti-Ritchie men got to the banquet hall and noted the seating arrangements there was some surprise and not a little dissatisfaction. They found that ex-Mayor Jackson and other opponents of the fourth term had been placed at tables far from and practically out of sight of the speakers and near a fire escape. This was probably done to afford them opportunity to leave quickly in the event of a disturbance. But there was no disturbance.

It was apparent that the Governor had made careful preparation for the occasion and after it was all over some of his adherents were saying he had made the greatest effort of his life. Certainly he did all in his power to work up enthusiasm for himself.

G. O. P. Remaining
Very Quiet.

Just now the Republicans are remaining very quiet and we hear of no new candidates. The Mayor evidently has not yet been convinced that it will not be wise for him to make a fight for the nomination and his City Hall supporters are cheering him on. They do not take kindly to talk to the effect that the State leaders of the party will put up a slate in a conference and recommend that he run for Mayor once more. But true it is that many think Mr. Broening would be more formidable as a candidate for reelection to the City Hall than he would as a candidate for Governor. His vote on the State ticket in 1926 showed that the city is his citadel of strength.

Friends of Dr. Charles S. Warner of Harford county continue to press his claims for the Comptrollership nomination and the latest issue of the Belair Times gives him great praise. Certainly he has great strength in Harford.

The other day a storekeeper in Oakland said that all merchants would go broke if everybody continued to buy from the chain stores. A customer, coming into the store a few minutes later, was admiring a new stove just purchased by the store owner. "Yes, it is a beauty," he said. "Got it at Montgomery Ward's store." (Yes, this is really true.)

Right Up To Snuff

Baltimore with its parrot fever has nothing on Oakland. Oakland has been afflicted with parrot fever ever since the Ladies' Aids, Tisic Clubs, Pastor's Age societies, bridge clubs of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, W. C. T. U., and S. P. C. A's began to hold meetings.

No fatalities have been reported in this dreaded local disease but a mild case of lockjaw resulted in one instance, and in another instance a man was almost talked to death.

As a result of this parrot fever among the clubs of the fair sex, the husbands about town have suffered long and severe. The effects of the fever are at their worst when they return home from their meetings and the husbands get the worst end of the bargain.

The next thing expected is "cat fever", fatal to all women with whom it comes in contact.

Col. Bell, in his weekly travels, snapped one of the suffering ladies at a meeting of her bridge club. She enjoys being afflicted with the disease.

I had grown tired of living away from Garrett county people. Some friend suggested reading The Republican and I started. Since that great day my corns have disappeared (they are callouses now), I have no more dizzy spells (just sick headaches), the yellow spots have turned to all colors of the rainbow, but I get all the real news of Garrett county—and that's what I needed anyway."—S. Hardware Men Busy

Since the inauguration of the bathtub contest hardware dealers throughout Garrett county have been overburdened with orders for bathtubs, and since these couldn't all be filled before the close of the competition, the date has been extended until Saturday, January 11, at midnight, so that all who wish to enter may notify inspector Kerins.

Inspector Kerins received a card this week from a prospective contestsnt, who signed himself "Bullsling er," but he won't be included in the contest unless he notifies Jim what keyhole to listen into.

Bathtubs have been installed in the homes of the following: Mike Liller, Slim Shaw (he finally came around), Dan Smouse, Josephus Gonder the confederate, James Fazzalari, Charles Tower, Pin White, Bill Sturgiss, and Turk Shartzer.

The other entries all had bathtubs previous to the contest, and the wives of the new entries are praising Scoop for at last getting one of the newfangled comforts into their homes.

Prize winners will be announced next week.

Farm Board Offers Aid to Cooperatives.

In a recent communication to Dr. F. B. Bomberger, Chief of the Maryland State Department of Markets, James C. Stone, Vice Chairman of the Federal Farm Board, explained in detail the exact proceuure necessary for individual farmers and representatives of cooperative marketing associations to follow in order to secure aid or assistance from the Board. This information should prove of real value to Maryland farmers interested in cooperatives.

In the first place, it is pointed out, it is impossible for the Farm Board to deal directly with any individual farmer as it is very clearly stated under the terms of the Agricultural Marketing Act that the Board may, with exceptions not here important, lend only to cooperative associations which are qualified under the Capper-Volstead Act of 1922.

To qualify under this act the cooperative must be composed of persons engaged in the production of agricultural products, as farmers, planters, ranchmen, nut or fruit growers, acting together as associations, corporate or otherwise, with or without capital stock, in collectively processing, preparing for market, handling and marketing in interestate and foreign commerce, such products of persons so engaged. Such associations may have marketing agencies in common, such associations and their members may make the necessary contracts and agreements effecting such purposes.

Under the provisions of the act, however, such associations shall be operated for the mutual benefit of their members and conform to one or both of the following requirements: (1) That no member of the association is allowed more than one vote because of the amount of stock or membership capital he may own therein; or (2) that the association does not pay dividends on stock or membership capital in excess of eight per cent per annum.

Another requirement of the act is "that the association shall not deal in the products of non-members to an amount greater in value than such as are handled by it for members."

In order to effectively carry out the provisions of the act, the Board has already assisted in the formation of several national cooperatives representing particular commodities. Others will be formed in the near future. If and when such national cooperatives are formed, it is the policy of the Board to require that all local, State or regional cooperatives shall affiliate with the national and receive the benefits of the Agricultural Marketing Act through this national affiliation.

It is the desire of the Board that proper reserves be set up by the cooperatives to meet their own particular conditions. In such cases provisions should be made for the ultimate distribution for such reserves and for the distribution of all other earnings, except the limited capital stock cooperatives, upon a patronage basis.

Any such associations as above described will be eligible to do business with the Federal Farm Board without the necessity of coming through or joining any other organization.

The Federal Farm Board is now preparing some skeleton "set-ups" of cooperatives to handle different kinds of commodities that should prove helpful, it is believed, in guiding the organization of new cooperatives and assisting old ones to comply with the Board requirements.

"Baby" Was a Spaniel

By LILLIACE M. MITCHELL

(Copyright.)

"I SEE that the next-door neighbors moved in today, Mr. Bates murmured as he sank into the host chair at the dinner table.

"Yes!" bis wife responded, a trace of bitterness in her voice.

"Surely you have no hatchet to bury—this early?" he asked.

"Hatchet!" said his wife coldly. "Let me tell you whst that woman did—made me the laughing stock of the neighborhood. Thst's what she did. I went out on the back porch whon their things were coming in and I was jnst about to tell her she could boil her kettle for lnncbeon over here if their gss wasn't turned on yet when she let out a yell and asked me if I'd seen Baby."

"H'm," mnttered Mr. Bates. "Hope Baby rests well at night and doesn't try to compete with tbe Miller radio!"

"She's a sweet, helpless little thing," went on Mrs. Bates, "yon know, the cuddly type with blond hair and blue eyes and a soft little voice thst you can hardly hear. Well, she kept looking around, so worried abont Baby that I said I'd go downstairs to see if she was anywhere about. I asked how old she was snd Mrs. Peterkin—that's their name—said nearly three years old."

"Ah, then she won't cry nights," Mr. Bates said with some satisfaction as he looked towsrds his salsd plate with plessnre.

"So I went downstairs and left her wriaging her hands helplessly while the movers tried to struggle past her with a highboy—"

"Say," interrupted Mr. Bates sud denly, "did yon go over to see Pickles today, honey? They gave him some worm medicine last night and I kind of worried all day abont the pup. I wish I could persnade the agent to let us have him over here."

His wife glsred at him and he subsided.

"And when I got downstairs there was no sign of Baby anywhere abont. I hnrried to the Kenmore corner snd looked and rnshed back to the Winthrop corner and looked. Mrs. Wellingford came along and I told her to keep a sharp lookont for a little three-year-old girl. She saw the corner policeman and hnrried aloag to tell him the child hsd got lost in moving."

"I believe I'd have let the mother inform the police about it," said Mr. Bates.

"So the policeman best on the walk with his stick and two other officers came rnnaing along. 'Get down to the corner of Ridge there quick!' the first officer told them. 'The child's only three and she won't know about the crossing lights! Run!' And off they tore as fast as they could. Well, I thought I'd run npstsirs sgsin to see if by any chance Bsby could be hiding in the apsrtment anywhere. Yon kaow, sometimes a child will run into a clothes closet or climb into a cedar chest."

"I know it," sighed Mr. Bates, who remembered the child of his wife's sister.

"By the time I got upstairs again the new neighbor wss all smiles. Bsby, it seemed, hadn't been out of the flat at nll. I didn't stop to ask any questions sbout it hut chased down to tell Mrs. Wellingford and the officers. Why, the way they started off, you'd have supposed it had been a kidnaping at lenst! And they sske a lot of questions that I couldn't answer hecause I hadn't stopped for questions when I heard Baby was missing. Finally I got upstairs for the second time and stopped in to see whcre the child hnd been. And what do you suppose, Harvey?"

"What?" he asked, trying to infuse just the proper amount of astonishment to snit her and yet leaving a little reserve to use when she let fnll her news.

"Baby wasn't a bsby at all," snid Mr. Bates triumphantly. "She told me Bsby was nnder the stove right now and there nnder the gss range was a basket with a black spaniel looking up st me brightly. Baby wss a dog!"

"A dog?" echoed her husband blankly. Then a smile broke over his feantnres. "A dog? Well, if they had to make concessions like that to get a new tenant, I guess there'll be no kick if I get Pickels over here from the keanels, eh? Where's tbst phone book, Mabel, eh? I'll phone them to bring Pickles right over!"

Foreign Language Study

In an address Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle of George Washington university made the following statement: "not only are foreign languages the indispensable tools for internstional dealings of all kinds, but a knowledge of foreign languages snd literature is the gateway to the understanding of foreign culture, foreign civilizations and foreign psychologies. . . . Stndents should begin their study early and should continue at least four, and preferably six years."

EFFORT FOR MORE TRAINED TEACHERS IS SUCCEEDING

Plan Results In Increase During 1929 Over Previous Year—Garrett Among Leaders

Of 3,016 county white elementary teachers employed in Maryland at the beginning of the 1929 school year there were 2,814, or 93 per cent, who held first grade certificates, representing satisfactory completion of a two-year normal school course or its equivalent, as compared with 91 per cent for the preceding year, according to a statement issued Saturday by the State Department of Education.

In the one-teacher schools, the statement said, 89 per cent of the teachers hold first-grade certificates; in two-teachers schools 91 per cen' and in the graded schools 95 per cent. These percentages for the three types of schools are higher than 1928 by 5, 3, and 2 per cent, respectively.

99 Per Cent in Garrett County

"The counties vary in the percentage of teachers holding first-grade certificates from 100 in Baltimore county and 99 in Garrett and Caroline to 71 in St. Mary's and 79 in Cecil and Charles," the statement disclosed. "All except seven of the counties have at least 92 per cent of their teachers with the training desired. The counties showing the greatest improvement in number and percentage of trained teachers from 1928 to 1929 are Carroll, Charles, Howard, Washington and Harofrd.

"Comparison with similar conditions in 1921 shows the phenomenal improvement made in Garrett, Caroline, Wicomico, Worcester, Howard, Kent, Dorchester, Charles, Carroll, Washington, Prince George's and Somerset counties in replacing untrained with trained teachers. In these counties the percentage of white elementary teachers holding first-grade certificates is higher by from 60 to 92 per cent than eight years ago.

Equalization Fund Helps

"With the exception of Howard and Washington, all of the counties which have made these tremendous gains have been recipients of the State Equalization Fund, which has made it possible to increase the salary budget to provide better trained teachers without adding to the county tax burden.

"Counties like Baltimore, Allegany, Montgomery, Anne Arundel and Talbot, which have made only slight gains from 1921 to 1929 in the percentage of teachers holding first-grade certificates, had so large a proportion of trained teachers at the earlier date that there was little opportunity for growth.

"The work done in the State normal schools in training high school graduates to become teachers in the elementary schools, and the financial aid afforded by the State Equalization Fund have been the chief factors in making it possible to approach the goal of a trained teacher in every school."

MT. LAKE PARK

Rabbit fever. Parrot fever. Spring fever. Fishing fever. The former two respond to treatment. Spring fever can be worked off. There is no known cure for the last.

There seems to be quite a little concern among the farmers of this section, especially among those who have orchards, over the fact that, with the exception of a few days prior to Christmas when the thermometer touched a few points below zero, the weather has been unseasonable and much too warm for this time of the year. They point out the fact that for a number of days past the thermometer has been ranging around 60 and even 64 and 65, a point at which buds begin to swell if such weather continues for any length of time. Indeed, it is noted that the buds of the early blooming shrubs have begun to swell, the iris is peeping above the ground, the grass does not have that blighted, brown cast usually seen at this time of the year. In the sheltered coves, especially under the leaves, there is the green of late fall. The trailing arbutus is of an especial vivid green for January, and gives promise of a wonderful bloom.

All this fall-like weather has been very delightful, but if we have severe freezing weather in late January and February, as is sometimes the case, the fruit buds, stimulated by the warm weather we are now having, will probably be blasted. To have two years in succession without a fruit crop in this section would indeed be a hardship on the farmer. While it won't do a bit of good, still we can hope for more seasonable weather.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Louis C. Prevost at her home in Washington, D. C., from a heart attack.

Mrs. Prevost had been a summer resident of the Park for a number of years, where she had a large circle of friends who will sincerely mourn her death.

She is survived by her husband and two children, a daughter who resides in Baltimore, and a son, a resident of Chicago.

Rev. and Mrs. Anderson, who have been visiting their sons in McKeesport, Pa., for the past two weeks, have returned to their home in Loch Lynn Heights.

The many friends of Capt. Hayden will be glad to learn that he is much improved in health, now being able to greet his friends down stairs. He was confined to his room for some weeks.

BIRTHS THE PAST YEAR EXCEED DEATHS BY 210

431 Births—221 Males and 210 Females—Are Recorded, County Statistician Reports

Four hundred and thirty-one births were recorded in Garrett county during 1929, Miss Julia Rowan, county statistician, has just announced. Of this number 221 were males and 210 were females.

This number of births exceeds the number of deaths in the county by 210, the report of Miss Rowan shows, 211 persons having succumbed during the past year. Twins were born in two instances and there were eleven illegitimate births.

Importance of Registration

"There is hardly a relation of life, social, legal or economic, in which the evidence furnished by an accurate registration of births may not prove to be of the greatest value," Miss Rowan says. This is not only true of the individual but also to the public at large.

"It is not only an act of civilization to register births, but also good business, for they are frequently used in many practical ways. If the people realized the importance of birth registration, good registration in all the states would soon be an accomplished fact.

"Following are some of the reasons: As evidence to prove the age and legitimacy of heirs; as proof of age to determine the validity of a contract entered into by an alleged minor; establishing age and proof of citizenship and descent in order to vote; to establish the right of admission to professions and many public offices; as evidence of legal age to marry; to prove claims of widows and orphans under the widows' and orphans' pension law.

"Other reasons are: To determine liability of parents for debts of a minor; as evidence in administration of estates; settlement of insurance and pensions; to prove irresponsibility of children for crimes and misdemeanors and various other matters in the criminal code; as evidence to determine relationship of guardians and wards; as proof of citizenship in order to obtain passport; as evidence in claims for exemption from or the right to serve on juries or in the military service."

An Appreciative Letter From Grantsville's Mayor

The Republican was in receipt of a letter from A. C. Stanton, Mayor of Grantsville, yesterday morning, in which the Mayor expresses his appreciation of a little Grantsville publicity appearing in The Republican last week. The Mayor's letter follows and is self explanatory:

Mayor and Town Council of Grantsville.

Grantsville, Md., January 21, 1930.
To the Editor of The Republican.

Upon my return from Oakland last Saturday I read with pleasure the editorial in your good paper about our town. After reading this article I felt that I should write to you and try to express my appreciation of your kindly comments. I have spoken to a number of our people about this particular issue of The Republican, and they all seem to be well pleased.

I also found several other articles of local interest among its columns, as well as general county news.

We are somewhat handicapped in this end of the county by being so far away from the county seat, but we are rather proud of our little town and I am sure our citizens will rally to the paper that will give us a front page story or an editorial comment occasionally.

With best wishes to you personally, your staff and your good paper, I am,

Very truly yours,
A. C. STANTON, Mayor.

Mayor Stanton has good reason to be proud of his town and the many splendid people residing within its confines, and at the same time every resident of Garrett county should be pleased to know and be proud of the fact that Grantsville is within the confines of Garrett county, for it is indeed a clean town, progressive and with up and doing citizenry.

TREE-PLANTING PROGRAM IN MARYLAND PLANNED

State Forester Says there are 650,000 Now Available

The Forestry Department is planning an intensive tree-planting program for the spring, F. W. Besley, State Forester, has announced.

There are 650,000 trees available at the State Forest Nursery, College Park, and advance applications indicate a greater demand for trees this year than ever before, Mr. Besley said.

Variety of Species Needed

"The diversity of planting conditions, from sea level in Southern Maryland to elevations of 3,500 feet in the western part of the State," he explained, "calls for a variety of tree species.

"The department is meeting this need by growing at the State nursery a dozen different species, suitable for meeting any special condition, but the great bulk of the planting stock available consists of five species of proven worth.

"These are loblolly and shortleaf pine, especially adapted for Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland, red and white pine and Norway spruce for Central and Western Maryland.

Distributed at Low Cost

"Trees are distributed at cost to landowners in the State at as low as $2.50 per thousand for seedlings to $10 per thousand for transplants. It takes about a thousand trees to plant an acre, and once planted very little attention is required for ten years, when the first thinning can be made and often substantial revenue derived.

"Forest planting is the best solution of the waste land problem. Farmers, development companies, water companies and other large landowners are becoming interested and are starting large forest planting projects."

Church May be Reopened

Rev. W. P. Cline, Jr., pastor of the Fairmont Lutheran church, and president of the Synod of West Virginia, United Lutheran Church in America, in company with Rev. Charles A. Shilke, local Lutheran pastor, made a visit to Deer Park Tuesday afternoon where they went at the solicitation of members of the church there for the purpose of conferring with them relative to the repairing and re-opening of the church in that town, which has been closed for a number of years and consequently now much in need of rehabilitation. The conference resulted in a decision to make the repairs required and reopen the church for worship at an early date when the pulpit will be supplied at stated periods by a county Lutheran minister.

LOCAL LEGIONAIRES WILL BEGIN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Committees Appointed at Regular Meeting on Monday Night

The organization of a competitive membership drive was the most important result of the regular meeting of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, held Monday night at the City hall. About 25 members were present.

Maryland is divided into five groups and Proctor Kildow Post comes under the Western Maryland group under vice-commander E. C. Houck. A meeting will be held in Hagerstown on January 31, and delegates from here will be A. G. Hesen, C. M. Sincell and E. P. Kahl. They will be accompanied by O. V. Halsey, Walter Janoske, H. M. Dawson, Ernest Liller and Joseph M. Gonder, and possibly others, it was stated.

Two committees for the membership drive were appointed: 1. Delbert Davis, chairman; Ernest Gortner, A. G. Hesen. 2. Ernest Liller, chairman; E. P. Kahl and Charles Reckard.

May Form Auxiliary

A committee was formed to interview the wives, mothers and sisters of ex-service men for the purpose of ascertaining how they feel regarding the formation of a Ladies' Auxiliary. I. R. Rudy, C. M. Sincell, and E. P. Kahl were named on this committee and it is hoped that the matter will be completed by the end of January and a report made at the next meeting of the post on February 3.

A joint meeting of the ladies and ex-service men, at which refreshments will be served, is being planned for the meeting following that of February 3. "The splendid increase in membership shown at the last meeting gives every indication that Proctor Kildow Post will exceed its quota of members by far," Joseph M. Gonder, post commander, stated.

MISS DOROTHY DIXON IS KILLED IN AUTO MISHAP

Niece of the Late D. M. Dixon, Oakland, Has Neck Broken

Miss Dorothy Dixon, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Dixon, Keyser, West Va., and a niece of the late D. M. Dixon, Oakland, was instantly killed about 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening when the light roadster in which she and Herndon Athey, Keyser attorney, were riding, overturned near Dawson, sixteen miles west of Cumberland. Miss Dixon's neck was broken and one arm was fractured.

Skidding on the snow-covered concrete highway, the light machine plunged off the highway and overturned, according to county authorities at Cumberland, who immediately went to the scene of the accident and made an investigation.

Miss Dixon left her home with Athey about 2:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon, according to a statement made by her father. She had accompanied Athey to show him where someone he wished to see resideed. The car, which was badly damaged, was the property of Robert Bane, of Keyser.

Funeral services for Miss Dixon were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the home of her parents, with Rev. W. H. Smith officiating. Interment was made in Queen's Point cemetery. Mrs. D. M. Dixon and members of her family in Oakland attended the funeral.

Three Cars in Collision

Three cars were in collision on the Crellin-Oakland highway at a point about two miles west of Oakland, on Tuesday evening, but none of the occupants of the cars were seriously injured.

Fred Humes' car was parked along the side of the road where he was putting on chains when Rev. W. P. Cline, Jr., approached from Oakland at the same time a car occupied by Misses Ruth Fike and Irene Martin approached from Crellin. The two girls were shaken up and bruised but otherwise not seriously hurt. None of the cars were badly damaged, it was stated.

SEAL SALE IN MARYLAND SAID TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Garrett County Reports Collection of $200 with More to Come

Although the total amount in the annual tuberculosis seal sale in Maryland has not been completely tabulated, the spirit of cooperation evidenced throughout the state is fair proof that it was a success, William B. Matthews, managing director, has stated.

Returns thus far in Garrett county total over $200, according to Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, county chairman. "The amount for this year in the county will probably exceed that of last year," Mrs. Sincell stated, "as a few have not yet returned their money for the seals."

Eight counties in the state have gone over the top, while some of the county returns are the greatest ever collected in any seal sale. The total returns as announced on January 16 by Mr. Matthews, was $22,623, with several counties and districts of Baltimore City yet to report.

MISS BENTHIEN TO CONDUCT COOKING DEMONSTRATIONS

Demonstration Agent Announces New Project for Women

A series of demonstrations in preparing and serving meals and the use of pattern recipes and labor-saving equipment is announced by Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent for Garrett county. These demonstrations are a part of a new project which Miss Benthien is launching in the county and the exact dates and places at which they will be held will be announced as soon as arrangements are complete.

Among the things that will receive attention in this new project are the factors which influence the amount of time and energy spent in cooking, such as organization of work, types of utensils used, convenience of the kitchen, mastery of a good recipe and knowledge of how to vary it, and other practical problems of this nature.

The aim, according to Miss Benthien, is to take as much of the monotony and guess work out of the preparing and serving of three meals a day as is possible, and at the same time find ways for accomplishing the task with greater satisfaction and less expenditure of time and energy. Since this project deals in the most practical way with tasks that make up much of the routine of women's work, she feels certain that it will appeal very strongly to the homemakers of the county and that a large number of them will take advantage of the unusual opportunity which it offers.

Products prepared by those entering the project will be judged and in that way they will be able to determine how nearly standard their products are; their defects, if any, and the cause, and how to remedy them. It is emphasized that the aim is to assist homemakers in mastering a few simple principles in cooking, so that they can apply them in the preparation of various foods. Attention will also be given to the making of menus that fulfill the requirements of good health for the family and their variation for different occasions and conditions.

Home Demonstration Agent's Schedule, January 27-31

The following schedule was given out by Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent, for the week of January 27 to 31, inclusive:

January 27, office; January 28, McHenry 4-H Club at 1:00 p. m., room improvement; Loch Lynn 4-H Club, at 4:00 p. m., Clothing II.

January 29, Friendsville Homemakers Club at 3:15 p. m., in High school, election of officers; Friendsville 4-H Club at 7:30 p. m., at the home of Blanche Forsythe.

January 31, Oakland Homemakers Club at 2.00 p. m., in Court House.

Oakland High Wins From Friendsville 38-10

Oakland High school basketball team won from Friendsville High school last evening at Naylor's hall, Oakland, by the rather lopsided score of 38-10. Graves with seven field goals led the scoring for Oakland while Maroney and Sollars made five each. J. Nordeck and R. Glotfelty made one each to complete the scoring for Oakland.

Butler, guard for Oakland, played a good defensive game. Substitutions were made frequently.

BOY SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED

Get-Together Meeting of Scouts, Parents, and Officials Will Be One of Features

A get-together meeting of all scouts of Oakland troop No. 1, their parents, members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, the Court of Honor and the Troop committee, will be one of the features of the celebration of Boy Scout Anniversary Week, which will take place this year from February 7 to 13. This anniversary will mark the 20th birthday of the Boy Scout movement in the United States and the 22nd birthday of scouting throughout the world.

Mr. Frank B. Gale, scout executive of the Cumberland council, has been invited to be present on that evening and deliver the main talk of the evening. The occasion will be the first meeting in two years of the scouts with their parents, and will be held on the last night of Anniversary week, February 13. There will also be other features on the program for that night, George Hanst, scoutmaster, stated.

During Anniversary Week more than 800,000 scouts and their leaders, 45 of whom will belong to Oakland Troop No. 1, will stand at attention and rededicate themselves to the principles of the scout oath and scout laws.

During one of the days the scouts will mobilize to do a good turn for Oakland. The scout uniform will be worn every day and members of the troop will participate in civic turns, good turns for their parents in the homes, and good turns in the schools. On Sunday, February 9, the entire troop will attend St. Mark's Lutheran church, and Rev. C. A. Shilke will deliver a special sermon to the boys.

Court of Honor Monday

The regular monthly meeting of the Court of Honor will be held on Monday, January 27, at which time a number of merit badges will be passed.

Two more boys, J. Billy Yutzy and Leroy Stewart, were enrolled as Tenderfoot scouts at the meeting last Friday, after having passed all their requirements. This brings the total enrollment of the troop to 45.

Grantsville Woman Granted Absolute Divorce.

Mrs. Christine Failinger Ackerman, residing west of Grantsville on the National Highway, has announced that she was granted an absolute divorce on December 17, from her husband, Charles W. Ackerman, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment and desertion and non-support.

Mrs. Ackerman is the daughter of Mrs. John Failinger, owner of the Sylvester Ryland farm located about one mile west of Keyser's Ridge, on the National Highway. Her marriage to Charles W. Ackerman, a World War veteran and widower of Somerset county, Pa., proved to be very unhappy, owing, it is alleged, to her husband's shiftless manner of life.

He was employed as a railroad repairman at the time of their marriage and he took her to his home, which was a railroad boarding car. She tired of this gypsy life and the scanty support she was receiving from her husband and returned to the farm home of her mother.

He followed her but did not prove to be of much use on the farm. As his mother-in-law objected to his presence under her roof, he left his spouse and his whereabouts is unknown to her and his Somerset relatives. The last heard of bim he was working at the plumbing trade in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Highwaymen Stop Walter Killius On Mt. Lake-Oakland Road

Walter Killius, Mt. Lake Park, was held up on the Mt. Lake Park-Oakland road about 10:30 o'clock Monday evening as he was walking home. He had reached a point just east of the Weber turn or route 37, when two men stepped from the woods and commanded him to halt. While one grabbed him, the other thoroughly searched him.

Not finding anything of value they turned him loose and told him to be on his way. On account of the darkness Killius could not obtain a very good description of the highwaymen but their voices indicated that they were of foreign birth. It will be remembered that Hugh Echard was held up at about the same place some monts ago.

RUTH SINGS FOR HER HOME PEOPLE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

THE small concert hall was decorated elnborately. Ruth Meade was coming to sing for her home people. As Mrs. Cook observed: "It wnsn't every dsy la the year that a widely known singer honored a small-town hy her presence, and when la n way she belongs to us, it is up to as to show her how we appreciate her coming."

Every one was enthasiastic. "Welcome" la big letters was placed over the eatraace door.

But Mrs. Reed, whose bank accotmt was decidedly larger thsn that of any oae else present, demurred: "I call it ridiculous to fuss so much. Every one kaows she was an ordinary little school girl here."

Severnl women began to speak at once. "One does not remember that now, dear Mrs. Reed—one only realizes our good fortnne la getting Miss Meade to come." Another snid: "My desr, yon have heard her sing, as I have, and yon know how perfectly glorions her voice is. We shsll be the envy of the whole county; this place will be packed."

Mrs. Reed sniffed: "For my part, I wonder at her coming, knowing how well she will be remembered."

Mrs. Cook swung aronad, with little sparkling gilats in her eyes. "Rnth Mesde is honoring ns by coming, and she snid she was glnd to come. Mother had the kindest letter from her, and she says her fiaace is motoring her down. He is s highly respected young man."

There was a triumphant aote la Mrs. Cook's voice ss she murmnred to a friend: "That will give her something to think ahont!"

She was right. Mrs. Reed went home in a temper. She had many times heard Rnth Meade sing, snd her soa bnd fnllen in love with the girl. He, who had never in his life been refnsed saything, had been refused by Rnth. Knowing how the youag singer hsd beea taken ap by the best people, Mrs. Reed had so fsr humbled her pride as to csll aad plead for her son.

At first she praised nnd finttered, bnt finding she made ao hendway, she snid: "I called because I thonght yon were so much honored by my son's offer, yon dared not sccept him. Remembering that yonr mother once worked in my home, I was not surprised."

The only answer she received was: "I cannot marry your son becanse I do not love him."

And now it was explained! The little miax had aimed for some one well known and wealthy. Bat it was nawise for her—most unwise—te bring her fiance here! There wss something very anpleasnnt ahont Mrs. Reed's expression at that momeat.

In the early evening a big car slowly wound its wsy slong the town streets. "Oh, Roger, it seems ages since I saw my little home town. Let ns drive slowly. Oh, here is our home!"

A small house peeped out from between frult trees, the fence covered by roses. Big bushes of lilacs were close by the door.

The girl's blue eyes were snddealy suffused with tenrs. "Mother planted those bashes. She loved flowers—"

A strong hand grasped hers sympathetlcnlly.

By the time they renched the concert hall she was langhing agnin. "Oh, Roger, this is the first place I saag in. How happy I am to come again."

Thea she saw the big "Welcome" over the door.

They led her into the small dressing room to remove her wrsp, snd some of them who remembered her when she was a little girl, loag before a rich womnn took her away to have her voice trnined, came to greet her.

When she stood before them on the tiny platform they meatsily rubbed their eyes st the beauty and simplicity of her.

She felt she must give them her very best, these dear conatry people. She aust not once let herself wish to see her mother's little, upright figure seated before her. If she did she would break down.

The hsil wss indeed "psched" and every breath was still as her voice rose. She sang the songs they knew and loved, but never, never, hsd they benrd her sing like this. A wild bird seemed to be imprisoned in her throst and the notes swelled snd poured forth and held them spellbound.

Mrs. Cook glimpsed the expression in the eyes of the maa Ruth wss going to marry, and was satisfied. Mrs. Reed saw the same look. "He woa't be so proud of her presently," she thought.

But the others could aot see anything properly, for she was singiag "Home, Sweet Home," and they kaew the words came from her heart.

At the end they crowded around her, end it was then she ssw Mrs. Reed and caaght her meaning glance at Roger Burton. She felt sick at heart. Roger was not s snob hut, after all, she wss only a poor, country girl. She had not before realized what it mennt. Her face flamed. Did thst woman think she wss ashamed of her own mother?

Impulsively she stepped up to the pintform again aad held out her hands to them spenlingly. "Just one min ute more, please," she cried. "Before I go I must thank you for your kindness to me—for my mother's sake and for my own. You must realize what it would have meant to me to have had her with me tonight." Her trembling lips would not let the words come for a moment, thea she continued bravely. "She must come befors your eyes nt this minute ss she comes before mine—so brave, so clesn aad always so busy. Tired bnt ever cheerful. Working st menial tasks hut always wearing a smile. And yoa know how very poor was my home life."

There were many wet eyes when she finished. Her eyes tnraed to Mrs. Reed, whose face turned crimson, then Ituth gsthered up a great bunch of roses that had been haaded her at the end of the recital and left the stage.

The whole hall arose and cheered and Mrs. Cook invited Ruth and her fi:ce to her home.

Roger Burton spoke up immediately: "We should love to; you people have s beantiful spirit—something fine to see."

Aad the very first minute Rnth and Roger were by themselves, Roger said: "Desr one, I loved yon before, but I adore yon now that yon have been so brave. And"—his voice grew very soft—"yon must let me take a few of your roses as my offering of thanks to your little mother—for yourself."

No Immediate Danger of Women Losing Toes

Speaking in London, Dr. Normsn Lake told the English Society of Chiropodists that women are gradaally losing their toes. High-heeled shoes, he said, distribute the weight of the body in such maaner that certain parts of the foot tead to atrophy; thus in the future women's feet will become "a large mass of bones with a few little sppendsgea ss toes." And if this should come to pass it would he far from an anmixed calamity. Women without toes woald certainly get more wear out of silk stockings, as they would have no toenails to make holes in the toes, snd right there would he a saving for the average family of about $6 a week. But whether it will come to pass it extreaely doubtful. Doctor Lake is probably an excellent chiropodist, hat only sn indifferent biologist.

The laws of biology being what they sre, no matter how many women wear high-heeled shoes or in other ways mistrent their feet, their children will be born with ten perfect toes, each liking to he tickled, each forming s separate head la My Mother's Rosary. To suppose otherwise is to run squarely sgainst the fscts of scquired characteristics, which are that ao csse has ever heea discovered where the offspriag inherited chsracteristics scquired hy the pareat. No matter how msny legs a soldier hss shot off in the war his little hoy always hss two. This is the rock on which the evolutionary hypothesis has so far pounded itself to pieces; for while it is quite easy to see how aa ape conid lose his tail in the coarse of an active simian life, it is very hard to see how he could transmit the loss of that tail to his son, and thus father a maa. So things look very had for the race of toeless women, and the price of silk will probnbly remain high for a long time to come.

It is interestiag, thoagh, to learn that the English foot doctors have remained chiropodists, instead of becoming pedintrists, as have their American colleagues.—New York World.

Made Mark as Inventor

Among the vast numbers of ingenious inventors whose mark is the heritage of today, a promiaent place mnst be conceded to Thomas Newcomen, who invented the atmospheric steam engine.

Newcomen died in London on August 5, 1729. His first engine was erected in 1712, the outcome of the applicatioa of the physicnl discoveries of the Seventeenth century. Newcomen learned the trade of an ironmonger at Exeter and afterward had a business of his own.—Nature Magazine.

Great Empire's Downfall

The decline of the Roman empire is coasidered to have begun aboat the year A. D. 180 and it continued for shout three centuries. In the year 476 the empire ended when the Coths, the Visigoths, the Vandals and the Hnns took possession of its territories and dethroned the emperor. There were other causes of this downfall besides the inrosds of the barbarian hordes, such ns civil wsrs and internal disorders, weak rulers, degeneracy of the people throngh luxury, etc.

Water Not Drawn by Sun

The sun does not pnll water vapor up. Wster is just evaporated by heat (this heat comes directly or indirectly from the sun), aad thus made s portion of the air. It then is mixed with the atmosphere by diffusion, convection aad the stirring caused by the winds. The rays of light which are perceptible are merely rays from the sun to the esrth, made visible because the sun is shining between clouds, showing up the dust and particles floating in the air.

THE PASSING SHOW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

In the McIntosh camp this week there was evident a great increase in confidence and there were further predictions that Governor Ritchie would eventually withdraw. This prediction was based on the fact that the McIntosh supporters could not see where the Governor had gained any strength since the Concord Club banquet which event was considered his high water mark as a candidate.

It appears that certain of the more influential of the county leaders who stuck firmly by the Governor four years ago have become convinced that his fight for reelection is worse than hopeless. Futhermore, his stock in the counties has perceptibly dropped since last week's banquet. The blunders of that affair are more talked about than anything the Governor said or would have been likely to say about his own candidacy.

It is forecast that before the end of next week there will be further public alignments on the McIntosh side and that these will be of such importance as to discourage the fourth term candidacy beyond measure.

New Deal Promised
As a Last Resort

As a last resort to get support in Baltimore City the Governor is now promising that he will make a new deal of the offices here if re-elected. This means that those now holding places under him will be thrown out to make way for new aspirants. In this manner the Governor hopes to build up a new city machine, seeing that such a large part of the organization vote is now arrayed against him.

We wonder what the police magistrates, the People's Court justices and coroners think of this program. Probably they will take no stock in it when they hear of it, for they know how many promises are made in politics only to be broken. It's an old story.

New police magistrates, new People's Court judges, new coroners, new everything in Baltimore City if the fourth term candidate wins. Of course the Governor can deny that he had made any promises and such denials are usually sent out. But the report that such promises have been made is being accepted at par in certain quarters where His Excellency is getting active support.

We wonder if this promise of a new deal is to be extended to the counties. No doubt that it will be hinted in those sections where the opposition to the fourth term is strongest. Thus the entire Eastern Shore may be promised a general throwing out to make room for this new faithful. It's great stuff.

On top of this new deal promise comes a smoozing campaign already referred to in these columns. The sandbagging policy first adopted by the Governor's partisans seem to have been abandoned in large part and now it is promise, smooze and promise. Honeyed words everywhere and this scheme and that scheme is an effort to pull some influential Democrat into line for the fourth term.

Murray Speech
A Bad Boomerang

Early returns from the counties indicate that the speech of Clapham Murray, Jr., delivered at the Ritchie dinner staged by the Concord Club last week had prompt effect and that many Democrats are red headed about it. True it is that President Daniel J. Loden of the Concord Club had the microphone shut off before Mr. Murray concluded his remarkable remarks, but the damage had already been done, as the speech was broadcast by radio and many Democrats (and Republicans) were listening.

Mr. Murray is a member of the legal staff of the Maryland Casualty Company by which concern Mr. Loden is also employed and the inference is that the latter booked Mr. Murray for a speech in order to show that his company appreciated the large amount of State bonding business it has received under the Ritchie regime. Nothing more natural and fine than this effort to show one's appreciation of business. But we tske it that Mr. Loden didn't know what Mr. Murray was to say nor possibly did the Governor although it is well known that Mr. Loden conferred with His Excellency from time to time concerning the arrangements for the affair. Certainly the Concord Club president would not have invited Mr. Murray to speak at all without the approval of His Excellency.

So now the thing has been done. The cat is out of the bag and Mr. Murray, saying what the Governor may have been thinking and not saying let it be known that support of many of the so-called church people is not wanted in the new campaign for the Executive Mansion.

To date the Governor has not repudiated the Murray speech. He has publicly said nothing about it and so it stands and will continue to stand in the minds of many who were not at the dinner but heard it on the radio.

And since we mention the radio ws begin to wonder who paid for it. Was it paid for? Or did the radio people grab it as a valuable feature and send it out free? How do the broadcasting companies do these things Do they give the Governor this free publicity or does somebody have to pay for it? We never did understand this radio business. All we know is that the radio next door turns on soon after nightfall and runs until it wears itself out.

But the Concord banquet incident shows that one must be careful with the radio. It did Governor Ritchie dirt at Houston when it revealed His Excellency starting a debate when there was nothing before the house to debate and it lost Al Smith many votes because of his East Side lingo.

Some of those who have been discussing the Murray speech say it is only another proof that the breaks are going against the Governor and that the god of luck has forsaken him. And those who are not supporting His Excellency assert that the banquet had a reaction very unfavorable to the fourth term project because so many people object to having a non-factional club used for a factional candidacy.

Tydings Entitled To More Publicity

We mustn't get away from the Concord Club's part in the fourth term movement without referring to the remarks of Senator Tydings. It appears that he, too, got himself in bad with church people by the tone of his remarks and it seems that he might have done better by discussing Andrew Jackson or Thomas Jefferson. Certainly the Tydings speech was no help to the Governor and since the banquet some of the latter's friends have been saying that Tydings was nominated by Frank A. Furst and not by Mr. Ritchie and so the latter should not be held responsible. Be that as it may, it is apparent that if the election of 1926 had to be held over again the Senator from Harford would not do so well. Mr. Weller would get more votes.

Is Loden Striving To Become Boss?

The staging of the Concord Club dinner as a bid for fourth term support by Loden is assumed by many to be evidence that the West Baltimore politician, in retirement for several years, is trying to atage a come back and pay off some old scores. The Governor has been smoozing Loden for some time and not so many moons back he attempted to get a clerical job in the court house for one of Loden's friends in West Baltimore, but failed owing to the objections of Criminal Court Clerk Gross.

Not so far back it was assumed that Loden and Billy Curran were getting very close together, but not so now. Curran sees how the Concerd Club dinner was staged with the anti-Ritchie people barred from speaking and seated in the background. I hear that considerable feeling was aroused over the seating arrangements as well as over the shutting out of the President of the State Senate from the list of speakers. And, as I take it, the whole procedure will cost Ritchie votes in the primary (if he runs) and in the general election if he is nominated. And it doesn't seem that he will have many to spare.

Ennis to the Fore
As a Ritchie Leader

The effort to get the more or less Independent Twenty-seventh Ward organized for the benefit of the Governor brought Election Supervisor Robert B. Ennis, right hand man of Frank A. Furst, into the light. Mr. Ennis has long been very close—politically—to Billy Curran and frequently visited the Curran law office in the Calvert building. Weeks ago it was reported that Ennis having little politically of his own, would stick to Curran, but now, according to the dailies, he is organizing Ritchie clubs.

The meeting this week to organize the movement in the Twenty-seventh Ward, which comprises the nothern annex, was held at the Twenty-seventh Ward Democratic Club on Park Heights Avenue in which Coney Island Whitey is a dominant factor. Mr. Whitey, it will be remembered, was one of those mentioned in Judge O'Dunne's recent anti-handbook proceedings as one of those engaged in the distribution of racing information to the books, with headquarters on North Eutaw street. He is a friend of Mr. Ennis, it appears.

The meeting having been held in Mr. Whitey's club, some may wonder whether this is a movement to line up all the bookmakers for the fourth term. But this could hardly be accomplished because some of the men engaged in this flourishing profession are still much incensed against Judge O'Dunne and they remember very well that he was first placed on the bench by Governor Ritchie without their having ever been consulted.

By way of digression, we wonder what has happened to the handbook men. Judge O'Dunne gave the police the names of the distributors of information and he gave them the location of the special telephone lines. The bookmakers shut down for a few days. We imagine that if one tries hard enough he may still find a way of losing his money on the races without taking it to another city. Baltimore may be considered a bit conservative in some ways but it is not backward about bookmakers.

Great Silence Now
Envelopes The Court House

These days we do not hear much noise emanating from the court house, once considered a Ritchie stronghold. Some of the court clerks who were shouting fourth term day by day apparently have become uneasy about their own situation and have decided that silence is more becoming than loud and unseemly political noises. For no one as yet knows who is to be among the chosen few when it comes to making up a slate a few months hence. The Democratic party, holding the court house, is now in anything but a sure thing condition and the court clerk who makes a big noise may be marked for the political ditch by those of greater influence. In this connection we are told that the Ritchie people have it on their program to ditch Register of Wills Downes and Court Clerks Pleasants and Claypoole. That's what we hear, but we can't guarantee it. But we can say with assurance that nobody ever wants to be ditched.

Early Bird Oat
To Capture a Worm

First in the field for the next election is J. Frank Fox, former member of the House of Delegates and former candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket. Mr. Fox wants the nomination for the State Senate in the First District and if it should be a case of first served he is entitled to it. But as so many Republicans think this year's election is to be an easy thing for them there will be plenty of candidates in the field for every office that will be open and that will mean nearly every State office there is to be had.

In the counties, too, the early birds are stirring and some candidates for Sheriff have already announced themselves. In Queen Anne's county, we hear, there has been a meeting at which both factions of the Democracy were represented and there has been an agreement on every office to be filled except that of sheriff. Usually in each of the counties there are more candidates for Sheriff than for any other position, notwithstanding the fact that Sheriffs sometimes are shot at—especially in these days of moonshining and bootleggeing.

Down in Prince George's county, Mrs. Virginia Peters Parkhurst, a sort of chronic candidate for something or other, has come out again and this time she has tagged herself onto the fourth term candidacy of the Governor. She is, we believe, the first woman candidate in the field this year.

Conley vs. Baughman
Now the Report

Interesting is the report that Col. Baughman, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, who was all ready to go four years ago, is now lined up and shouting for the fourth term project of the Governor, while his brother-in-law, Dr. Conley, of Frederick, is not only demanding a new deal but was one of the speakers at the dinner given in honor of Senator McIntosh at Hagerstown. I have no direct word from the Colonel but the word I get seema authentic. Anyway, the chief deputy in the automobile office, Mr. Schroeder, is a staunch fourth termer they tell me, and as he is a friend of young Dave Winebrenner, that settles that.

Lull in Petition Business

This week we have heard no more of the spontaneous petitions. No one, so far as we can hear, has undertaken to duplicate the work of former Judge Walsh in Allegany. So we have come to think that there is more fourth term enthusiasm in Allegany than there is in any other Maryland county or that Mr. Walsh is the best qualified man in the State to get the voters to sign on the dotted line.

We recall that four years ago there was an effort to get up a third term petition in Baltimore county, but Harrison Rider frowned on it. He apparently did not consider such doings dignified for a Governor.

Childern Not Smarter Have More Advantages

Now Operate Radio, Switch on Lights, and Use Telephone With Ease

Children are always an interesting subject for discussion. Hardly any gronp of peopls who have children can get together without some of them enumerating many of the virtues of their youngsters.

Little Mary Virginia Neumeyer tells her dairy man not to forget her usual supply of milk.

One qnestion that probably never will be settled satisfactorily to everyono concerned is, "Are children smarter today thsn thsy were a generation ago?" Many people think they are not, but that they appear so from the fact that there are more opportunities for doing things that attract attention.

Small boys and girls in modsrn homes switch on the slectric lights or start the radio with perfect ease. As for using the tslephone, many children of tendsr age remember the numbers of places and make calls even with a greatsr degrse of accuracy than do their elders.

One small lady of three and one-half years whom the writer knows rather intimately orders her milk by telephone or calls the grocery store as easily as her mother does. Not only this, but upon occasion, she nses the telephone to check up on her mother's social visits.

Such knowisdge of how to nse ths telsphone hss bsen of particular help to childrsn who have become separated from their parents or nurses in large cities for when they ars picked up by police officers or others, they have, in maay cases, been able to give their home telephone number or street address so thst the happy reunion of the family could he brought about with ease and dispstch.

Older people will undoubtedly say the childrsn of another day could havs done the sams thing if they had had the advantages of the present day child And so the argumsnt goes on indefinitely and prohsbly never will be settled to everyone's complete satisfaction.

FOREST FIRE LOSSES IN 1929 REDUCED $175,000

Number of Forest Fires Also Greatly Reduced, According to State Forester F. W. Besley

Fire loss to the forests of Maryland was cut approximately $175,000 during the year 1929, and the number of forest fires was greatly reduced, accoding to F. W. Besley, chief of the State Department of Forestry. Mr. Besley attributes the improved system of protecting Maryland forests against the ravages of fire to the scientific organization of fire patrolmen throughout the State and intelligent cooperation on the part of landowners and farmers.

The damage caused by forest fires in the state last year amounted to $75,262, as compared with $257,553 during 1928. These figures, according to State Forester Besley, are important, as they reflect the effective work of one branch of the State Department of Forestry.

$7,172 Expenses

Expense incurred in fighting the fires amounted to $7,172 for last year as compared with $7,842 for the preceding year. The appreciable cut in the great damage done to the forests of the state emphasizes the importance of an effective fire-fighting patrol in the counties, Mr. Besley said.

Prior to the organization of the fire patrols as they are constituted today forests and timberland valued at millions of dollars were destroyed by fires which were preventable. In many cases damage amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars was caused by willful neglect on the part of farm tenants, Mr. Besley asserted.

There are now 550 trained fire wardens and fire patrolmen in the counties of the state and, with the exception of deputy foresters, pay is only received for actual fire-fighting work.

Mr. Besley and his assistants, working in conjunction with the forestry experts of the University of Maryland, have organized the fire-fighting companies in stragetic sections thruout the state.

Fire Towers

At high points in the counties of the state there are towers from which fire wardens watch. There are fourteen such towers and when the warden spots smoke, which he determines to be the beginning of a forest fire, he calls out his fire patrolmen. The department is equipped with fire-fighting apparatus.

Enforcement of the forest fire law enacted by the Legislature of 1929, the cooperation of railroads and educational campaigns have aided in reducing the number of fires, Mr. Besley declared.

Mr. Besley said:

"In recent years many fires which developed into forest conflagrations were caused by careless brush burners. Tenants would burn off a sedge field and not take precaution to prevent the flames reaching the adjoining forest.

Fire Laws

"The last Legislature enacted a law carrying a fine and imprisonment for a year for a person who willfully permitted a brush fire to get beyond control. As a consequence brush fires, which in previous years caused nearly 50 per cent of the forest fires, have been reduced more than half. Nearly one-quarter of the fires are yet caused by careless hunters.

"The law requiring railroads to clear annually a 100-foot strip along such portions of their right-of-way as have been declared fire hazards has greatly reduced the number of fires caused by locomotives. The railroads have given the forestry department splendid cooperation.

"Another commendable feature for control and reduction of forest fires is the fact that a number of large landowners maintain private patrols on their forest lands.

"Scores of fire-fighting crews have been organized throughout the state. These men are not paid except when they respond to call and they receive wages only for the actual time engaged in fighting the flames. These crews have done splendid work. Forest fire-fighting has been reduced to a science and we find that effective work is accomplished by men trained by the forest wardens."

REVOLUTION vs. EVOLUTION

An organization originating in Geneva, Switzerland, dispatches announce, has established its headquarters at Yeliow Springs, O., with the announced purpose of effecting "social reconstruction." An impressive list of names of educators, economists and sociologists is attached to the plan.

Grandiose schemes of "social reconstruction" while you wait are the most serious barriers to social progress. They are based on superstitious beliefs in the omnipotence of political machinery in the field of human betterment.

The extent to which defects in the operation of existing machinery, due to the failure of the human element, are responsible for failure to accomplish the purposcs of this machinery, seems to be lost sight of. The philosophy of individual irresponsibility seems to be widely accepted. Emerson's doctrine that politics and government cannot turn a quince into a peach over night cuts no figure with the sociological pole valuters. Give them machinery from their designs and they can turn out any sort of human they like.

History proves, however, that permanent human progress is a crawling, and not a leaping, an evolutionary and not a suddenly creative development. Mohammed might change the religious beliefs of a nation by an edict, but the only Simon-pure Marxian state—Soviet Russia—has not yet created an order of being that adjusts itself to a rigid revolutionary political mechanism, even under an unlimited autocracy.

It is a trite but neverthelcss true statement that you can regenerate human beings only one at a time. It is equally true that such regeneration is a slow process. Revolutionary changes can be effected suddenly only by the application of state force. And that state force may prove to be a menace rather than a blessing, because there is no assurance that it will be controiled by altruism. Once created such machinery may become an instrument of tyranny, of corruption, and of enslavement. The fact that it is beneficial up to a certain point, does not provc that it may not be harmful beyond that point. And the machine may be broken into fragments by putting it to uses beyond its powers.

Human nature is not a satisfactory subject for laboratory examination. It is the most complex and baffling thing we know anything about. Human beings cannot be regimented and classified, with any certainty of correct conclusions. Generalizations based on social surveys present facts of significance, but most of the truth about human beings is like an iceberg —two thirds out of sight.

The schools, churches and homes are thc three agencies most effective for human improvement. They are incapable of mass production. This is the field in which the old system of individual handiwork is, and ever will remain, supreme. When near-at-hand duties are abandoned for visionary schemes of regeneration by mass methods, human betterment stops entirely. It is for this reason that mass production schemes of virtue and wisdom are obstacles to progres.

One instinct to human nature in this country at least, is that for individual liberty and personal self-determination. Anyone can exchange that for assured bed and board in the county infirmary; yet few do it except under the most extreme necessity.

Human happiness and human progress would be impossibie in a state which had becbme a gigantic eleemosynary institution, even though it were well conducted. But in the conversion of a goverr ment into such an institution, there is no guarantee that it would be well managed. The eminent academicals who patronize the people with their plans for making them wards of a paternalism they assume may be benevolent, but which would more probably be tyrinnical, are blcssed with more vision than eyesight.

The self-styled intellectuals claim for thmesclves a leadership in progress they do not possess. "See what a dust we are raising," said the fly on on the cartwheel. Progress gets its slow momentum from the mass, which in turn originates in the self-improvement of the individual through the means at his command. Existing means of self-improvement are too much neglected in the pursuit of devices expected to make men virtuous and efficient in spite of themselves.

Scientists claim that human life has existed for three hundred thousand years. Those who contemplate that fact and then conclude that they can by some political or economical process revolutionize in a jiffy are seized with an egotism difficult to comprehend. They may be able to explode society but they cannot thus promote the natural processes of progress.

RUSSIAN RECOGNITION AGAIN

An effort has been made by propagandists for Soviet Russia in the United States to make it appear that two recent occurrences have made it clear that in failing to recognize Soviet Russia the American government is making a mistake.

The first of these episodes was the arrogant reply made by the soviet government to the United States as the result of thc American note to China and Russia calling attention to their mutual agreement with the United States and fifty-two other nations to abstain from war as a means of settling international controversies. It was said that we were speaking out of turn because we had not recognized Russia. But we had experimentally recognized Russia to the extent of entering upon a peace pact with her and when vlolation occurred, we were told in effect that Russia regards such pacts as one-sided arrangements binding on the other nations but not on Russia. That being true, we are on notice that Russia does not not regard herscif as bound by international law or agreements, and recognition of such a government with the establishment of diplomatic relations, becomes a fa[illegible]

The second episode was the call upon Soviet Russia for aid in finding American flyers lost in the Arctic. It was said that it was most unfortunate that we were unable to ask for help in rescuing them through diplomatic channels. But it will be remembered that a few weeks ago the American coast guard saved the lives and the machine of the soviet flyers off the coast of Alaska without its being necessary for anybody to make a request, and Canada, without suggestion from the American government, set a rescue expedition in motion for the American flyers.

The Third International, which controls the soviet government, persistently broadcasts to the world its intention of overthrowing by armed revolution all non-communist countries. This is in effect a declaration of war against all non-bolshevik governments. Recognition of Soviet Russia merely implies the admission to this country of an agency publicly committed to the fomenting of armed insurrection in the United States.

A Choice Between Civilizations

The ultimate type of civilization developed in this country will be determined by the final attitude taken by the American people upon the prohibition question. Ultimately the issue is not merely how much alcohol may we be permitted in legal beverages, but whether the nation will continue to develop our high pressure industrial civilization or, abandoning this, revert to some modification of one of the various "cultures" prevalent in Europe.

Compared to thc ancient civilizations in the wine countries of the world, American life may seem crude to some. Mass production is one of the keynotes of our life. Standardization is a shibboleth. We have set our tempo not to the measured pace of an historic past—altbough we have, through inheritance, an equal claim upon those legacies of history bequeathed by the past generations of Europe—but to the present and the future. In that quickened pace of swiftly moving men and machinery, there is no place for the retarding enemy of speed, beverage alcohol.

America may make herself a pale copy of Europe on a magnified scale with the wine and the beer which hitherto have been one of the significant factors in the character of civilization Europe has developed. We may turn from our high-pressure industrial methods to the slower speed by which European workers earn from one-fourth to one-tenth the amount an American worker receives for a day's work. Instead of our present ratio of 1 automobile for every 5 people, we might reduce this number to the ratio of 1 to each 64 people, which prevails throughout the world outside of the United States. Instead of democracy, we might devise a statcly, although parasitic, aristocracy. We might turn savings accounts into debts and exchange the widely diffused comfort and ease of the average American worker for the iess enviable condition of his European fellow. We might substitute for the gateways of opportunity the swinging doors of the debit, the taverns, the inn, and the wine shop. It could be done. More, it would be done if the apologists for the vintner and the brewer should have their way. But in the way of realization of their aims there stands the cold common sense of the American citizen who prefers crude American prosperity with prohibition to the alternatives presented by the wine lands of the world.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Christian Slabach reported the finding of a hen's egg in his hen house that measured in circumference six and one-half inches by eight inches and weighed four ounces.

The ravages of the grip was reported with a large number of victims in town and the vicinity, but it was thought to be abating.

An excursion to Washington, D. C., for January 30 over the Baltimore and Ohio, was advertised at the low rate of $6.20 for the round trip.

Comment on weather conditions was made as follows: "This unusual and wholly unnatural winter weather has been made the subject both of remarks and theories. If we are to have any cold weather with snow and good sledding during the present winter, it is still to come. Lilac bushes have put forth their leaves and are the size of squirrels' ears and on all sides are evidences of spring instead of midwinter."

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Miss Mollie McCall, Oak street, narrowly escaped death last Thursday afternoon because of fumes of gas escaping from a stove in a room occupied by the young woman. She had fallen asleep in her room and was in a semi-conscious condition when discovered by members of her family. Dr. Legge rendered medical aid

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hammond left Oakland on Monday for Florida where they planned to spend the halance of the winter.

Mr. George D. Browning, Swallow Falls, was registered at the Fryantz Hotel as a guest.

W. A. Smith, Meshach Mattingly, Jos. H. McRobie, Clarence V. Guard, J. M. Durst and William Miller were named directors of the Garrett County Telephone Company. Mr. Smith was elcctcd president; D. S. Custer, vice-president; C. V. Guard, secretary, and J. A. DeWitt, treasurer.

Shortly after the curtain went up for the first act in the comedy-drama "Sunset Ranche," produced Wednesday night in the Oakland Opera House by a traveling troupe, the leading lady accidentally shot herself in the hand. Fortunately the revolver was loaded with a stage shell, and after a delay of a few minutes the play was resumed with the injured woman taking part.

YOUGHIOGHENY CANAL PROJECT TO BE DISCUSSED

Inland Waterway From Ohio to Atlantic Seaboard Attracting Attention of Manufacturers

A special dispatch from Washington under date of January 18, relative to the projected canalization of the Youghiogheny and its tributaries to the Atlantic Coast, indicates that the master minds of Pittsburgh coal and iron producers are giving the project serious thought and consideration.

In last Thursday's issue of The Republican a story was carried, along with a map showing the four proposed routes that, have been surveyed for the canalization of the waterway from Pittsburgh east This article has created much interest not only among the local people but by men in other parts of the country, hence the news from Washington relative to the Pittsburghers' interest may be added to last Thursday's story.

The news story from Washington is as follows:

An energetic campaign in which all congressmen from Western Pennsylvania will participate was opened in Washington today to link an improved Youghiogheny River with the great waterway systems of the country.

As interested leaders laid plans for a meeting in Pittsburgh Monday before District Engineer J. J. Bain, at which the needs for the improvement of the Youghiogheny will be presented, these developments took place:

The War Department gave notice that it was watching the movement with interest.

A statement was issued declaring Western Pennsylvania congressmen never before were so united on an important project.

Every manufacturing and mining enterprise in the locality to be effected by the improvement was called to have representatives at the Pittsburgh meeting.

Government Ready to Act

Assurances were obtained from the proper House and Senate committees that any legislation proposed would be given earnest attention.

The people generally of the Youghiogheny Vailey were asked to cooperate in whatever way they could to insure the successful carrying out of the project.

With the full support of Senators David A. Reed and Joseph B. Grundy, the river improvement scheme is being fathered by Congressman Adam M. Wyant, of Greensburg; Clyde Kelly, of Edgewood, and Samuel A. Kendall, of Meyersdale. Kelly and Wyant joined in a statement declaring the project was on its way to success.

"The present fate of this much needed improvement," their statement said, "rests with those in Western Pennsylvania, who are vitally interested.

"Local Engineer Bain has ordered a hearing on January 27. At that hearing the case for this improvement must be made. Every manufacturing and mining enterprise which needs this additional transportation must be represented.

"Facts and figures will alone be of weight. Everything depends upon the proof of general interest and the reasons which so abundantly justify the improvement of this river.

McKee Discusses Plans

"The task rests with those actually in need of the service to be rendered by a canalized Youghiogheny River."

Plans for the Pittsburgh meeting were discussed with Wyant and War Department officials by W. M. McKee, secretary of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce. He said Geo. H. Ashley, state geologist, would be present at the hearing to give the results of the special study he has made on the potential production of coal, limestone, fire clay and gravel in the rich territory served by the Youghiogheny.

Figures obtained from Ashley disclose that a total of nearly 2,000,000,000 tons of coal is recoverable in the McKeesport to West Newton and West Newton to Connellsville areas. These areas now produce more than 5,000,000 tons of coal a year and evidences is expected to be presented at Monday's meeting to show that approximately 70 per cent of this will be shipped down the Youghiogheny if it is improved.

19-Mile Improvement

The project contemplates the improvement of the river from Fifteenth street in McKeesport to West Newton, a stretch of 19 miles, as a start. Later further improvement up the river may be sought.

The territory serves one of the richest bituminous fields in the world. The Pittsburgh Coal Company already has abandoned its uneconomic mines in favor of its Warden and Banning mines in the Youghiogheny valley. The McKeesport Coal and Coke Company operates a shaft mine there and the largest tin mill in the world, the McKeesport Tin Plate Company is located on the river. The territory contains about 1,200 acres of potential sites for 50 or more manufacturing establishments which leaders of the improvement plan say will doubtless be taken up.

Daley to Attend Meeting

As an evidence of its interest in the project, the War Department will send Colonel E. L. Daley, formerly district engineer at Pittsburgh, to the meeting Monday as an observer.

Others, in addition to Wyant, Kendall and Kelly, who will be there will include Charles R. Shaw, McKeesport banker, president of the Youghiogheny Improvement Association; Major John K. Blake, of Connellsville; A. M. Stevenson, of West Newton, and Maj. J. E. Moorehead, of West Newton, technicl adviser of the association.

Among the active supporters of the canalization of the river are the McKeesport Tin Plate Company, National Tube Company, Carnegie Steel Co., Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation. Crucible Steel Company, Wheeling Steel Corporation, Weirton Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company and the American Steel and Wire Company.

Four diseases—influenza, pneumonia, tuberculosis and whooping cough —were responsible for sixty per cent of all of the reported illness from communicable diseases in the State in 1929, Dr. R. H. The remaining forty per cent were distributed among approximately fifty other diseases on the "notifiable" list.

A total of 60,722 cases of communicable sickness—32,515 in the counties and 28,207 in Baltimore City—was reported in 1929, in comparison with 52,716 in 1928, when 18,358 occurred in the counties and 34,378 in Baltimore City. Influenza was responsible, in 1929, for 24,121 cases, 17,434 in the counties and 6,687 in Baltimore City; pcnumonia, for 4,540 cases, 2,423 in the counties, and 2,117 in Baltimore City; tuberculosis, for 3,102 cases, 1,626 in the countics and 1,450 in Baltimore City; whooping cough added 4,713 cases, 1,155 in the counties and 3,558 in Baltimore making a total of 36,476 cases of these four diseases. In 1928, influenza was responsible for 3,814 cases, 1,640 in the counties and 2,174 in Baltimore City; pneumonia for 4,098 cases, 2,037 in the counties and 2,061 in Baltimore City; tuberculosis, for 3,030 cases, 1,657 in the counties and 1,373 in Baltimore City, and whooping cough for 3,771 cases, 533 cases in the counties and 3,238 in Baltimore City, making a total of 14,713 cases of the four diseases.

There were marked decreases in the total number of cases of measles and diphtheria reported in 1929 in comparison with the number reported in 1928, and an equally marked increase in scarlet fever. There were 1,052 cases of diphtheria reported in 1929—505 in the counties and 547 in Baltimore City—in comparison with 1,539 in 1928—710 in the counteis and 829 in Baltimore City. A total of 3,104 cases of scarlet fever was reported in 1929—1,572 in the counties and 1,532 in Baltimore City in comparison with 2,469 in 1928, when 1,432 occurred in the counties and 1,037 in Baltimore City.

There were nearly 250 fewer cases of typhoid in 1929 than in 1928—a total of 544 cases—443 in the counties and 101 in Baltimore City, in 1929, in comparison with 789 cases in 1928—65 in the counties and 134 in Baltimore City.

Tularemia—rabbit fever—increased from 11 cases—6 in the counties and 5 in Baltimore City in 1928, to 23 cases in 1929, with 13 in the counties and 10 in Baltimore City. Other diseases in which increases were noted included undulant fever, of which 17 cases—12 in the counties and 5 in Baltimore City—were reported in 1929 in comparison with 11 in 1928, all occurring in the counties, and typhus fever, with 6 cases in 1929—4 in the counties and 2 in Baltimore City in comparison with 5 in 1928—3 in the counties and 2 in Baltimore City.

During the past two or three days many of the children, and some grown up folks, have enjoyed the coasting afforded by the light fall of snow during the first days of the present week. The grown-ups who partook of the exhilarating pastime complain bitterly of aching joints, but the children are wholly happy and content.

A recent issue of the Baltimore Sun contained a photograph of Miss Grace Davis and an interview with Miss Davis, who is now in this country for a visit to her parents, having recently returned from Foochow, China, where she was a teacher at Hwa Nan College. Sincell, of Oakland.

Dr. McComas reports conditions in the southwest rather discouraging on account of weather conditions and other causes. For six months prior to Friday there had been no rainfall in portions of Arizona with the result that cotton crops were in danger of not maturing and live stock, especially on the large sheep ranges, were suffering because of the lack of water and pasture.

HOW TO GAIN WEIGHT

"One hundred and fifty-five pounds," exclaimed Dan Thayer in great surprise, as he stood on the scales at Sturgiss' Pharmacy Tuesday morning. "I must be gaining something terrible," and adjusting his eye glasses he gave another close inspection to the point indicated by the hand on the scales.

On his way toward the entrance of the store, a witness to the weighing mentioned that the peck of potatoes he had in his arms might have had something to do with the increased weight.

And no doubt it had—about fifteen pounds.

EXAMINATION IN FIRST AID INSTRUCTION TO BE HELD

Employes of West Penn Co. have Just Completed Course

Ten Oakland, Tunnelton, Kingwood and Howesville employes of the Morgantown division of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company will take examinations for the company's first aid certificates on January 29, according to A. T. Shaw, district superintendent. These employes recently completed a course in first aid instruction given by Walter A. Wolfe, known as a key man, whose instruction work was supervised by Paul Thorn, safety director. Mr. Wolfe Possesses United States Bureau of Mines first aid certificates, given at the completion of an intensive first aid course by Bureau of Mines representatives in March, 1929.

Intensive safety and first aid instruction in these towns was started last spring. Following instruction of the key-man by the Bureau of Mines experts the employes were organized into various groups of classes to be taught by the key-man, under the supervision of Mr. Thorn, whose headquarters are in Fairmont. Eventually it is planned to have every employe of the company in Oakland and nearby towns instructed in first aid. This instruction is only a part of the safety and accident prevention work of the company through which accidents in this district have been reduced to a low figure.

The first aid course embraces all forms of emergency relief in case of accident, beginning with the control of arterial and veinous bleeding, and progressing through the use of the Schaefer prone pressure method of artificial respiration and treatment of shock; treatment of wounds and of burns; bandaging and care of fractures and other first aid work. The certificate which nearly every one in the class is expected to receive, indicates proficiency in the application of first aid work.

Through application of first aid instructions several employes of the company have been able to give material assistance in times of emergency. Recently the employes of the company rendered emergency relief to Hugh Echard thus saving his life. These men are ready at all times to assist not only fellow employes, but all others in case of emergencies.

She Was Tired of Jim

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

FOR jnst two years Marie aud Jim had been engaged. Force of circumstances in the shape of au invalid and absolutely dependent brother had made it impossible for Jim to lay aside enough to jnstify the assnmption of new burdens.

At first they had made plans for a somewhat indefinite future, hut of late they had growu—Marie especially—to seize the present and let the days that were to come take care of themselves.

And then one sunny afternoon wheu an advance spring breeze perfumed the nir they had quarreled.

"Yes, I like you, Jim," wailed Marie finally, "only—only I think I am tired of being engaged. Yes, it's dreadful to say, hnt how much better to find out before we are m-married. So here's your r-ring!"

Stupidly, Jim held out his hand for the shining hit of jewelry. "Of course, dear," he said soberly, "it's worlds better. I'll—I'll try to take it sensibly. Now, let's go home."

If, after Jim had left Marie, he wondered if any other man had been the cause of her dejection, he tried to stifle the snspicion. To he sure, any girl would have grown weary long ago of this monotonous waiting. Well, his sole duty now certainly lay with his brother.

As fnr as Marie was concerned no other man than Jim had ever claimed even one tiny thought. Yet there was another man in the offing—a tall, sleek, not nnnttrnctive youth, who had many times eyed Marie admiringly as they ascended together in the elevator to their respective places of employment. And that man, Bert Rogers, had decided to meet Marie. Six days after Marie's engagement to Jim was hroken be accomplished his wish through the agency of a fellow stenographer of Marie's.

And on the day after he met Marie, Bert drove her in his small but mile-devouring roadster far up along the Hudson. There was nothing slow abont Bert.

Marie, left at loose euds of her own making, found life far more exciting now than it had been with Jim. Jim's money had been limited. Bert's appeared to be ample.

Sents at the latest comedy; supper at the most exclusive little restanrants; summer picnics on distant heaches; midaight dances at softly lighted, glassy floored dance halls—Marie went the pace and didn't stop to wonder when—or where—it would all end.

Arrived the night of the infantry ball, the one annual extravagance she and Jim had permitted themselves. Bert tossed tickets for it into her lap as they sat together on a grassy hluff overlooking the Sandy Hook panorama.

"Not crazy ahout it," said Bert In his biase way, "bnt we might as well take it in."

Other years Marie had not fussed unduly about her clothes. Poor old Jim had thought that whatever she wore outshone the costumes of all the others. Bert, Marie realized, wns considernbly more critical. Therefore she drew on her rainy-day baiance nnd proceeded on a shopping expedition.

Bert's flowers were lavish and showy, and, Marie couldn't help but think, not nearly as frsgrant as the modest bunch of violets which had always come from Jim. Pinning them on, she sighed as she gave a final survey in the mirror. Would Jim ever have recognized, in the sophisticated image which met his gaze, his little Marie?

For some renson or other, uothing went just right. Bert could uot dance—at least, not in that sturdy, swinging way she had learued to love in Jim. Also, she didn't care for the silly compliments Bert whispered in her ear as he held her rather too closely. Jim never would talk as he dsnced.

"Odd, after all," thought Marie to herself, to he dancing with the man who was giviag you the time of your young life, nnd recalliag the man you had grown tired of.

The crisis came at intermission. Half concealed by a screen of palms, Bert threw his arm arouud Marie's shoulder. That instant, Marie knew. Knew that it was Jim and uot Bert who could bring her happiuess in the future.

"Take me home at ouce, Bert," she insisted coldly. And Bert, iuwardly sneering at the girl who wouldn't "play up," as he called it, was forced to acquiesce.

Although the hour was late when Marie found herself at home and alone, it wss not too late, she told herself nervously, to find out if Jim was still free—free to become houud again. Quivering, she stood at the telephone.

"Yes—yes—it's Marie. Oh, Jim, could you come over for five minutes? Something to tell you!"

Fifteeu minntes later Jim stood in the doorway, and straightway forgot that a waitiag taxi outside was runniug up a steep record. All he realized was that Marie was holding out both arms.

"Do you mean you aren't tired of me, after all, dear?" Jim wanted to be sure.

"Well," aud Marie dimpled, "I'd rather he tired of you thau of anything else i Oh, Jim!"

THEY NEEDED A STEPMOTHER

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

IT WAS one of those afternoous when a small town girl with a vacation has nothing to do. Frances Knight, lounging in the porch hammock trying to read a slow-moving story, welcomed the sight of her friend, Bertha Gieu.

Bertha looked hot and tired aud very cross. She sank into the hammock heside Frances and wiped powder and perspiratiou indiscriminately from her face.

"Ted's awful," she sighed. "I can't do a living thing with him. Our housekeeper and Dad hoth leave him to me. I'm sfraid of Ted wheu he's mad. He was horribly mad just now. He told me to go where it's much hotter than it is here this afteruoon. What that boy needs is an animal trainer."

"This trying to get along without a mother is a mess," Frances said. "We've got everything in our house to make us hsppy except a mother."

Bertha gazed into space. This was one of the times she felt more motheriess than at other times. Her hout with her boisterous hrother had disheartened and disheveled her.

"Look! There goes Miss Susan driviag her uew car!" exclaimed Frances. "She's wearing the fifth new hat she's had this season."

"She's a nice lookiag woman for her age," Bertha said. "She was a girl when our mothers were. Fnnny she never married."

"She didn't have to. She's got oodles of coin."

"Nevertheless she ought to marry. She's depriving some good man of her companionship. That's what Dad says."

"Mine, too!" Frances houuced ou the cushions. "Bertha! I've got an idea!"

"Keep it. I don't need it. I've got one myself," retorted Bertha.

Bertha went home rather hurriedly. Fraaces was glad. Snatching her scissors, she dashed into the garden and hegan cutting nasturtiums.

"Here! You get outen there! I want them to go to seed for my pickles!" shouted the housekeeper. Mrs. Bird, thrusting her dust-capped head out of the window to see "what that girl wss np to."

Frances paid no heed. After all, she was the real mistress of the house. When she had cnt a uice hunch of nasturtinms she scooted down the street toward Miss Susan Burke's.

Miss Susan had shut her smart roadster in the garage and sat down on her hroad veranda with some sewing.

"For me?" She seemed a little surprised at this nnusual attention from her young neighbor. "How nice! Won't you have a seat?"

Frances felt a seuse of elatiou. But she hit her lip with vexation when a few minutes later Bertha appeared. Bertha hore a large hook in a gorgeous jacket. Bertha's fsther helonged to a hook clnh aud this hook had just heen handed in hy the postman. Miss Susan looked a trifle embarrassed, hnt she accepted the volume.

Frances perceived that Bertha aud she had the very same idea. It was most unfortunate. Frances made up her mind that Miss Susan was just the kind of mother she wanted. Dad was fairly well off, but they had to he a mite careful of expenditure. Miss Snsan was rich. If only she could be persuaded to marry Dad, Frances argued mentnlly, she'd probably let them move iuto her house. What a wonderful home for a young girl! Think of the parties one could have there! Dad was good looking and agreeahle, hnt Frances had a feeling that he'd need her help if he was going to get Miss Susan. Of course, Bertha's father was well off and good looking, too, hnt he had a drawhack. Not Bertha, Ted. Ted was a horror.

Every day Frances piled Miss Susan with favors. Frequently she eucountered Bertha bent on like missions. Relations were strained between the former chums. Bertha took succnlent yonng vegetables when Frnnces took flowers, she took books when Frances took fruit. She praised her dad to the skies. Ted was going to he just like him—in time.

One afteruoon Frances sought Miss Susan with an assurance she had not before known. That morniug she had gone for a ride with Miss Snsan in the eight-cylinder roadster. She felt a delightful new possessive seuse in the car, the wonderful house, and Miss Susan herself.

On Miss Susan's veranda sat a small, brown, ngly yonng girl, who was toiling over some breadths of coarse hlue-checked gingham. Frauces' nose went up, Bertha's likewise. They sat down with their hacks to the "obstacle." Judy Hoy wasn't in their crowd. She lived in "rooms" and her father came home at night in overalls, looking hot and soiled. Besides, Judy had twin sisters, Jane and Mary, who played in the strcet simply hecause there wasn't any other place for them to play. Judy was younger than either Frnnces or Berths, hut she and her father "managed," with the help of a womnn, who came in once a week, to dig out the thickest of the dirt.

"I'm tenching Judy to make dresses for the twins," Miss Susan said. "That looks very well, Judy. I'll just run in and stitch it for you."

"You've got uerve, asking Miss Susan to teach yen to sew," Frances said scornfully.

Judy lifted big brown eyes. She crossed her thia arms and legs in aa attitude of defeuse.

"I didn't ask her. She offered," she returned.

The ten wagou was heavily laden that nftcrnoon. Jndy ate as if she'd uever seen food before, Frances thought contemptuously. But Miss Susan was heautifully courteous. She even sent a bsg of cakes to the twins.

"Cheek," Fraaces grumbled to Bertha as they walked nway together. Their aatagonism toward Judy made them forget their own matnal jealousy.

Judy continued to be seen at Miss Snsan's. She began to dress better and look happier. The twins, cleau, were really cute. Ordinarily Frances coulda't have kept her hauds off these delectahle tiny morsels of healthy hnmanity. But hecause they were Judy's sisters she passed them by.

The time came when Frances felt she must speak to her father. She laid the case before him. They needed a mother. She'd picked Miss Susan; father would have to do the rest. He listened and laughed heartily.

"Susan wouldn't have me. I asked her before I met your mother."

"Then she'll marry Mr. Glen!" grieved Frances.

"Not on your life. He, like myself, was one of her old snitors. Listen, Fran!" Mr. Knight pulled his daughter down on his knee. "Can you keep a secret? Susan is going to marry Dick Hoy—"

"Not Judy's father! Oh! Oh!"

"He's a better man than Glen and I put together," Mr. Knight said earnestly. "I hope, my dear, when you get ready to mate you'll pick as fine a husband as Susan has."

Carved Rock Temple Is Marvel of Sculpture

On the rock floor of a great, open pit out stark into the top of a hillside in south central India in a 27-foot plinth walk, a colossal frieze of oversize stone elephants. Shoulder to shoulder they stand, appearing to bear on their stone shoulders the weight of the rock temple which rises above them. Five hundred and forty-six measured feet they run, slightly more than a tenth of a mile. They have been called by those with standards of comparison the greatest achievement in rock sculpture in the world.

They are perhaps the most striking single feature in an extraordinary architectural achievement of ancient India—the great rock temple of Kailasa at Ellora village in the territory of the Nizam of Hyderadab, todny the newest wonder of the ancient world.

About the time of Charlemagne, around 800 A. D., King Krishna I came down somewhere from the North into southern India and thrust out the previous rulers of the Deccan. As a definite thank offering to his god, he conceived and started one of the most magnificent temples, stupendous in plan and hrilliant in execution, that the whole long history of religious enthusiasm can produce. Down to the last least detail it was sculptured out of the living rock.

There is not a square foot which is not covered with sculpture or has reliefs, uot one hare wall, not one undecorated ceiliag. They are all closely covered, either with huge over-size reliefs or with minute lace-like sculpture telling in Indian fashion all the detail of the endless escapades of the multifarious gods of the whole Pantheon. It is known as the Kailasa, after the celestial palace of the great god Siva, offering a physical counterpart for his honor and delectation.

The average tourist first comes upon the Kailasa with all the suddenness of an approach to a precipice. It is as nnexpected and as nnmarked as the opening of the Grand canyon in Arizona. One moment you see nothing hut hillside, and the next the great pit is before you; and yon're gazing down in the clear Indian air at a vast pattern of sculptured architecture that is too hewildering at first to ba grasped as reality.—Exchange.

Where, Why, and How?

Just how, when, where and why I write this stuff has been asked so many times that I am going to break down and answer it, not that it matters particularly, but because I haven't anything else to write about.

To begin with, the boss editor orders this stuff for Monday because it is a slow day, usually very little news, and he wants to keep the linotype going. So I start thinking, if that is possible, but over the week-end a lot of papers and magazines come into the office and I must look them over. By Tuesday morning the boss is pretty sore so I face the Underwood.

After two hours I jump up for a visit to Col. Bell to see if he has any ideas. He pulls a couple of old gags and several chestnuts, and between the two of us we decide that somethin' ought to be done to create a stir.

My next trip is to Harned's drug store, but the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work is always in session and after listening a few minutes to quaint sayings of Amos and Andy the boss usually appears and orders me up to the office. Instead I head for Gonder's confectionery where Harry Stemple usually has an idea (I'm not saying what kind). After a rather fruitless search I return to the office.

It is now Tuesday afternoon so I gaze out the front window, and you'd never dream of all the things that go on on Oakland's main street. The hourly exclamation, "Hey, where's some copy?" brings me to my senses but it is now quitting time. So when Wednesday morning comes around I have to really get down to work. There't that contest about the bathtub that I got started the other week and I have to end it some way and name a winner.

Turk Shartzer said I entered him in the contest just so he would get started in using bathtubs, but he said it was too late, he never would get used to it.

* * *

Once in awhile somebody runs into the office with a good idea; just as often somebody else runs in with a bad one; they think Scoop is the garbage wagon of the newspaper copy and want him to write on anything and everything.

About the time I get my mind made up to write on one subject, something comes along to bother me. So when Wednesday morning comes and I am still tearing around looking for ideas, it is no wonder that the contents of Scoop are what they are.

* * *

Another subscriber complimented me today by telling me he enjoyed last week's column so much. But (oh yes I forgot) he ruined it by telling me he had been sick in bed all week and it was all he had to read. I've read catalogs under like circumstances and enjoyed it.

* * *

I said "another subscriber" because I have had a great number say they enjoy Scoop. I don't see how they could, myself, but that's not my lookout. Maybe this column is the cause of the continued and steady increase in the subscription list of The Republican. It now has the largest circulation in Garrett county.

* * *

Charges of driving a sled without a license, passing beneath a red light, and maybe overloading, were almost preferred by Officer B. B. against three young women, Mog-Mart-and-Ed, on Tuesday night when their coasting activities came to a climax at the corner of Second and Liberty streets, just beneath a red traffic light and the watchful eye of the town police force.

"Move on; you're all old enough to know better," the officer ordered. And three surprised and shocked damsels faded out of the picture.

* * *

Gee, I've written almost enough for this week, and still the bathtub contest hasn't been disposed of. Let's hold it off a week longer and see if The Republican readers will not send in a solution to the problem. Who is to win? Who is the best bathtub warbler of Oakland?

Address all answers to Inspector James Kerins, bathtub contest, Oakland, and see the results next week in Scoop's column.

* * *

Oh yes, before I stop, I must correct the error that Miss Jane Harvey married Mrs. Humbertson, as stated last week on page 1. That extra "s" on Mr. slipped in somehow. She's married all right, but to MR. Arthur "Babe" Humbertson.

* * *

There was an accident during the past week I almost forgot to report. Fred Landon, the first adjective in Miller's meat market slogan, "fresh and cured meats," almost ran his head through one of the cases as he was bent over in search of some raw skewers. Fred said he wouldn't have minded the "swift kick" so much had it not been for the fact that he bruised so easily. Fred hasn't been to Thomas since that time.

* * *

That ought to be enough for this week, boss.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Md.

Dates and plans for the second annual Baltimore Livestock Exhibition were announced following a meeting of the officers and board of directors which was held at the Union Stock Yards in Baltimore on January 10. The dates selected for holding the show this year are October 14 to 17 inclusive. Classes in which exhibits will be entered were decided at this meeting and a tentative schedulc of premiums, totaling $3,620, was arranged.

Exhibits will be divided into five departmens, including fat cattle, boys' baby beef steers, feeder cattle, fat hogs and fat lambs. In the fat cattle department there will be classes for carload lots, truck-load lots and individual steers and heifers. Classes for each of the principal beef breeds are offered in the boys' baby beef department and the carload lots of feeder cattle are also divided into classes on the basis of the leading breeds provision being made for cattle of different weights in each breed. Fat hogs will be entered in carload lots, pens of five and individual barrows The sheep department will have three classes, one each for carload lots, pens of not less than 10 nor more than 20, and best wether or ewe lamb.

In addition to the fat stock classes, it is stated that there will probably be a horse show for purebred draft horses and an exhibition of purebred beef bulls, awards of ribbons being made to winning entries in those classes.

A sale of fat cattle, hogs and lambs and of feeder cattle will be held toward the end of the show, but instead of having the entire sale on the last day, as was done last year, some of the classes will be sold on Wednesday and Thursday.

An Interesting Fact

The Submarine a Maryland Invention

It was in August, 1897, that a small group of Baltimore men stood on the municipal dock on the waterfront of Maryland's first city gazing out across the bay and showing great anxiety at the prolonged submergence of a boat that had disappeared beneath the mirror-like surface of the water some thirty or more minutes before. Presently there hove into sight on the surface what looked like an upright barrel, followed by the full length of the little 36-foot "Argonaut," the first practical submarine boat in history. It was soon alongside the wharf and a small man, its inventor, stepped ashore. This man, Simon Lake, of Baltimore, had proved by practical demonstration the truth of Jules Verne's novel, that it was possible to navigate a boat beneath as well as on the surface of the water. The word of this great invention was soon flashed around the world. Since that day we all know the important part submarines have taken, especially in the World War. Also of what great value they have proved to be in recovering merchandist from sunken vessels.

At the present time a plan is on foot to use a submarine to go beneath the surface and thick ice packs about the North Pole. This plan is being sponsored by Sir Hubert Wilkins and Capt. Sloan Danenhower, and next summer they plan to cross the North Pole beneath the ice and emerge on the opposite side. By such an adventure science can ascertain many important facts as to the life that inhabits the Polar sea; the currents that move in these waters; what effect the same has on weather conditions, etc.

While this expedition will not be able to keep in radio contact with the outside world, it will be watched with much interest, especially by Marylanders, as the inventor of the submarine hails from this State.

Lesson for January 26

STANDARDS OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:1-48 (Print vv. 3-9, 17-20, 43-48).

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God.

PRIMARY TOPIC — How Jesus Teaches Us to Live.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Standard of Life and Service.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Accepting and Following the Highest Ideals.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Christian According to Christ.

I. The Characteristics of the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 1-12). These characteristics are set forth in the nine beatitudes.

1. The consciousness of spiritual poverty (v. 3).

"Poor in spirit" means to come to the end of self in a state of spiritual beggary.

2. A profound grief because of the spiritual insolvency (v. 4).

The mourning here is because of the keen consciousness of guilt before a holy God.

3. A humble submission to God's will (v. 5).

This is the outgrowth of mourning over spiritual insolvency.

4. An intense longing to conform to the laws of the kingdom (v. 6).

The one who has received the righteousnes of Christ as a free gift follows after the purity of character which expresses itself in deeds of righteousnesa.

5. Merciful (v. 7).

The subjects of the kingdom now take on the character of the King. Because of the mercifulness of Christ, His followers will be merciful.

6. Purity of heart (v. 8).

Since the King is absolutely pure, the subjects who enjoy fellowship with Him must have heart purity.

7. Peacemakers (v. 9).

The subjects of His kingdom not only have peace, but follow after that which makes for peace.

8. Suffering for Christ's sake (v. 10).

The world hated Christ, the King; therefore those who reflect His spirit in their lives shall suffer persecution (II Tim. 3:12).

9. Suffer reproach (v. 11).

To have all manner of evil spoken against us for Christ's sake is an occasion for glorying.

II. The Responsibilities of the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 13-16).

The world is in utter darkness because of its corruption. The subjects of the kingdom are to live such lives as to purify and enlighten. Their responsibilities are set forth under the figures of salt and light.

1. Ye are the salt of the earth (v. 13).

The properties of salt are (1) Penetrating, (2) Purifying, (3) Preserving. Since salt only preserves and purifies in the measure that it penetrates, so Christians only as they enter into the life of the world can preserve it from decay.

2. Ye are the light of the world (v. 14).

This world is cold and dark. In this darkness the devil has set many pitfalls, and the subjects of the kingdom should so live as to prevent the unwary from stumbling.

III. The Laws of the Kingdom (vv. 20-48).

1. As to deeds of righteousness (v. 20).

The deeds of the subjects of the kingdom must spring from Christlike natures.

2. As to sanctity of life (vv. 21-26).

The duty of the subject of the kingdom is to conserve and sustain his own life and the life of others. Rash anger is heart murder (v. 22).

3. As to organized life (vv. 27-32).

The family is the unit of society. The two awful sins against the family are (1) Adultery, (2) Divorce.

4. As to oaths (vv. 33-37).

Whatever is more than the simple form of affirmation or denial comes of evil.

5. As to behavior toward those who do not recognise the laws of the kingdom (vv. 38-48).

(1) Not revengeful (vv. 39, 40). Turning the other cheek after being smitten, means, after one insult, permit another without revenge. (2) Willingness to do more than is required (v. 41). If compelled to go one mile, go two miles with the one thus compelling you. (3) Be charitable (v. 42). Our hearts should always be open, ready to give to all. (4) Love enemies (vv. 45-48). Love to them consists in: a. Blessing them that curse us. b. Doing good to them that hate us. c. Praying for those who despitefully use us.

Consciousness of Duty

In every heart there is a consciousness of some duty or other required of it; that is the will of God. He that would be saved must get up and do that will—if it be but to sweep a room or make an apology, or pay a debt.—George MacDonald.

Entering Heaven's Gates

Heaven's gates are not so highly arched as kings' palaces; they that enter there must get upon their knees.—Daniel Webster.

150 STOP TEACHING IN COUNTY SCHOOLS TO WED

37 Others Dropped For Failure To Meet Requirements, 1929 School Report Shows.

Of 404 elementary school teachers in the counties of Maryland who resigned last year, 150 did so to marry, according to a statement issued Saturday by the State Department of Education. The number of resignations, however, was smaller last year than in any of the three preceding years.

Forty-four resigned to work outside the teaching field, thirty-seven were dropped for failure to attend summer school or keep up with the requirements for those holding low-grade certificates and inefficiency caused the dismissal of thirty-three, the statement said.

Twenty-Five Teach Elsewhere

"Twenty-five left to teach in other States or in private schools," the report continued. "Forty-eight were lost to the system by illness, retirement or death. Baltimore City took sixteen teachers from the counties and fourteen others left elementary school positions for high school, normal school and supervisory positions in the State.

"Resignations varied from two in Calvert and five in Queen Anne's and Talbot to thirty-seven in Washington and thirty-four in Carroll and Frederick counties.

Dropped for Various Reasons

"Washington and St. Mary's counties dropped seven teachers for low certificates and failure to attend summer school as also was the case with five teachers in Garrett and Anne Arundel. Carroll and Prince George's each dropped five teachers for inefficiency. Anne Arundel lost eight of its teachers to Baltimore City. Four teachers left Caroline and Prince George's counties to go to other states or to private schools. Montgomery had five resignations because of illness.

"Leave of absence, presumably for study, was granted to eight teachers in Frederick and Washington counties, and seven to Garrett county teachers. Garrett lost fourteen teachers to other counties, chiefly because the normal school graduates employed outside the county were offered positions in their home counties. St. Mary's and Charles lost five, and Frederick, Prince George's and Carroll four."

MT. LAKE PARK

Improvements Being Planned

Plans are already under way, so we are advised, for the improvement of some of the properties lying along the proposed hard surface road from Loch Lynn Heights to Gorman. With this road completed both the Park and Loch Lynn Heights as well as Oakland, will be on a direct highway to the east, which will be taken advantage of by tourists bound eastward. This should be an added incentive for not only the individual property owners, but the municipalities as well, to begin the formulation of plans for permanent improvements. This work means added assets for both communities, for all of the money spent for labor and much of the material, will be spent at home. Now, if the Park Association will give us a good series of programs and do some real honest to goodness advertising, both locally and abroad, we will see this section of the mountain top again come into its own.

Speaking of activity, there is not much of that sort of thing in these parts. We would like to give the readers of this column, especially our summer residents, a chatty, newsy letter each week. But it just can't be done.

We might fill our allotted space by telling you how beautiful is the winter scene today, with the Backbone Mountain faintly discernable in the distance, with the hills and glades covered by snow and the shrubbery and tree tops sparkling like diamonds. But we have done that before. We might discuss with you the low cost of being good and the high cost of bad liquor. But that would not be news.

We in this quiet spot, do a good deal of reading; some solid and enlightening, some light and entertaining. For instance, we found in a hidden corner of the library a book entitled, "The Cocktail Book, Revised Edition." In a reminiscent mood we idly turned the pages and learned how the cocktail got its name; how to make a "velvet," a "duplex," a "rose," and a "claret cobbler." Then we found how to make a "stinger." We then knew that we had happened on a book of ancient vintage, for the present day "hootch" carries a "stinger" all its own—and nobody, after the first trial, longs for a second.

So we decided to write nothing this week, and but for one or two items, we succeeded beautifully.

There is one thing that will be read with interest by many who attend and are deeply concerned in the School of Missions, and that is, Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, local chairman of the organization, is now engaged in securing talent for the platform for the 1930 sessions of the school, the date of which has not yet been definitely settled, but will be within a week or ten days. As heretofore, nothing but the best talent available for the school will be engaged. Last year the school was larger than ever and this year it is the hope that last year's record will be broken both in attendance and registration of the young people.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 53. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, JANUARY 30, 1930. NUMBER 50.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES IN SCHOOL BOARD VACANCY

Result After Meeting of Democrat Committee Remains the Same Prevailing December 7

The deadlock among the members of the Democratic State Central Committee of Garrett county which has prevailed in that body since December 7 at which time the names of two men to fill one vacancy in the office of the Board of Education, caused by the death of the late John O. Thayer, continues following a second meeting of the committee held at the office of Attorney Asa T. Matthews, a member of the committee, on Monday evening of this week and which was attended by the entire personnel of the committee.

Following a three-hour session of the body the vote remained three to three for Stuart F. Hamill and Robert W. Sheckels the two original nominees on December 7 after an unsuccessful attempt to harmonize the difference of opinion existing among the members.

As a compromise on the part of those backing Mr. Sheckels for the place, the names of Charles O. Keller, of Grantsville, and Chauncey E. Ellithorp, of Bittinger, were suggested, but the backers of Mr. Hamill stood firmly for his appointment. At the close of the meeting Monday night the vote stood William R. Browning, Robert W. Sheckels and U. O. Blocher, in favor of Mr. Sheckels' appointment. Mr. Hamill's champions were Miss Frances Hamill, Norval Speelman and Asa T. Matthews. It is said that the Governor has been advised of existing conditions. What he will do in the matter remains to be seen. Mr. Henry M. Speicher, of Accident, Republican, has been recommended for the place by the Republican State Central Committee. Mr. Speicher's appointment is being urged by Senator Naylor and also by the Garrett county members of the House of Delegates, who are all Republicans. Aside from his county friends there are said to be Democrats in the county and outside the county who have been active for the Republican candidate and have endeavored to make it apparent to the Governor that the minority party should be represented on the local Board of Education, especially in the face of a statement recently made by the Executive that the schools were not in politics.

The present personnel of the education board is H. A. Loraditch and John W. McCullough, both Democrats. Mr. Thayer, the deceased member was likewise a Democrat.

Oakland Civic Club Discusses World Peace.

A program pertaining to world peace, planned by Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor, was the feature of the regular meeting of the Oakland Civic Club held at the home of Mrs. George D. Sprague on Tuesday afternoon.

Following the usual business routine of the meeting two projects for spring club work were discussed, namely: State Forestry and Better Homes Work. Committees were appointed to plan some work along these lines.

An address on present moves for world peace was made by Walter W. Dawson. He cited the great sums of money that are being spent by all countries for armaments while at the same time talking peace. He quoted Senator Borah on the following: "America leads in talking peace and spending money for armaments."

Mrs. C. A. Shilke read an interesting and instructive paper on what the church is doing to bring about peace among the nations.

Mrs. C. Milton Sincell gave a comprehensive resume of the high points of the present Naval Conference in London. Her talk was followed by a general discussion of the conference.

This meeting like most of the past year, the most interesting and instructive to those present, it was stated.

Mrs. Arthur Townshend, who was recently called to Washington on account of the extreme illness of her brother, the Rev. Henry Hamill, returned to her home in Oakland Saturday afternoon. Rev. Hamill's condition remains practically the same. He is a brother of Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill, of Oakland, and has resided in Washington for several years. He retired from active work some five or six years ago.

ANOTHER B. & O. POTATO CLUB FORMED IN COUNTY

Makes Third Club Fostered By Railway Company

Plans for the formation of another potato club in Garrett county were made yesterday morning by John H. Carter, county agent, and L. S. Hartley, agricultural agent for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company, and will be the third B. and O. potato club organization for 1930. The other two clubs will continue on their second year project.

The fourth potato club in the county completed its second-year project of the B. & O. railroad last year, and will continue this year of its own accord. The clubs are sponsored for only two years by the railroad company and after that time seed is not furnished to them free of charge.

The new club is composed of Cecil Miller, Roy Durst, Wayne Hamilton, Harold Hauser, Harold Bittinger, Willard Hauser, James Sebold, Darrel Martin, Cecil Kight and George Porter.

Five bushels of tuber unit stock, Rural Russet variety, will be furnished to each of the boys by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company free of charge, and these must be planted on a measured quarter of an acre of ground and an accurate record of cost of production kept by the growers. Improved practices of farming must be used. Prizes will be awarded this fall. Any other boy may compete for the prizes and belong to the club, but he must furnish his own seed, the same as used by the other members of the organization.

RALPH BOON IS ARRESTED AFTER CHASE BY CURRIE

Is Same Man Who Was Shot By Officer Near Kingwood Tuesday

After a ten or twelve mile chase, Ralph Boon, of Cassville, W. Va., was arrested last Friday morning by Officer Thomas R. Currie at a point on the highway south of Red House on charges of exceeding a speed of 40 miles and for reckless driving.

The chase started several miles north of Oakland on Route 37 when Officer Currie noticed that the Studebaker car driven by Boon had but one license plate displayed. The driver of the car would not bring his vehicle to a stop. Arriving in Oakland, however, he did stop on Green street and when the officer approached he stepped on the gas and headed in the direction of Gortner with the State trooper following. Officer Currie, with a bullet from his revolver succeeded in puncturing one of the tires of the fleeing car and forced the driver to stop, when he was placed under arrest and brought back to Oakland where he was fined $25 for exceeding the speed limit, $10 and costs for reckles driving and $1 and costs for having no registration card. He was placed in jail temporarily and held until the arrival of his friends when the fines were paid.

Boon is the same man who was shot and wounded in the leg at Kingwood on Tuesday while trying to escape from two constables who had arreated him on a charge of transporting liquor. Moonshine was found in a roadster car Boon was then driving.

The Studebaker car in which Boon was riding in Oakland on Friday was owned by Max Barnes, of Rivesville, W. Va., and was driven by a youth from Cassville. Several gasoline cans, all empty, were found in the back of the car at that time.

Plans Progressing for K. of P. Celebration on February 14.

Plans for the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias of Oakland, are progressing. The affair will occur on Friday, February 14 at Castle Hall, and will be in charge of a committee of the lodge membership, as announced a short time ago by I. R. Rudy, presiding officer of the organization.

The occasion will also be the celebration of the sixty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the national order and the celebration of the birthday of Dr. Henry W. McComas, oldest member of the local lodge in point of membership. An enlarged portrait of Dr. McComas will be presented to the lodge on that evening by Bells' Studio.

The committees having charge of the anniversary are busy perfecting plans for the affair which promises to be an interesting one. All members have been urged to be present by the Chancellor Commander.

FOREST FIRES IN COUNTY DURING 1929 NUMBER 86

Over 3,260 Acres Are Burned at a Damage of $5,981.25—Cost of Suppression was $916.68

Eighty-six fires occurred in Garrett county during the past year, according to a recent report of the State Department of Forestry. These fires burned a total of 3,260 acres, at a damage of $5,981.25. The cost of suppression in Garrett county during the year amounted to $916.68.

The average fire of Garrett county burned over approximately 38 acres, according to State Forestry Department officials. This is somewhat in excess of the state average of 31 acres. The present condition represents, however, a great improvement over conditions in former years. Formerly fires burned on the average as much as 300 and 400 acres before being brought under control. The creation of a much larger force of forest wardens has greatly increased the efficiency of the fire control forces.

Incendiarism was the largest cause of forest fires in Garrett county last year with 36 fires reported from this cause. Smokers caused 15 fires, railroads 11, and brush burning 8. Two fires were reported from lumbering, four from campers, four as miscellaneous, and in six cases the cause could not be determined. There were 13 false alarms.

State Figures

The total of 586 fires for the state compares closely with 634 reported in 1928. The total area burned in 1929 was 17,927 acres, a considerable reduction from the figure of 32,024 acres reported in 1928. Brush burning led the causes of forest fires in the state with 154. Smoking was next in importance, followed by incendiary, railroad, lumbering, and camping in the order named.

The Department of Forestry is continually atriving to increase the efficiency of the organization, and to prevent forest fires through education efforts. The aim of the Department is to decrease fire damage to such an extent that the damage done any will be negligible.

H. C. Buckingham, district forester for the western district, is located at Cumberland and all fire control activities in the four western counties are supervised through his office.

WILLIAM BROWNING, 93, DIED HERE YESTERDAY

Was Oldest Descendant of Meshach Browning, Famed Hunter

William Browning, aged 93 years, 3 months and 3 days, son of William Browning and Elizabeth Ann Drane Browning, and the oldest living descendant of Meshach Browning, pioneer hunter and settler of Garrett county, died at 1:40 o'clock yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon at his home on Water street, Oakland. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia, which he contracted a few days prior to his demise.

Mr. Browning was born at Accident, Garrett county, on October 26, 1836. Following his marriage to Miss Mary Guthrie of Preston county, W. Va., he engaged in farming which he followed during his entire lifetime. Mrs. Browning died a number of years ago. To the union were born Mrs. Lloyd Conway, of Somerfield, Pa., now deceased; Mrs. William D. Whitehill, Salem, O.; Mrs. Ilda Coddington, Mrs. Jennie Shultz, Miss Gertrude Browning and Richard Kenneth Browning, all of Oakland.

He was a brother of James Browning, the late Senator Richard T. Browning, John T. Browning and Reuben M. Browning, all of whom are dead; and a half brother of Mrs. Joseph T. Frantz, of Deer Park; Edward A. Browning and George D. Browning, president of the Board of County Commissioners, of Oakland, and Nathan C. Browning, of Sang Run. His sisters were Mrs. Mary DeWitt and Mrs. John McClary, both of whom are deceased.

Mr. Browning was a man of pleasing personality; extremely kind and considerate of the rights of others and numbered among his friends hundreds of the residents of Garrett county.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 9 a. m., from St. Peter's Catholic church, Oakland, Rev. Fr. W. J. McVeigh, pastor, officiating. Interment will be made in the Odd Fellows cemetery in which his wife is interred.

ALLEGED RAPIST'S TRIAL TO BEGIN TOMORROW

Case Was Removed From Garrett to Allegany County—Companion Sentenced to 21 Years

The trial of Bernard Preston, of Frostburg, charged with criminal assault on Ethel Rosenberger, of Garrett county, which was set for Tuesday in the Circuit Court at Cumberland, has been postponed until Friday, because of the illness of one of the accused man's attorneys. The case was removed from Garrett county, where the alleged crime was said to have been committed.

Preston and Enoch Plunkett, also of Frostburg, were indicted for the same crime and upon the same girl. Plunkett was found guilty at the December term of the Garrett County Circuit court, and sentenced to serve twenty-one years in the Maryland Penitentiary by Judge Albert A. Doub.

The attack by the two men took place at a point on the National Highway four miles west of Frostburg, on June 30. Preston was arrested immediately following the commission of the crime, but Plunkett was not apprehended until August 21, when he was placed under arrest at Detroit, Mich., whence he had fled.

TO LAY FINAL PLANS FOR ANNIVERSARY OF SCOUTS

Method of Mobilization to be Discussed Tomorrow Evening

Final arrangements for the celebration of Boy Scout Anniversary Week, to be held February 7 to 13, will be made at the next meeting of the local scout troop tomorrow evening in the Scout hall. The completion of the program for the get-together meeting of scouts, parents, and interested scouters, to be held in the K. of P. hall, on the last night of Anniveraary Week, February 13; a method of mobilization for the troop on Saturday morning, and what the troop will do for a community good turn, will be the most important subjects to be discussed.

Mr. Frank B. Gale, scout executive of the Cumberland Boy Scout council, has assured the local scoutmaster that he will be in Oakland on February 13, and deliver the address of the evening at the scout rally.

After rededlcating themselves to the principles of the scout oath and laws on Friday evening, February 7, the boys will be guests of Mr. B. I. Gonder, manager of the Maryland theatre.

Pass Merit Badgcs

Five scouts were present at the court of honor meeting on Monday evening in the Masonic club room, third floor of the First National Bank building, and after being examined by the members of the court, were awarded merit badges in the following:

Members of the court of honor present included Harland L. Jones, chairman; H. A. Loraditch, vice-chairman; Dr. W. W. Grant, James A. Towler, Donald Sincell, and George Hanst, scoutmaster.

High School Pupils To Conduct Food Sale at Smouse's Store

The first of a series of food sales for the purpose of financing The Oak, official yearbook publication of the Senior Class of Oakland High School, will be held on Saturday, February 1, in F. A. Smouse's store, it has been announced.

The Senior Class of 1930 is making every effort to make the year book a success, but this cannot be accomplished without the assistance and cooperation of the people of Oakland, Miss Jacqueline Lockyer, editor of the yearbook, stated.

Every high school in Maryland with an enrollment as large as that of Oakland High, publishes a yearbook, and it is felt that the major part of the population of Oakland is back of the high school and its achievements.

"Since the publication of The Oak is the biggest and most worthwhile accomplishment of the school year," Miss Lockyer said, "we hope most sincerely that we may depend on the assistance, cooperation and the good wishes of all to help guide us through this present difficulty."

DARWIN DEWITT INJURED WHEN SLED HITS TRUCK

Taken to Cumberland Friday Suffering With Fractured Skull

Darwin DeWitt, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael H. DeWitt, Oakland, was seriously injured Friday afternoon when his sled crashed into the truck of George Coddington, at Bartlett and Liberty streets.

The boy sustained a fracture of the skull, had several teeth knocked out and his face badly cut. His brother, Darrell, 8, also on the sled, was unhurt except for a slight cut in his leg.

The injured boy was taken to Memorial hospital, Cumberland, Friday evening, where he is under the care of Dr. W. A. Gracie.

AMERICAN LEGION DRIVE PLANS ARE PROGRESSING

Meeting is Held At the Home of Joseph M. Gonder, Commander

A meetlng looking to the furtherance of the membership drive of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, was held at the home of Joseph M. Gonder, Post Commander, during the past week, and also a committee formed to ascertain the advisability of organizing a Ladies' Auxiliary. Very favorable reports were submitted pertaining to the progress and cooperation received thus far, the post commander stated.

The quota of new members assigned to the local post is based on the number of ex-service men residing in the vicinity of Oakland and is as large as that expected in other localities. Three posts in the state have exceeded their quota, and while the local organization is not numbered as one of these, it is making rapid advancement, Mr. Gonder stated, and by a continuation of the response shown so early in the drive, the committees were enthusiastic in their prediction that Proctor Kildow Post would once more "go over the top."

While it is the earnest desire and intention of the committees to interview every ex-service man in the short time alloted, it may be impossible to do so. "To those who may be overlooked," Mr. Gonder pointed out, "the Legion desires to remind them that it never has and from present indications never will discriminate against any man who has qualified for membership by receiving an honorable discharge from his country's service, upon the termination of service rendered during the World War.

"Every man who survives that conflict cherishes uppermost among his memories the splendid comradeship displayed by all during his term of service. In the servic eit was 'Buddy,' and it is still 'Buddy' in the Legion. At the National convention sixty-four resolutions were passed, most of which pertained to matters of legislation affecting the disabled, his dependents and ex-service men, regardless of whether they were Legionaires or among those who should be.

"The Legion always renders the necessary service to all ex-service men in assisting them to obtain the benefits and consideration due them as the result of legislation enacted through the united effort of the Legion. In the larger cities a service bureau is maintained for this purpose.

"The Legion here, as elsewhere, is desirous of broadening its field of activity and to do so requires membership and a keen interest in its meetings. Application for membership is always open, and if possible I urgently request you to join your post and take your place among your 'Buddies,'" Mr. Gonder concluded.

Two Streets Are Designated as Highways For Coasting

Two streets of Oakland have been designated as official coasting areas for the boys and girls of town, according to L. M. Fraley, Mayor, and coasting will not be permitted at any other points.

This decision was made by the Mayor and Town Council in order to lessen the danger of coasting accidents.

The two streets chosen were Pennington street from Crook Crest, and Fifth street. Watchman will be stationed along these streets between the hours of 4 and 10 p. m., to keep a sharp lookout for automobiles. No coasting will be allowed after 10 p. m., it was stated.

CAR HITS SLED, INJURING 3 RED HOUSE SCHOOL BOYS

Two of the Children Sent to Hospital With Compound Fractures —Other Boy Taken Home

Two Garrett county school boys are in Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, suffering with compound fractures and internal injuries, and another one was seriously injured Tuesday about noon when the sled on which they were coasting was struck by a car at a point about 250 feet west of the Red House crossroads, on the Northwestern Turnpike, about 8 miles south of Oakland.

The injured are: Alvin Lee, aged 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lee; double fracture of the upper right arm and internal injuries.

Roy Martin, age 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Martin; deep gash over right eye and badly bruised.

Otis Solomon, age 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Solomon; compound fracture of the middle thigh, deep gash above right eye, and possible internal injuries.

Glenn Norris Van Epps, of Morgantown, W. Va., employed by the Fairbanks-Morse company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was driving the car which struck the youths. He immediately summoned aid and the injured were brought to Oakland by "Pep" Shaffer, Terra Alta, where they were put under the care of Dr. H. W. McComas.

Alvin Lee and Otis Solomon were taken to the Memorial hospital, Cumberland, Tuesday afternoon. Ray Martin was removed to his home. All three were pupils in the Red House school and had just been released for lunch hour when the accident occurred. Miss Winona Wiley, teacher of the Red House school, dismissed the grades for the remainder of the day.

According to the driver of the car, the accident was entirely unavoidable. The three youths appeared auddenly on the hillside directly beside the road and turned into the highway before the car could be brought to a stop.

Insurance Company Case Set for Trial at Des Moines, Iowa.

Messrs. E. R. Jones and W. W. Dawson, of Oakland, with Mr. H. S. Thomas, an attorney of Des Mones, Iowa, spent yesterday in Kitzmiller taking depositions in the case of Hugh D. Strahan, deceased, vs. Union Mutual Life Company of Iowa, which is set for trial during the March term of court at Des Moines. Depositions were also taken by Mr. Jones and Mr. Thomas in Cumberland on Tuesday.

The case arose because of the nonpayment by the Union Mutual Life Company of a policy of insurance which it carried on the life of the late Dr. Hugh Strahan, who lived at Kitzmiller for a number of years and who died on July 2, 1928. The company refused payment because of misrepresentations alleged to have been made when Dr. Stahan applied for the policy and it was then found that the company, being what is sometimes termed a mall order insurance company, had no representative in Maryland upon whom service of summons could be secured and it would be necessary to bring suit in Iowa. Suit was filed some months ago in Polk county, Iowa, and in order to save the expense of taking witnesses there for the trial, depositions are being taken at this time. Mr. Jones is the attorney for the beneficiary of the policy, a minor son of Dr. Stahan, while Mr. Thomas is attorney for the insurance company.

Oakland High School Quint Defeats Flemington High

Oakland High School boys' basketball team journeyed to Flemington, W. Va., on Saturday where they defeated the Flemington High School team 25-22, for the third victory in four games.

The game was featured by the long range shooting of the Oakland team whose members played a smooth floor game with Stemple and Gravee leading the attack on the hoop with four and three field goals each. Snyder and Allman were the main cogs in the Flemington offense.

Oakland was minus the service of two regulars, Maroney and Butler. Forman and Rice, substitutes, played noteworthy games in their places.

A portion of the basketball uniforms ordered by the team have arrived.

THE ADORABLE LIAR

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

THERE are various factors involved in the choice of a husband and Rita Langdon tried to consider them all. Not that Rita deliberately set herself to the task of achieving matrimony. That would have been no task at all, but even the most confirmed business woman looks forward eventually to a husband, babies and a home. And Rita was no exception.

For the present she was well satisfied with her position in the office of the Carpo bookbindery. There were a number of nice boys employed in the bookbindery, but one after another Rita had eliminated them as prospective suitors. Then two new additions to the office staff came to claim her lagging interest—the boss' son and the new young man. And Rita took special care with her fluffy brown hair, her clear young complexion and her tidy dresses.

Rita was sitting very quiet, but quite occupied, in an obscure corner of the dingy stockroom. Soon John Benson, the new young man, came in and busied himself with a pile of book covers on a bench across the room. Rita remained silent, but observant. In a few minutes the apple man came into the room. Every one in that district knew the apple man, a small, gray, bent and feeble old man who tottered from office to office selling apples to clerks, bookkeepers and sundry workers.

"Hello, Dad," greeted Benson as the old man shambled into the room. "Feling pretty spry today?"

"Pretty spry for my age, I reckon," answered the apple vender. "And I've got another birthday today."

"Really! Congratulations. And how old are you, if I may ask?"

"Guess," invited the old fellow.

Benson wrinkled his brows in an appraising look which was calculated to convey the impression of being very keen and searching.

"Not much over sixty, I should judge," he finally ventured. "I'd say about sixty-four."

"He-he-he-he, you're way off," cackled the old chap in delight. "I'm eighty-four today."

"No," gasped Benson, as if greatly astonished. "You surely don't look it. Why, you're as spry and youthful as a man of sixty."

"Yes, sir," chuckled the octogenarian, "'tain't many men of my age can get around like I can."

Just then Sam Carpo, son of the boss, came into the room. The apple man turned to him in anticipated delight.

"Got a birthday today, bet you can't guess how old I am."

Carpo glanced casually at the wrinkled face and stooped figure, then replied:

"Oh, about eighty-four or eighty-five."

The old man's face drooped perceptibly and his body sagged even more, if that were possible. All the joy went out of his dim eyes.

"Do I look that old?" he asked slowly.

"Oh, be just overheard you telling me, that's how he knew," exclaimed John Benson, striving hastily to reassure the old man. "And say, I'm just starving for some apples, give me about a dozen of them."

After the apple man had left Benson turned angrily upon the haughty offspring of his employer.

"Say, you're a fine egg, you are," he accused. "Couldn't you have lied a little to the old man—told him he looked younger, just to make him feel good?"

"Well, he looks all of eighty-four, doesn't he?" argued Carpo.

"Sure he does," agreed Benson, "but it wouldn't have hurt you to guess twenty less just to make the old fellow happy. There's so much misery and grief in this old world that it isn't often you can make a person happy with just a simple little lie."

"Huh, why should I worry?" answered Carpo nonchalantly as he left the room.

As the door slammed behind him Rita came out of the concealment of her obscure corner and confronted John Benson.

"Pardon me for listening in," she announced, "but I heard you lie to the old man."

Benson turned with a start.

"Didn't know you were in here," he said. "I'm afraid you've got me catalogued now as a—er—a penurious fabricator."

"Not at all," Rita replied sweetly. "I think that an adorable lie. It was really a gallant gesture and shows a fine consideration for other people's feelings. I like folks who are kind and thoughtful of others."

"Thanks—or—have an apple," the young man stammered.

Now, this tale is merely intended to illustrate the great influence of small events in shaping our destiny. Of course, it may be that John and Rita would have fallen in love and married even without the initial impetus of this "adorable lie" incident. I don't pretend to know what might have happened.

But I do know that on this afternoon they sat perched on high office stools munching apples, laughing, swapping family histories and telling secrets. I am also told that young people work fast these days, and this information I deem quite correct, for that very same night John took Rita to a theater. Within two weeks they were engaged and within two months they were married.

The following year John set up in business for himself, with Rita's help, and established the Benson bookbindery. A year later Rita dropped definitely out of all business activity, for a certain John Benson, Jr., demanded much time and attention.

Every day a decrepit old man, bent and gray, comes into the Benson bookbindery with a basket of apples over his arm. The head of the firm invariably buys an apple, then remarks how young and spry the vender appears.

"Yes, sir," cackles the old man, happily. "'Tain't many men my age can get around like I can."

And John Benson nods in fervid agreement, for he is conscious of a deep obligation to the old man. Besides, he must maintain his reputation as an "adorable liar."

Standards of Beauty Vary the World Over

Standards of beauty differ all over the world and, as the modern western woman knows to her cost, with her decade. In Morocco a bride is deliberately fattened up with all sorts of "beauty foods," mostly cereals, milk and dates; in New Ireland in the South seas they will keep a girl literally years to make her plump enough for loveliness according to the local standard. I have seen utterly "fat" beauties in the Near East and the utterly flat, unfeminine-looking womanhood of China, where curves are regarded as the height of immodesty. Chinese women strap down their breasts from girlhood, in every way suppressing any suggestion of femininity. Japanese women pin their faith to hot baths and massage to keep the slim figure, for in Japan as in China there is no place for the plump.

Care of the hair is an inexhaustible subject; the Eskimo lady uses reindeer marrow for pomatum; in Fiji they use scented oil and the gum of the breadfruit tree as a kind of stiffener; in the Society Islands of the South seas, where burnt coral serves as hair dye, there is even a god of hair dressers. Totoropotaa is his name. The Japanese woman, whose coiffures tell the history of her life and status, sleeps on a wooden pillow in order not to disturb the arrangement which takes hours to achieve, as I know to my cost, having awaited "my turn" in a Japanese hair dresser's shop.

Permanent waving was known to beauties in the time of Nero, according to historians who credit a favorite of the emperor with having made the initial experiment by retaining three weeks in a hot Roman bath, her hair in curlers securely packed with clay. Chinese wear a "bang" plastered down with gum; the Near Eastern woman rejoices in henna dye which strengthens and thickens the locks and is valued not only as a hair dye but also to tint toes, heels and finger tips. The great majority of women in oriental countries stain their feet with henna, sometimes binding their legs with ribbons sandalwise before applying the dye, in order to produce a patterned effect.—Lady Drummond-Hay in the Mentor Magazine.

Norwegian Hero

Olav I Tryggvesson was king of Norway from 969-1000. He began his career in exile, fought for the Emperor Otho III and frequently raided the coast of France and the British Isles until he became converted to Christianity. He went to Norway and was accepted as king in 995. He immediately began to convert the country to Christianity. Olav was defeated in battle by the combined Swedish and Danish fleets. He fought to the last on his great ship known as the Long Snake, and finally leaped overboard and was seen no more. After his death he became the hero of his people, who constantly looked for his return.

Wasted Regrets

Regrets are a sheer waste of time. When we indulge in them, up again comes the experience we are regretting. So in a measure we suffer our sorrow and discontent again. Surely, to live over again the unhappiness of life is folly of the worst kind. And yet many of us love to keep friends with the untoward happenings of our past. Strictly speaking, we ought to have done with them. They belong to the limbo of the past—there let them lie.—London Tit-Bits.

Dahlia Originally Wild

The dahlia was first discovered in Mexico in 1615, where it was growing in the wilderness of the Sierras in myriads of colors. The Spanish botanists Cervantes and Cavanilles were the first to appreciate the greatness of this flower. Seeds of the dahlia were received at the royal gardens at Madrid in 1789 by Abbe Cavanilles. The first of these seeds flowered in 1790, producing semi double flowers, which were named after Dr. Andrew Dahl, a Swedish botanist.

Grammatical

An authority on correct English speaks as follows in regard to the position of personal pronouns connected by the conjunction: "When two or more personal pronouns in the singular are connected by 'and,' the second person precedes the first and the third, and the third person precedes the first; when the pronouns are used together in the plural number, the first person precedes the second and the third, and the second person precedes the third."

He Was the Last Shane

By LEETE STONE

(Copyright)

THIEF or beggar! Which? His so-called rosy world of choices had narrowed to one of those two for Michael Shane. He passed and repassed a part open window on the second-floor fire-escape of a substantial apartment.

Ah, this was never a bit like Ireland.

The war past, Michael had handed his mother a useless V. C., kissed her with a gay flourish, lighted her long clay pipe for her with exaggerated dignity, and promptly sailed for the golden land of opportunity.

Maggie Shannon's lips trembled against his in their good-by kiss. Both mother and sweetheart sent their last Shane away to seek his fortune with tears in their hearts and high hope in their eyes.

Michael Shane found America difficult and different; so much so that the passing of seven years found him one of the great army of odd-job casuals that ride in box cars from state to state. He had long since stopped writing to Maggie.

So he stared and stared at this open window, up one little ladder length from the pavement.

Stealthily, Micheal was up and in the room. He cautiously swept the darkness with his one possession, a pocket flash.

From behind the gracefully meeting curtains of an alcove, faintly audible, came sound of a sleeper's breathing. On the bureau was a woman's handbag; delicate perfume invaded his nostrils pleasantly and memory rushed back to his lost Irish sweetheart. Maggie Shannon. A woman's room! That's what it is

No! It was not in him. Preying on a sleeping woman. Better for Shane to starve. With a deep inhalation of the room's fragrance, Michael slipped out as silently as he had entered.

Then his arms were close pinioned in a steel-hard embrace.

"Well, my lad, you were not long," the officer searched Michael for the gun and pelf and found only the worn flashlight. "I've watched you ever since you picked this block . . . over to the station house with you now!"

"Why not?" Michael shrugged and smiled. "There's food and a flop there. This was my first job and I did not take anything, so they can't hold me long."

"Let's look at you!" The big policeman steered Michael under a street light and peered into his face. The eyes of both men grew large and round.

"Mickey Shane!"

"Paddy Flynn!"

Childhood playmates; buddies of the front line trenches—there they stood, speechless, before the long arm of Coincidence. Question and answer tumbled over each other for a few moments. Then from Paddy:

"Meet me here at seven. I'll be off duty. You're comin' home with me."

"Did y'ever think o' tryin' the Force, Mickey?" Paddy asked over breakfast.

"Never, Paddy! This is my first time in New York since landing. It's been dollar to dollar ont West with me. . . an' a long walk in between."

"Would you like it, Mickey?"

"Like it? Don't you know it's something' steady I been searchin' for?"

It wasn't long before Michael Shane started on his training for the Force that is known as the finest.

"Meanwhile, 'till they accept you for duty, Mickey—mind you lay around the rooms and get fat—see?" Paddy grinned the Flynn grin. "Ye'll need all the beef ye can pile in around this gunman's town."

One day Michael Shane entered the Bronx apartment, stalwart and immaculate in the neat, deep blue of the "Finest."

"Look what you done to me, Paddy!" A re-born Shane spoke in hopeful, hearty tones.

Paddy leaped up. Eyes met eyes. They shook—a mighty grip, and something fine and intangible passed between them. Strolling together downtown, later:

"Come along, and' I'll show you somethin', Mickey!"

Paddy stopped in front of an apartment that seemed strangely familiar to Michael Shane.

"The scene o' the crime, Mickey boy—r'member?"

"Tryin' to forget it, Paddy. Let's be on our way."

"Sure thing, Mickey; but just a moment . . . 'twas the second floor front you stole into that night, eh?" Paddy compelled his reluctant huddle into the apartment lobby, and using a massive index finger, pointed to a calling card in a brass enclosure.

"Here's the name, Mickey—what do you say?"

Michael leaned down to the card. His breath came suddenly in a soft sob:

"Maggie!"

"The same—Mickey, quite the same! She's been in the land o' opportunity five years, an' she'll have none o' me. All the time hopin' an lookin', she is, for you."

"Paddy! Paddy . . . you're kiddin' me!"

"Buck up, Mickey! It's Shane luck, is is, which never leaves a Shane. . . . Go see Maggie Shannon, man! An' mind, don't ye be late checkin' in at the station house on this ye're first day."

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From the Baltimore Observer)

There are signs of a weakening among the fourth termers. Try as hard as they have, no damage has been done to the lines of the supporters of Senator McIntosh, who now say that the time for conference or compromise is past.

In the Ritchie camp there are hints of conferences to be called with attention directed to the fact that the Governor has not yet announced his fourth term candidacy.

If the Governor intends to withdraw his opponents see no reason for a compromise or a conference. They have a candidate for Governor who is ready to go through with the fight. Signs indicate that the Ritchie forces are much weaker than they were a few weeks back. The Governor's opponents say he has reached and passed his high water mark. He has used his appointees to the utmost in trying to take support away from McIntosh with no worth while effect. Arguments and schemes have been tried by this one and that one. And Baltimore City is the center of attack.

Onlookers wonder what has become of Brooke Lee, who in the beginning of the fourth term battle was the chief stink bomb hurler for His Excellency. We now hear little of him. His paper, the Maryland News, has quieted down on the fourth term subject and devotes scant space to His Excellency's prospects. A few weeks back Brooke was the chief disturber of the peace for the Governor and was trying to read out of the party all those not shouting for the fourth term. Perhaps Brooke's political troubles at home have become too serious for him. Perhaps he has learned at last that the rebellion against the fourth term is growing.

At this date, seven months before the State primary, the Eastern Shore is about as thoroughly lined up against the Governor as it has ever been lined up against any candidate. There is only one county of the nine that any well informed person thinks the Governor can carry and that is Kent—a doubtful proposition at that. Cecil, Queen Anne's, Talbot, Caroline, Dorchester, Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester are counted against the Governor while he will have to do some desperate fighting in order to make adequate in Baltimore City.

It is expected that Henry P. Turner, party leader in Talbot County, will go on the McIntosh ticket as the candidate for State Comptroller. Such an announcement was expected this week but it appears that ex-Governor Harrington, who is one of Mr. Turner's political advisers, thinks the time for an announcement has not arrived. And on top of this it is no secret that the former Governor looks with considerable toleration on the idea that he might get the nomination for himself. This idea, however, is not given serious consideration in Baltimore City.

Senator Dudley Roe, Queen Anne's county, is said to have become convinced that Ritchie has lost face in that Democratic stronghold and he is reported ready to give his support to the Baltimore County Senator.

Ex-Governor Harrington is said to be advancing the argument that Mr. McIntosh is too wet for the Eastern Shore, and holding to the view that only an out-and-out dry can get a majority of the registered vote in that section. Others think the wet and dry question should not cut an important figure in the coming election as the big problem will be the retirement of Governor Ritchie from party control.

No Big Noise

From Billy Norris

It must be discouraging to the fourth termers that they have heard no big noise from Billy Norris, who is supporting His Excellency. It would seem that his best stunt would be to get his club the Fairmount Democratic Association to indorse the fourth term, but deep silence is reigning in that organization. The explanation given is that a majority of the club cannot be rallied for the fourth term. And any effort so to do made by Norris might do great damage to the latter. Surely one would think that if Norris could deliver the Fairmount club he would have turned the trick ere this.

The Ritchie organizers are still busy with the Twenty-seventh Ward but the job is not so easy. In that section of the city, comprising the northern annex, there are thousands of Democrats who will not join the fourth term effort and who do not hesitate to say so. One might think that the Ritchie followers would wait until their leader had announced his candidacy formally before undertaking to organize that big ward. They may do all their work for nothing, as many now think that His Excellency will finally back out.

Not Satisfied

With Dennis Activity

It's no secret now that the principal McIntosh backers are more or less nettled over the apparent unconcern of State Treasurer John M. Dennis as to the outcome of Mr. McIntosh's campaign. In the beginning Mr. Dennis gave an indorsement to his fellow countian without any expression of hostility to the fourth term candidate. But, to date, the State Treasurer, who was counted on to bring a number of important county people into line, seems to have done nothing. That is to say, if he has done anything he has managed to keep it a dark secret, say some friends of the Baltimore County candidate.

Supporters of Mr. McIntosh have recently been among the most earnest callers at the Dennis office and a fair assumption is that they urged the State Treasurer to give some sign of his interest in the trimming of the fourth term candidate. But to such appeals the State Treasurer is said to have pleaded a lack of political influence in those very places where he has heretofore been supposed to have the greatest swing.

Some of the anti-fourth termers have become so much displeased over this situation that they have begun to talk of a new candidate for State Treasurer and that, too, at a time when it is well understood that His Excellency only wants a good opportunity to get at Mr. Dennis and clip his wings even though he may now be singing soft, sweet and low.

Of course, members of the Ritchie group have been saying that Mr. Dennis does not really want McIntosh nominated for fear that it would interfere with his own retention of the Treasuryship. Just now they are probably more inclined to court him than to berate him. But certain it is that if Mr. Dennis would only line up some of the slow moving county leaders for McIntosh his stock in Baltimore county would vastly improve.

Republicans Wait

On The Democrats

The Republican leaders continue to wait on the Democrats, keeping their eyes on the Governor. Their biggest hope is that he will go into the primary and win. Then they would count on licking him as a sure thing, with the help of the unhappy Democrats.

But today the Republicans are not so cheerful over the prospect as they were a few weeks back. The cause of their lessened optimism is the weakening of the Ritchie following, which becomes more manifest from day to day. The Governor's hesitancy is losing him support.

Many Republicans have been saying that they could beat Ritchie this year with almost anybody they might put up. But they don't talk the same way about any other candidate. So it is that Ritchie is the great Republican hope and a decline of his stock at this time, which might mean his withdrawal, is disappointing to the G. O. P. What every true Republican wants is Ritchie as the Democratic nominee. One can hear that everywhere. For the Republicans well know that thousands of Democrats in all parts of the State will vote against the Governor not only in a primary but in a general election too.

And just now, we hear little of the talk we used to hear from Republicans: "Ritchie will certainly be the Democratic candidate."

The Mayor is going to Florida but postpones it. He may announce himself a candidate for Governor but he postpones it. And the longer he postpones the colder the water will probably look, as in the case of Ritchie.

Sheriff Potee

Swearing Them In

Despite the troubles of the Deputy Sheriff's Association, Sheriff Potee is able to get recruits and in the early part of the week he was able to commission twenty men for the duty of wearing badges and joining his association. We understand that each recruit had to pay a fee of $20, which we suppose goes to the maintenance of an organization.

It appears that the batch sworn in this week was recruited from the ranks of the employes of the Maryland Casualty Company and this seems to be a sort of aftermath of the Concord Club banquet. President Loden of the latter is a representative of the casualty company and he is probably helping in filling up the ranks so sadly depleted by the ruckus in the association presided over by Frederick Clement Weber.

MANY DRY RIVER BEDS WILL BE LEFT ALONG BLACKWATER STUDY OF STATE MAP SHOWS

Nationally Known Sportsman and Fishing Editor of Magazine Forwards Detailed Protest To Public Service Commission In Connection With Application of W. Va. Power Company

Declaring that the proposed water-power development of the West Virginia Power and Transmission Company will leave a dry stream bed in many sections of the headwaters of the Cheat River watershed and will divert the streams to such an extent as to destroy practically all of the scenic beauty of that rugged area and forever destroy the "fisherman's paradise," Kenneth A. Reid, fishing editor of the National Sportsman Magizine, has directed a letter to the West Virginia Public Service Commission, setting forth many conclusions, arrivcd at by a study of the topographical maps and the announced plan for the development.

The application for permits for the gigantic water-power development which it has been declared will extend over a period of about 10 years and will mean an outlay of approximately 17 million dollars, is now before the Public Service Commission and hearing on the application has been set for February.

Has National Reputation

Mr. Reid who is a sportsman of national reputation says he has enjoyed the fishing in West Virginia for many years and adds that the scenery and sport is about all of the natural attractiveness the state has left. He adds that if such a development was necesssary because of any great demand for additional power in West Virginia, the step would be somewhat excusable but under the circumstances he urges the commission to give the whole matter more than ordinary study before granting such wide and sweeping privileges.

Mr. Reid directed a letter of general protest to the commission some weeks ago and now follows it with a specific protest showing what the results of certain parts of the development will be.

West Virginia Public Service Commission,

"Under date of December 29, 1929, I addressed a letter to your commission regarding the fourteen hydro-electric projects of the power interests in the Cheat River Watershed. In that letter, I attempted to point out that certain of these proposed developments were inimical to the public's interests, in that they would seriously impair, and in some cases, completely destroy natural assets of the state of West Virginia, that are of outstanding value to the citizens of the state. In at least one case, that of the Blackwater River Falls and Gorge, you have a natural asset that is so outstanding as to be of national importance, as can be easily verified almost any Sunday during the summer by noting the variety of out of state license plates on the hundreds, and sometimes thousands of cars that drive in to the falls.

"Since my first letter was written, I have read the press notice, under date of January 9, 1930, of the hearing to be held before the Public Service Commission in Charleston on February 11, at ten o'clock, which gives considerable more detail concerning the project. After checking these proposed developments on the topographical maps of the state, I find that the application is very comprehensive in its scope, in fact so comprehensive that it covers every sizeable stream, in the entire Cheat River watershed, from the extreme head at Spruce, on the Shavers Fork, to the present Lake Lynn reservoir near the mouth.

Five Projects Cited

"As I have previously stated, the majority of these projects will not, as I see them, adverseley affects the public, but five of them, covering three important branches of the Cheat River, will very definitely take from the people, for all time, some of their finest mountain streams, for which the state of West Virginia has long been famous. These five proposed developments are A, B, and C, covering the Blackwater River, L, the Glady Fork, and M, the Shavers Fork. Developments M. and N, covering Shavers Fork and Dry Fork, apparently cover every possible site on the entire upper watershed above Parsons, including numerous dams on Shavers Fork, Otter Creek, Glady, Laurel Fork, Dry Fork, and Gandy, and possible some others, excepting the Blackwater, which is covered separately.

Subject of Importance

"As there seems to be a very imperfect understanding on the part of the public as to just what the power intcrests propose to do, and what the effects will be, I feel that the public should be given more specific information on matters that are of such vital importance, not only to present, but to future generations. I shall therefore attempt to point out the disastrous effects of the specific major developments mentioned above.

"On the Blackwatcr, a storage dam 78 feet high is proposed two miles above Davis, near the location of the old splash dam, which will flood the Canaan Valley, forming a lake approximately fifteen miles in length. From this dam, the river will be diverted into Beaver Creek. A second dam of 55 feet for power development will be located one and one-fourth miles below Davis a short distance above Blackwater Falls, which will back the water up along the town of Davis and some distance up Beaver Creek. From this second dam, a diversion tunnel will take the water around the falls and into the North Fork a short distance above its junction with the Blackwater. A third dam of 98 feet will be located one-fourth mile below the forks, and from this dam, the water will be diverted through another tunnel to a power house on Dry Fork at the mouth of the Blackwater a short distance above Hendricks.

To Leave Dry Beds

"The net result of these developments, if allowed to proceed, will be to eliminate every foot of the Blackwater River from its head near Cortland to its mouth. From the upper dam of the backwater of the middle dam, the bed of the river will be dry, from the middle dam just above the falls to the upper part of the backwater from the lower, or North Fork dam, the famous falls and gorge, will be dry, and from the lower dam to Cheat river, the bed of the Blackwater will be dry.

"On the Shavers Fork, a dam of 150 feet is to be built seven miles above Bemis. From this dam, a diversion tunnel will carry the waters of Shavers Fork through the mountain into Glady. Seven miles below the town of Glady, a power dam 210 feet high will be constructed from which the combined water of Glady and Shavers Fork will be diverted back through the mountain to a power house on Shavers Fork, from where the combined waters will flow down Shavers Fork. The result of these two developments would be that Shavers Fork would be dry for about fifteen miles from the dam to the power house, a mile or so above where the Elkins to Harmony road leaves it; while Glady Fork would be dry the entire distance from its diversion dam to its mouth.

Will Alter Watershed

"Such a stupendous program, if carried out, would alter the upper watershed of the Cheat River as to make it unrecognizable to those most familiar with it. The construction of a dam in a mountain trout stream does not necessarily ruin that stream, although very often the effect is detrimental, rather than otherwise; but when that dam diverts an entire mountain river into another valley, leaving the bed below the dam a dry ravine of sun-bleached rocks and gravel, it is quite a different matter. This is exactly what developments A, B, C, L, and M would do to the Blackwater, Glady Fork and Shavers Fork.

"If the State of West Virginia were in dire need of additional electric power, or if the cost of generating electric power by coal were prohibitive, (I am informed by the power interests that it is actually cheaper to generatc electricity with coal than with water at present) the matter would have a somewhat different aspect. Since no such emergency exists, would it not be better to consider the proposed developments, one by one, as the need for their development arises, rather than surrender practically the entire Cheat watershed for all time to any private interest to do with as, and when, they see fit?

Sentiment Not Included

"I have endeavored to present the facts, as I see them, from the public standpoint, and to keep away from sentiment, although the latter surely has a place when some of the finest assets of the State of West Virginia are in jeopardy. The State has long been famous for its beautiful mountains and the splendid streams that flow down rugged valleys between them; and it is hard to find a section that surpasses the upper Cheat watershed in this respect. When an application, like the present one of the power interests, promises either partial or complcte destruction of every good sized trout stream in the watershed, it is a evry serious matter.

"Until camparatively recent years, the fishing and recreational facilities afforded by such back country as the Cheat watershed was seldom considercd seriously as having any rcal value. Today, the thousands of people that annualy spend days or weeks fishing or camping along these strcams, or just touring along them, is proof of the fact that these natural resources do have a very definite value—and one that is constantly growing from year to year as more people learn to appreciate and love them. In my own experience, I encounter twenty fishermen today for every one encountered twenty years ago, which is undeniable evidence of the increasing popularity of fishing and of the value of fishing streams. It is high time for changing the viewpoint that sees only so many kilowatt hours in a running stream.

Eliminates Game Fish

"The argument is commonly advanced by interested parties that the erection of dams create large lakes that afford splendid fishing. The history of artificial lakes formed by power dams, does not bear this statement out, at least for the fine game fish that formerly inhabited the streams flooded or dried up by the dams. By their very nature, the shore line is not constant, and the water level often fluctuates many feet during every year, alternately drying and flooding the banks, so that successful natural production through spawning is very unsatisfactory, if not wholly impossible.

"I sincerely trust that such matters will receive due consideration by your commission at the hearing on February 11, and that outstanding trout streams, with their attendant, scenis values, as the Blackwater River, Shavers Fork and Glady Fork, will not be sacrificed in the name of Power Development.

"Yours sincerely,

"KENNETH A. REID."

SOME PRINCIPAL CAUSES OF DEATH IN YEAR 1929

Three-fourths of Deaths Occur in Widely Separated Groups

Three-fourth of the deaths in the curred in the two most widely sepacounties of Maryland, in 1929, ocrated age groups—the youngest and the oldest. The records of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health, show that a total of 10,291 deaths, including those of non-residents, occurred in the counties during the year. (The deaths that occurred in Baltimore City are not included in this total). Of the 10,291 deaths in the counties, 7,781 were listed in the age groups mentioned above—1,303 among infants under a year old, and 6,478 among adults of 45 years or older. Nearly half of the infant deaths—601—occurred among babies less than a month old.

The deaths among persons of 45 or older constituted the largest number in any one age group. The next largest—1,307—was recorded in the group from 25 to 44 years old. The smallest number was 275—the number recorded in the group from 5 to 14 years old.

Analyzing the totals, Dr. John Collins, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, said that there were 7,952 deaths in the white population and 2,309 in the colored. Heart disease, with 1,762 deaths, 1,441 white and 321 colored, was the leading cause of death. Chronic Bright's disease, with 1,218 deaths, 977 white and 241 colored, had second place. Tuberculosis, with 839 deaths, 532 white and 307 colored, came next. Apoplexy was fourth, with a total of 803 deaths, of which 653 occurred in the white population and 150 in the colored. Pneumonia, with 747 deaths, 536 white and 211 colored, was the fifth; cancer, with 709, of which 628 were white and 81 colored, was sixth, and influenza, with 426 deaths, 350 white and 76 colored, had seventh place.

There were 270 deaths from diarrhea and enteritis among children under a year old, 160 white and 110 colored; 43 from typhoid fever, 24 white and 19 colored, and 74 from whooping cough, 46 white and 28 colored. One hundred and ninety-two persons lost their lives in automobile accidents, 156 white and 36 colored.

June, with 682 deaths, had the smallest number of deaths reported in any one month, and January, with 1,439, the highest number.

An Interesting Fact

Rumsey, a Marylander, The Inventor of the Steamboat.

While it is possibly true that Fulton, because of the more perfect plan and his ultimate success, may well be called "the father of steamboat navigation," yet it would seem that historians have slighted, or glossed over by a mere mention, the fact that approximately twenty years before Fulton launched the "Clermont" James Rumsey, a Marylander, had invented a means "for navigating boats against the current or rapid rivers at very small expense."

Like most inventors, Rumsey was considered shiftless by most of his neighbors, and by some he was known as "Crazy Rumsey." Nevertheless, although lacking in resources, he continued his experiments at Shepherdstown, with the help of his two brothers-in-law. General Washington met the inventor at Bath (now Berkeley Springs, W. Va.) and was evidently won to the idea that the invention, when perfected, would be successful, for we find recorded that early in 1784 Washington made affidavit, in substance, that he had seen the model of Mr. Rumsey's boat "constructed to work against the stream." He further deposed that the discovery was of vast importance.

It was during the 4th session of the General Assembly (1784) that the Virginia Company was incorporated and James Rumsey was invested with the exclusive privilege of "making and selling his craft on a model by him made." Rumsey's invention aroused the interest of Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry and Benjamin Franklin.

Thomas Johnson, the former war governor of Maryland, the owner of Catoctin Furnaces, near Frederick, became interested in Rumsey and his invention, to the extent of having forged some of the machinery at his furnace, possibly on a mere promise to pay. The boiler, cylinders, pumps and pipes were made by Christopher Raborg and Charles Weir, in Baltimore. The boat itself was constructed near Shepherdstown and floated down the Potomac River to Harper's Ferry where Rumsey was engaged in Work.

Rumsey and his co-workers made a trial trip at night, probaly because of fear that his ideas would be stolen, there being no adequate patent laws at the time. They were progressing in fine shape, but unfortunately a defect in the boiler developed and before it could be repaired the boat was damaged by a freshet. The final test took place on December 3, 1787, at Shepherdstown. There was great excitement among the people who lined the shore when they beheld the first steamboat, with six passengers on board, formally launched and preceeding under its own power up and down the river.

Major-General Horatio Gates, with several other officers of the Revolution, were eye witnesses, and evidently skeptical, for tradition says that when Gates saw the boat turn about in mid-stream and proceed up the river, he exclaimed in great excitement, "My God! it moves!"

So Maryland can well claim to be the home of the inventor of the steamboat.

WHY THIS NAVAL PARLEY?

By Lucy Meacham Thruston

"But so often I want to get hold of all of a question," I once complained to a newspaper man, "and I only get bits of it at a time from your columns."

"Because a daily handles only the special angle of any question which happens to be most to the fore in the tewnty-four hours of its publication," he answered.

And since the question most to the fore today is the naval parley in Londan opened by King George, in the historic palace of St. James, and since we got such angles as weather on board the George Washington on which the United States delegation sailed, carload and half of documents relating to navel affairs aboard, and so on, it may be helpful to recall a few statistics which have been published from time to time and so present something of a summary.

Perhaps the best known of these is the fact that the United States spent in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, $374,054 upon its navy or to present a tabulation including the five great naval powers who sent delegates to this conference and repeating the figures of the United States:

Fiscal year 1929—

United States	$374,608,054.00
Great Britain	278,478,000.00
Japan	131,222,272.00
France	99,568,000.00
Italy	63,622,982.00

Including this amount spent by the United States under the head of "Wars past and future", and taking the division of the tax dollar as basis, we understand why 72 cents of every tax dollar must be allotted to the same—"wars past and future."

The enormous increase in cost of navies since 1904 may also be tabulated thus:

Increased difference between figures of 1904 and 1929—

United States	$264,411,931.00
Great Britain	104,929,942.00
Japan	113,669,942.00
France	39,827,778.00
Italy	40,100,582.00

These figures are taken from an article in the January number of Current History which was written by Burton L. French, Chairman of the House Navy Appropriations, who adds: "World conditions today are less threatening than they were twenty-five years ago. The world powers economically are less capable of a warfare than they were in 1904. The leading powers of the world have gone through the ordeal of a war that has punished them beyond human tongue to describe and has settled upon the people of the respective countries burdens of indebtedness from which they will not emerge within three generations."

This is the economic side alone. The religious, the ethical, the progress towards higher ideals of all peoples are left out. But the economic side, of necessity, has become the predominant issue. And, "If nations are not stark mad, a way should be found for them to reduce their naval burdens without surrendering one whit of dignity or prestige," to quote Mr. French again.

This conference on disarmament follows that held in Washington in 1921, but at a slightly earlier date than at first anticipated. It is the hope of the world that it will begin lifting of that burden which is not only upon the people's shoulders, but upon head and back alike leaving only a weakened step for general advancement. A man should be able to advance upright. So should a nation. All nations. The naval parley is expected to help accomplish this. Therefore begged President Hoover in his farewell mesaage to those delegates sent to represent the United States, "I hope that the people of our country will cooperate in the progress of the conference by patience, encouragement and freedom from criticism. * * The progress of peace for the world rests in a great measure upon the shoulders of the five delegations. * * They have the will to succeed."

RELIGION AND THE REPUBLIC

George Washington, in his farewell address, said that "religion and morality" were "indispensible supports of the republic." The unorthodox Walt Whitman wrote: "I say that the real and permanent grandeur of these states must be their religion."

Our civilization was established, our government was founded, by men of a religious cast of mind. If they were not all personally religious, their mode of thought had been fashioned in a religious atmosphere. A church was almost the first structure erected by the colonists, both at Plymouth and Johnstown. It was an austere religion at Plymouth, a light-hearted religion at Jamestown, but religion was the most important ethical influence in both these cradles of American civilization, and in the Maryland of Lord Baltimore and Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

No form of ethics other than taught from the pulpit and at the fireside by religious fathers and mothers has had any serious hold on the American people. And in the decay of religious influence we may find much of the explanation of the loosening of moral ties and consequent growth of vice and crime in this country.

Religion has been pretty much dropped out of the scheme of things American. The family prayer that used to be first on the day's program in most American homes would be regarded as a curiosity today. The discipline maintained in the churches of a half century ago would today be inconceivable. People do not much talk about or think about religion.

Yet what subject could be more important to thoughtful men than destiny? There can be no intelligent philosophy which leaves out of consideration the thought of a Creator. Scientists may yet be able to prove that men evolved from lower animals, or even from inert matter. But what mind can grasp the idea of anything starting without some superior force starting it?

And what man, knowing the human spirit, can believe that men are only an assemblage of chemicals, thrown together and allowed to dissolve without meaning or purpose? Who can fail to recognize the spark of Divinity in man himself? Who can believe that the flame of life is a mere product of physical combustion which can be snuffed out like a brief candle? Who can contemplate the command man has attained over physical objects, and the victories of the human spirit over self, and space and matter, and still believe that men have only the destiny of weeds and stones?

Reverence for God and worship of God therefore becomes the natural act of every normal human being, and the discovery of His laws and His plans for life and destiny is the duty of every thoughtful man and woman.

The religious institutions now existing represent the effort of our fathers to discover and apply the Divine will. Easy enough it is to pick flaws in them, to quarrel with their doctrines and the practices, but they represent more thought applied to this first of problems than most of us have ever given to it.

It sometimes seems that the churches themselves do not fully appreciate the prime importance of their mission. They are the nurseries of character, the exponents of underlying truth so vital that the discussion of fine points of doctrine within them seems trivial.

There are fields in which pupils are no better instructors of humanity than other existing agencies. Secular topics can be as intelligently discussed by editors, statesmen and lecturers as by preachers. But surely no minister of the gospel afire with his real message could lack a hearing. The importance is to measure up to the importance of the message.

In an era of confused thinking, of groping, of pessimism, that religion which is able to give inspiration and guidance to men and women, and formulate that character, which as Washington said is essential to good citizenship, is the greatest force for good the world knows. This republic is going to be saved or destroyed just one man at a time, and those who are able to inculcate in individual Americans these cardinal beliefs and principles essential in a good father or mother, a good neighbor and a good American are potentially our greatest agents of civic safety and progress.

The world has come to that place where it says to its nations, "Let's get together and help one another to straighten back and shoulders and, to walk with unburdened head—to walk upright, with firm step; and hence, from economic step, this parley." From the ethical point the desire and need goes deep as the souls of millions now striving, far back as a message two thousand years old and far forward as the age of this spinning world.

AMERICA HAS ONE REAL PALACE

There is in existance in the United States one real palace which has an undisputed right to the name. This is the "Palace of Governors" at Santa Fe, New Mexico, which has been used by Spanish, Mexican and American governors. Among the famous Americans who have occupied the palace are General Phil Kearny and General Lew Wallace, the latter of whom wrote part of his great work "Ben Hur" while living at the palace. In an interesting article on this historic building in the current issue of the National Republic, Mr. Louis H. Warner, chairman of the Pueblo Lands Board, says in part:

"Of the nearly one hundred rulers who have based their activities here, there were governors general, Pueblo leaders, Mexican jefe politicos or political chiefs, Federal and Confederate colonels, civil and military governors. Here the courts sat, the subordinate officials acted, the legislative assemblies of what name or character gathered. This place has been the scene of all sorts of juntas: delegations of Indians journeyed for miles to offer allegiance, to pay their respects after the annual pueblo elections, to seek aid or to register complaints at the treatment they were receiving.

"In 1675 seventy or more Indians came bringing presents of buckskin, chickens, beans and other articles, hoping thereby to receive the release of forty-three men sold into slavery at the mines for connection with certain witchcraft charges preferred against them at the Pueblo of San Ildefonso. Here, Billy the Kid, that noted outlaw of the Lincoln County Cattle War, came in the dead of night for an interview with Gen. Lew Wallace. Here the last three chapters of Ben Hur were written and the previous chapters brought here in manuscript were revised.

"Here, Kearny abolished for all time the exhorbitant charge of $8 per sheet for government paper held to be necessary in all contracts and legal papers. Here the orders were issued for the erection of Fort Marcy, on the heights to the north and east of the town. From here Kearny started on his expedition to California; Doniphan first against the Navajos and later to Mexico, both in the fall of 1846. From here went Governor Perez to his death in 1837, and Governor Bent ten years later. Here Gonzales, an Indian, was elected governor, after the death of Perez, with the aid of Armijo, only to be killed by the summary order of the latter a few weeks later.

"Here Lt. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan danced in 1879 and here Calhoun, the first Indian agent, came in 1849. No doubt Sherman, Miles and Wood were frequent visitors, as was Kit Carson. From here went the expedition in 1862 to Missouri; from here also went the military expeditions at various times against the Apache, the Ute or the Navajo. Here Colonel Price, a former congressman, organized the expedition to Embudo, Taos, and Mora following the tragic death of Governor Bent. Here Padre Martinez presided over the first session of the council after the territory was organized in 1851. Here the Kearny code, which was to become the basic law of the territory, was drawn up and proclaimed.

"Functions of every character have occurred here; social, political and civic. Probably the most exciting of all was the siege of 1680, when the building became a veritable fortress. Probably the Spaniards, who had gathered there for their last stand, would have been successful had their water supply, from an acequia which was near, not been cut off. After this the result was inevitable."

COLONIAL SCHOOLS WERE DIFFERENT

"As we look out npon our modern brick and stone school houses with np-to-date class rooms, laboratories and gymnasiums it is difficult to realize the improvement in our educational system since the days when the United States first became a nation. The old time school master usually had teaching as a side line and his regular vocation might have been any of a half dozen trades or professions. It is not generally known that schools were first established in the colonies only to teach the young to read the Bible. The secular advantages of education were not realized until later. In an interesting article in the current isue of the National Republic on the subject of education in Colonial days, Mary G. Lockwood says:

"The lot of the colonial school teacher was even less happy than that of Gilbert and Sullivan's policeman, judging from the duties listed for his performance in a seventeenth century New England 'Town Book.' The activities with which the unfortunate school master was charged are as follows: 1. To act as court messenger; 2. To serve summonses; 3. To conduct certain ceremonial services in church; 4. To lead the Sunday choir; 5. To ring the bell for Sunday worship; 6. To dig graves; 7. To take charge of school; 8. To perform other occasional duties.

"The occasional duties included the carrying on of missionary work among such tribes of the neighboring savages as could be corralled for the purpose. For his work, the schoolmaster received an annual salary something less than fifty dollars, and, if the community in which he was engaged was generous, also the use of a house and garden. Driven by necessity, an industrious teacher by the name of Adam Roelandsen took in washinga.

"In many cases the teacher was an indentured servant who had sold his freedom for a period of years in order to pay his passage to America. Such men usually served only one family, and, of course, received no pay. It is said that George Washington's father kept an indentured servant in his household as tutor.

"Richard G. Boone, in his historical work, 'Education in the United States,' quotes a royalist of 1763 who claimed that, 'At least two-thirds of contemporary Maryland education was derived from instructors that were either indentured servants or transported felons.' These 'felons', it must be remembered, had for the most part been convicted by the savage laws of those days for political offenses or seized for debt. The royalist observer continues, 'Not a ship arrives either with redemptioners or convicts, in which schoolmasters are not as regularly advertised for sale as are weavers, tailors, or any other tradesmen.'

"Women were not formally recognized as teachers until after the Revolution and did not become numerous until a much later date. The so-called 'Dame Schools' were little more than day nurseries in which a mother amused her own children and those of her neighbor while attending to her own housework."

Mr. U. G. Palmer, Former County Superintendent of Schools, Reviews Some Past Events and Predicts a Place in the Scientific World for a Present Resident, Mr. Joseph E. Harned.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Oakland has many interesting things in its history: The fact that Washington camped at the spring at the west end of town when he was surveying the lands of Lord Fairfax; that the grandfather of one of its old-time citizens, Hiram Hesen, was an officer in Napoleon's Army in its disastrous march on Moscow; that next to the last survivor of the famous charge of the Light Brigade at the battle of Balaklava in the Crimean War, was for years one of its residents in the person of Capt. James Brock; that Mrs. W. P. Totten, a sister of Commander Brown of the U. S. Navy, the "hero of Samoa," was until her death a highly esteemed resident of Oakland, and many other matters of like import.

But on a visit last week I was delighted to learn that one of your citizens is unconsciously making for himself a place in the scientific world comparable to the foremost authors at our great universities. I refer to the botanical work being prepared by Mr. Joseph E. Harned. This work, which will contain some 600 or 800 pages and treats of the flowers of the Allegheny mountain regions, is a pioneer in its field and aside from its scientific aspect is a work of genuine literary merit in its treatment of the various flowers from the mythical and legendary standpoints.

This work will find a place of genuine usefulness in all of our large libraries for many, many years to come.

Oakland should be proud to number Mr. Harned among its citizens.

Yours truly,
U. G. PALMER.

The Unknown Genius

MAUDE DALE, associate fiction editor of Turner's Short Story Magazine, had about decidad that, job or no job, she could no longer endure working side by side with Mr. Jeffery Snodgrass. She had stood it for four years; she was quite sure that much of the success of the magazine was due to her own discrimination in selecting short stories. But he only criticized her, and took all the credit himself.

That afternoon she began to look through her desk. There were things she wanted to destroy or sort or send to be filed before she really broke with Snodgrass.

There was a manuscript, written on cheap manilla paper. It was obviously written by a beginner. Maude recalled the day she acquired that mannscript. The tall, very lean, almost ferocious young man who had come into her room, pushed back the boy in the onter office, and insisted that he must see the "fellow that selected the stories." He had been surprised when he saw that "the fellow" was a slip of a girl, then not more thsn twenty-two.

That was three years ago, when she had not been working with Snodgrass very long. Actually he had looked hungry as he tossed his mannscript down on her desk and had told her thst he was so sure he could write tbat be felt he would be in the right to force an editor to buy. It wasn't his cocksureness that had made her do what abe had done, bnt the fact that she really thought he looked hungry.

Of course she thonght the manuscript was worthless, but she bought it—msde ont a fake pay slip for it, walked down the hall, where she took thirty dollars from her own freshly paid pay envelope, and brought it back, pretending she bad been to the cashier's.

Well, here wss the manuscript. It was signed John Davis. She had read it before; and, finding it, as she thought, extremely nnnsnal, bad passed it on to Mr. Snodgrass. Of conrse she did not tell him that she had bonght it already. But Mr. Snodgrass did not decide to buy it; in fact, he told his assistsnt that if she wasted his time again recommending for his perusal such a bit of ntter twaddle as thst he wonld have to get another assistant.

Still, since she was determined to leave, she decided to try her luck with the story again. She resd it and concluded thst it was written in a style distinctly original, and showed an amazing nonconformity to the rules of most story writers. It might therefore appeal to Mr. Snodgrass as distinctly "modern."

She typed it on expensive paper without changing a single word or punctuation mark. The next morning, before saying anything abont leaving, she showed the manuscript to him, intimating that it had jnst been received. Evidently he had forgotten the manuscript entirely, for early that afternoon he told Maude that the story was "amazing," and showed earmarks of a genins. "It's the sort of thing that Chester Dawdish is writing," he said. "Just put a voucher throngh to the cashier. We'll pay five hnndred for thst."

Bnt Msude had not the slightest way of finding the whereabonts of the anthor, and knew only that his name, or assnmed name, was John Davis. She simply told Mr. Snodgrass thst the mannscript had come with no address, and awaited developments, saying nothing for the time being concerning her own intention of qnitting her job. So it was decided to publish this amazing story with a great splash—as the msnnscript of an nnknown genins, nnpaid for hecanse said genins had failed to leave his sddress. For days after the issne of Tnrner's Msgazine this story was the talk of reviewers.

Then one day tbe illnstrions Chester Dawdish blew into the editorial offices, rnshing by the reception clerk in the outer office. Mr. Snodgrass was overcome with this honor, and then sat in mnte amazement as Mr. Dawdish stood excitedly before Maude Dale's desk.

"That's my story," he said eagerly, "and yon are the girl I've been looking for all these years."

There were explanations, and tbe snccessful writer explained more leisnrely that at the time of his first visit he had actually been starving. He'd tried to sell the story in every magazine office in town, but the editors wouldn't even see him. Later, when he found success in such genuine measure, he had wanted to come back to find this girl who had given him his first encouragement, bnt he had been so excited and so near starvation at the time that he couldn't even remember at which of the nnmerous magazine offices he had met with this first success.

A week ister Maude Dale resigned—her excnse being that she wss about to wed Chester Dawdish.

From Roman Calendar

"The Ides of March" constituted a definite day in the old Roman calendar. The word was derived from a word signifying "divide." In March the Ides occurred on the fifteenth, while in certain other months it was the thirteenth. Julius Caesar was warned by a soothsayer to beware of that day, which proved to be tha day of bis assassinatioa.

To do this the receptacles for the sap are being scalded out and the camps prepared for the reception of the water as it is hauled in from the groves. Wood is also being stacked by the camp houses and coal hauled from the mines so that when the actual gathering of the water in the vessels begins there will be no interruption in reducing the sap to sugar and syrup. NO HAPPINESS WHERE THERE IS NO LOVE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

THE log that had been crackling and intermittently bursting into flame suddenly broke apart, flamed brightly, darkened, the rosiness rapidly fading into gray ash. Sydney Hollis, from the depths of his chair, reached for the poker and stirred the coals. Then he slumped back, his head resting in his hand.

"Nine years ago tonight—" he mused half aloud. He looked up at the clock on the mantel above him, a mantel white with dust. A tall taper in a hammered silver holder leaned tipsily forward. "Nine years ago tonight at ten o'clock we were on our way—to this house. Jove, I'll never forget how we put it over on the crowd. I made a fire of packing cases and the excelsior that the dinner dishes were packed in and Bea wrapped up in my overcoat until the house was warm. Then we made tea and sandwiches and sat right here in this chair until after one o'clock. We wound the new clock before we went upstairs to bed. It has not run down since."

As though in answer to his soliloquy the clock on the mantel chimed 10.

"Nine years—and look at us now. Bea home, running around with the old crowd, having a whale of a time, a prospective divorcee. Well, she will make a peach of one, I'll say that for her. And how they will rush her! Not only a beauty and a live one, but her dad's money thrown in! They couldn't say I rushed her for that, anyway. Poor as a church mouse then. How we planned to put the wedding over in good shape on that limited amount and what a little manager Bea was. This house was better than she had ever had, and how she loved that golden oak dining room furniture we bought."

His eyes roved to the dining room beyond, austere and dignified in its mahogany, blue velvet rugs and hangings. There was the glint of the glass and silver on the long buffet, a wilted flower in the silver vase.

"She was kicking about this overstuffed suite when she decided to leave. We went seven different times to that furniture store just to look at it before we were married; couldn't quite convince ourselves that it was really ours." He threw a fresh log on the fire.

"Eight years ago tonight we had our first anniversary—the paper wedding. Doc and Lucy nearly wrecked the place doing the fox trot and we all tried to laugh, especially Bea. She was a brick. We sang all the war songs. Doc and I had just gotten our new uniforms and his was too big, mine too small. We were knockouts! Bea had flags in with the flowers, and when she looked at me she wiped away the tears and saluted me. Doc and I left for officers' training camp the next day.

"Funny thing I should have had just one year with Bea—and then the war—but it was a happy year, the first one. She bucked me up tremendously while I was in camp, and just before I sailed in March she told me about—the baby. Smiled like a little soldier. Best soldier of the two of us.

"Seven years ago tonight—two weeks before the armistice—I was in the Argonne. Had been thinking of her all day, only anniversary we were not together until tonight. Then the cable—I had a son. How I went after the Fritzies that night!" He smiled reminiscently as he slid lower in his chair.

"Nine, eight, seven," he repeated slowly. "Six years ago we were up at her folks. Her dad was ill. And five years ago tonight Buddie was sick. We had planned on a dinner dance. Bea pouted and went to bed crying. And four years ago we had had the big quarrel. She went home next day.

"Three years ago she was up home again. Thought the break had come for sure, but she was glad to see me, although she rubbed it in something fierce about not having much—she had a lot at home then. Her dad beginning to cash in on his war profits. Bea came back with me and it was then that she kicked out the golden oak dining room furniture and got the mahogany.

"Two years ago tonight she went to bed crying and said she was going home next day.

"A year ago tonight she came back and we went out to dinner, but we had reached the breaking point. Her dad had given her the new squirrel coat and promised her the sports roadster. I knew that night that I had been given the Lawson case and could have bought her a car if she had waited, but I was mad! So she chose—the showplace of her father's, dollar bills literally hanging from the chandeliers—because I wouldn't buy the Livermore place. Well, maybe it's for the best, but God, how I want Bea and Bud. I'll get the papers one of these days soon, and then it will be all over."

His gaze traveled over the comfortable big living room.

"A regular homemaker, Bea until she got that money bug in her head. I wonder what she is doing tonight, on her ninth anniversary. Fox-trotting with some fortune hunter and laughing. Jove, how she can laugh when she is happy. Remember those midnight lunches. Coffee and rye sandwiches, cheese and jelly mixed. I always ate four and Bea two, and she made me cut the bread so she could laugh. Said as a bread-cutter I would make a good bricklayer."

The clock on the mantel chimed 10:30.

"Wonder what she will be doing a year from tonight, an even ten. I've tried to play the game, but her dad's money beat me."

He turned his head suddenly. Steps on the porch, a tap at the window and a smothered call, a child's laugh. He swung wide open the door and then arms were about his neck, small arms about his legs and Bea was crying, her face against his shoulder.

"Syd, Syd, I'm home, always to stay with you. Money is nothing where there is no love, and I love you as much—more—than I did nine years ago tonight. Forgive me, Syd, and kiss me."

Her arms were full of packages and one by one they dropped to the floor as his arms went about her. Then like a child she knelt and began picking them up. She pushed back the paper wrapper and displayed a loaf of bread.

"Rye bread, Syd, and coffee, butter, cream cheese. Run down and get some jelly, Syd, dear, the currant is on the right end of the middle shelf, and while I put Buddy to bed, you can start the coffee, and don't cut the bread until I come down, dear; I haven't had a good laugh in weeks."

Sydney Hollis reached to the right end of the middle shelf for the currant jelly.

"Nine, eight, seven, and so on down to tonight, the best of all," he whispered to himself, "because she realizes there is no happiness where there is no love, and I'll tell her about the Lawson case when we are having our lunch before the fireplace, just as we did nine years ago on our wedding night."

Santa Fe Trail Once Called the Cow's Head

A Spanish king leading his army to battle in wild, impassable mountains found himself hemmed in by the enemy, who outnumbered his men five to one. He would have perished with all his troops had not a private soldier discovered a narrow, unguarded pass at the entrance of which lay the bleached skull of a cow. He led the king and his army to safety, and the grateful monarch not only rewarded him with wealth and honors, but bestowed on him a new name—Cabeza de Vaca, "cow's head."

De Vaca sailed from Spain for the Florida coast about three and a half centuries ago with the Narvuez expedition and was wrecked in the gulf, but De Vaca survived with three others, who clung to him when the ship went down. Though his ship was at the bottom of the sea, the ocean behind him, an untrodden wilderness before and hostile Indians all around, De Vaca's purpose was unshaken. Wisely he told his companions that a settlement of their countrymen was ahead and their only hope was to reach it.

He led them from somewhere near the Mississippi's mouth across an unknown continent to the Pacific. At the Seven Cities of Cibola there lived a people, peaceful and industrious, worshiping strange heathen gods and possessing treasures of gold and silver and plenty of food. At least this was the story which De Vaca later told Coronado, the governor of New Galicia, inducing him to send an expedition under Marcos de Niza in 1540 to colonize the Seven Cities of the Pueblos. De Niza invaded New Mexico, conquered the native towns with his soldiery and found everything as De Vaca had reported—except the treasure.

Thus, about 1600 was founded the city of Santa Fe. The famous Santa Fe trail, traversed by pack mules, prairie schooners and the present railroad line, was known to the Spanish conquerors as the Cow's Head trail, first blazed for hundreds of miles across an unexplored continent by De Vaca and his three men.—New York Times.

Drains Great Basin

The Danube has its origin in two small streams rising in the Black forest in southern Germany. It quickly gains in volume, and after the Iller joins it above Ulm it is navigable to the Black sea, although only to very small craft in its upper part. Of the total length of 1,770 miles, however, more than 1,600 miles carry traffic. About 100 tributaries are also navigable to some extent. The drainage basin of the Danube has an area of some 315,000 square miles.

Children's Collections

Angelo Patri discusses the collecting instinct in children at length and says, in part: "This instinct to collect is the germ of his responsibility toward his family. He must get and keep so that others later on may have what they will need. If he does not follow this instinct and do his hoarding and sorting and valuing, he will lose that valuable phase of his growth. To be sure, he has no appreciation of this. It is fun for him. But his heart is in his treasure."

Bread and the Digestion

There has never been an accurate experiment made for determining the length of time necessary to digest bread. Different systems naturally require different lengths of time, and the age and composition of the bread must be taken into consideration. At one recent experiment a professor ate a certain amount of bread on an absolutely empty stomach. By means of certain tests and x-ray pictures it was decided that it took him about two hours to digest the bread.

The Man From Georgia

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(Copyright)

WHEN Clarice's father proposed that he take both his wife and daughter to the big political convention, the daughter, at least, was far from thrilled at the idea.

"But, father," she began, trying to seem appreciative and yet unable to hide her real lack of interest, "won't we be a great nuisance to you in the city? Mother, of course, might not be, but what can you possibly do with me?"

Her father laughed. He was a delegate from his district as much because of the quality of that laugh as because of his political strength.

"Never you mind what I'll do with you, son," he said. He had always called her "son" because he had expected her to be a son.

So Clarice had waited and now she was "seeing." There was no delegate, spectator, guard or newspaper reporter more absorbed in the daily sessions of the national convention than was this Western girl.

"If you and your mother would like to go on home," her father had begun one morning while things were apparently hopeless as to progress in nominating.

"Home?" cried Clarice. "Why, father—nothing would drag me away until our man is nominated. I never was so excited in my life. I wouldn't have missed it for worlds. Dear old daddy, you do know what I'd like better than I know myself."

"I know one thing that perhaps you think I don't know, son," he said, pointedly.

Clarice blushed. "Yes?"

Her father nodded. "I know that the young man delegate from Georgia has not lost much time in trying to affiliate with certain members attached to the Iowa delegation."

"Oh—Mr. Macdonald? We have seen a good deal of him, haven't we?" Clarice asked naively.

Clarice became so excited at the balloting that night in the great convention hall when the deadlock finally broke and it looked as if perhaps a nomination might be made, that she was wonderfully beautiful. Her cheeks were burning with enthusiasm; her eyes sparkled; her very being was radiant with joy at the prospective success of their favored candidate.

Her seat was next to the seats allotted to the Georgia delegation and George Macdonald always made it a point to get the chair next to hers. Tonight he watched her with so much wonder in his eyes that he almost forgot that they were at a very important moment in the convention. For the young Southerner had fallen completely in love with Clarice Cummings of Iowa. He was sure that no one more beautiful ever lived, and he chafed under the restraint of convention that had kept him from telling her so.

Suddenly, in the midst of cheering and deafening noises, music, shouting and waving of banners for the candidate who had at last won nomination, Clarice sank back in her chair.

Macdonald of Georgia was soon to notice this.

"What is it, Miss Cummings?" he asked anxiously.

Clarice tried to regain her normal attitude. "Oh—I—it just occurred to me what—what it all means," she said ambiguously.

"You mean—" No one could hear them.

"I mean—we must go home—now," said Clarice.

The man looked at her. What could she mean? Could it be possible that—that it mattered to her that she would have to be separated from him?

It was her father, speaking to them, that really roused Clarice. "Come over to the hotel when you can get out. Won't you join us?" to the young Georgian.

"I should think I would," said Macdonald quickly.

And while all the others were having supper and talking of candidates and conventions, Clarice and the member from Georgia had sought the iron balcony at the hotel.

"Is it too soon for me to tell you that you are the most beautiful girl I have ever looked at and that I love you?"

Clarice did not answer. "I realize that I should wait—that I should write to you and come to see you and woo you as you deserve to be wooed, but—I must tell you first that I love you. Do you—care?"

Clarice nodded. "Yes—I care a whole lot. That is why I—I hated to think of going home."

And after that they talked until Clarice was called in.

"Father, the delegate from Georgia would like to have the floor for a moment," said Clarice as they stood by the door to say good-night.

"He is out of order tonight. The meeting has adjourned," said her father laughing.

But he listened, none the less, and if he regretted that he had brought his only daughter to the convention with him, he was sport enough not to tell her so. Her happiness was his.

Teaching Method

The Socratic method of teaching is the method followed by Socrates. It consisted of questions and answers. By this method he led on his interlocutors point by point, while himself professing ignorance, to develop and recognize the meaning of their own ideas.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Archibaldson Shines Again.

Archibaldson has broken into print again this week by saying that although the rapidly increasing divorce rate indicates that America is indeed becoming the land of the free, the continued marriage rate suggests that it is still the home of the brave.

* * *

Jonathan Cropp says he is sure he knows the secret of success, but sometimes he is afraid it's work. Reed Smouse agreed with him and Tom Flanigan didn't, and it almost started an argument.

Basking in the Sunshine

Scoop just got a telegram from Senator Naylor with picture enclosed. It shows him fishing along the Florida coast. He doesn't say anything about being in a snowdrift in Georgia or about it being zero weather there when Oakland was enjoying a temperature of 60.

Likeness of Izaak Walton.

Soldier Halsey Wins

Soldier Halsey, broadcasting on a wave length of 900 vocal notes per every ethereal amplitude, with an internal recoil and lots of spare volume, was awarded first prize and the fur-lined bathtub by Inspector Kerins, after he had been swamped with letters from admirers, stating that if he didn't win they wouldn't read this here column "no more". Soldier Halsey had the unique method of singing out his bathroom window, making the nasal notes resound far down Deep Creek Lake, and the echo, upon its return, was cornered and let out thru the keyhole during Inspctor Kerins' tour of inspection.

Ossifer Nethkin confided that he desired to enter the contest and that he had been trying to get into a tub ever since the thing started but just had to give it up. "They don't grow 'em big enough for me," he sighed.

The Democratic Sojourn.

Scoop, by special request, was allowed to be present at the Democratic committee meeting on Monday evening, and the following is a strict account of the proceedings, as regards any definite action:

"etaoin etaoin shrdlu shrdlu; Hamill; etaoin etaoin shrdlu; Sheckels; cmfwyp shrdlu; Blocher; cfwymp rfy; Speelman; vbgkqj vbgkqj; Browning: ————Matthews; askd; cmfwy. Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party."

After about three hours the result of the meeting was sent to Governor Ritchie. He got the same report on December 7.

It sure was a hot meeting and oratory was present in all its splendor, but the minds were not swayed.

Boom For Swanton

It's a good thing that Bob Sheckels and Art Green and a few others from Swanton were in Oakland this week, otherwise Scoop would have known nothing of the stupendous, amazing, petrifying and all-absorbing festival and celebration which is to be held in Swanton early in the spring.

The occasion is in celebration of the wonderful street improvements which have been made in the town. The highways have been completely ostracised with a new preparation which has all previous improvements completely outclassed.

The candidates for the various offices of the county which are to be filled next fall at the general election, are already on the job promising big things for the celebration, if they but cast their votes in the right direction. One candidate has already promised to buy toy balloons and the rest of the candidates promise to fill them with hot air on that day.

Swanton's band is practicing day and night in the Palace theatre, while a petition is being circulated for the McCrobie Stock Company of Oakland and New York to be brought to Swanton for the big whoopee time. So many names, headed by Joe Lohr, have been signed to the petition that already a special siding is being laid by the Baltimore and Ohio especially for the stock company, for it is reported that they carry a carload of Toll Gates alone. Their special mystery play, "Murder at the Toll Gate," will be the main drawing card.

Bob Sheckels bought 10 cents worth of flags while in Oakland and said he would have bought another nickel's worth, but he thought it would be possible to get a couple of red flags from the B. & O. to complete the street decorations.

Between preparations for the celebration and the Democratic State Central Committee meetings, Bob said he was losing his equilibrium, but expected to find it again on his way home.

Colonel Bell's studio will be closed the entire week so that he can give his personal attention in getting the best pictures possible. Instead of the usual fireworks the Bootleggers' Union and Corn Club have decided to use bottles with extra fermentation caps and material within. The Corn Club is the committee on decorations, but its members don't know whether to have Golden Bantam, Country Gentleman or just red mash.

Slim Shaw spent Tuesday in Swanton figuring the cost of a great white way for the main street where all the improvements have been made.

It's going to be a boom for Swanton, and if you don't believe it ask anyone from there and see what they say. But don't believe what they say about Scoop. Further details next Thursday—maybe!

THE HOMEMAKERS CORNER

BY MISS ELSIE BENTHIEN
Home Demonstration Agent

The 1930 program for Home Demonstration Work is full of so many wonderful things that the Rural Homemakers should make every effort to do all she can to take advantage of the many opportunities to be given her this year.

Delicious Soft Gingerbread

Stir together 1 cup molasses, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup lard. Add 1 level tablespoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, pinch of salt. Stir in 1 cup boiling water in which dissolve two level teaspoons baking soda. Add 2½ cups flour. Beat smoothly and lastly add two well beaten eggs. Bake slowly so that the cake will rise evenly. When cold may be iced. This is a thin mixture but do not add any more flour.

—MRS CYRUS WOLFE, Red House.

Baked Eggs

Take a dish or pan in which you serve eggs on table. Put butter in pan the size of a walnut and melt it. Then break in the pan 6 eggs and pour over the eggs 3 teaspoons of rich sweet cream. Season with pepper and salt. Bake about 5 minutes longer if eggs are desired harder and less if softer.

—MRS. H. P. MILLER, Grantsville.

Rocks

Three cups brown sugar, 3 eggs, 2 lbs. English walnuts, pinch salt, 2 cups butter, 1 lb, raisins, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 5 cups flour, 2 teaspoons of soda dissolved in 1 cup boiling water.

Cream the butter, add sugar, add eggs and water. Add the baking powder to 1 cup flour, then add enough more flour until the dough is a consistency to roll out thin. Cut in squares, spread with white of egg or milk, cinnamon, sugar and chopped nuts before baking.

—Mrs Lawrence Friend, Friendsville.

Note: Be sure to add the Homemakers name to each recipe.

District Forest Warden A. L. Sines, of near Swallow Falls, was in this community a few days ago, and while here posted announcements of a forestry meeting to be held in the Bittinger school house on February 3. Some moving pictures will be shown and interesting and helpful talks on forestry will be given by an expert. This meeting will be free and all are cordially invited to attend.

Samuel D. Broadwater, near Salisbury, Pa., spent last week in this village visiting his brother, Perry H. Broadwater, and his sister, Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp.

Messrs. W. E. Buckle and Clark Brenneman, both employees of the Kelly Springfield Tire company at Cumberland, are off duty this week and will spend the time with their families here.

Messrs. Herbert and Ralph Buckle, students at the Frostburg State Normal school, spent the week-end at their home here.

Rev. E. E. Campbell, together with members of the Jennings congregation, are making preparations to do some much needed repairs on the Jennings Lutheran church in the early spring.

Mrs. William Brenneman, of Meadow Mountain, visited her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Wiley, at the Wiley home here, a part of last week.

The rush for coal at the local coal mines, usual at this season of the year, is now on and the miners find it difficult to supply the demand.

Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville, was called to the home of Walter Wilburn near this village last Sunday evening.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. H. CARTER,

More Hay For Less Money

Many thousands of dollars are lost in the State each year because of the use of unsuitable seed. The greater part of this loss, if not all, could be avoided by very simple means of having seed tested. The State Seed Laboratory has offered this free service and will test sample of seeds advising If it is advisable to sow seed from which the sample was taken.

Anyone interested in this service may secure containers for sending samples of seed from the County Agent's office.

It has come to this office that good home grown Red Clover seed can be obtained in this State at $12.50 per bushel f. o. b. Easton, Md. Anyone interested should write directly to Mr. Rieman, secretary-treasurer Talbot County Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Inc., Easton, Md.

Lesson for February 2

PUTTING GOD'S KINGDOM FIRST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:1-34 (Print vv. 5-13, 19-21, 31-33).

GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Being True to Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Being Loyal to Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being Loyal to Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Putting First Things First.

Having set forth in the previous chapter the standards of the kingdom, Jesus now exhibits the underlying principles which control the subjects of the kingdom.

I. As to Giving (vv. 1-4).

Alms were not to be given before men to be seen of them. Doing alms before men is not condemned as that would contradict Matthew 5:16, but the doing of them before men to be seen of them. To seek publicity in doing our alms is to miss the reward of our heavenly Father. The true child of the kingdom will seek privacy in doing righteousness, that he may have the open reward of the Father.

II. As to Praying (vv. 5-15).

1. False prayer (vv. 5, 7).

This consists in (1) Praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Many of the prayers uttered in public are false, for there is more thought of what the people think than of what God thinks. (2) Using vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once for a given thing. We have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; II Cor. 12:7, 8). It means the using of meaningless repetitions. The reason is, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him."

2. True prayer (v. 6).

Since prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, there should be a real desire for fellowship with Him which moves one to meet Him in the secret place.

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-15).

This involves (1) Right relationship —"Our Father" (v. 9). (2) Right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (vv. 9, 10). (3) Right spirit—"Give us our daily bread, forgive us our sins, lead us not into temptation" (vv. 11-13).

III. As to Fasting (vv. 16-18).

The true reason for fasting is to be found in the opportunity it gives for a clear vision of God. Those who have thus seen God will make it manifest in a joyful countenance.

IV. As to Earthly Riches (vv. 19-24).

The Lord knew the temptations which would befall His children in their earthly pilgrimage and the anxiety to which it would lead; therefore He set forth the proper attitude toward them.

1. The nature of earthly riches (vv. 19-21).

(1) Uncertain (vv. 19, 20). Earthly treasures corrode, or are taken from us, therefore we should lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven where they are absolutely safe from corruption and from thieves. (2) Seductive (v. 21). Christ called riches deceitful (Matt. 13:22). It is not wrong to possess earthly treasures, but when earthly treasures possess us, they become a snare unto us. Excessive attention should not be given to earthly treasures.

2. The effect of earthly riches (vv. 22-24).

(1) Blunt the moral and spiritual perceptions (vv. 22, 23). Those who become enamored of the things of this world soon become irresponsive to spiritual things. When the heart is upon earthly treasures, it is taken from God. The double eye is disastrous to spirituality. (2) They render null and void all service (v. 24). As soon as one's heart is stolen by riches, he is rendered unfit for spiritual service.

V. As to Faith in the Heavenly Father (vv. 25-34).

1. Be not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-34).

Because (1) It shows distrust of God (v. 30). God is able to supply His children's needs. (2) It is useless (v. 31). Anxiety can bring nothing. While bringing us nothing, it weakens our service. (3) It is heathenish (v. 32). Those who have not learned to trust God may worry over temporal affairs, but those who know Him as a loving Father, will be free from care.

2. Be anxious to seek the kingdom of God and serve Him (vv. 33, 34).

This means that worldly affairs should be subordinated to spiritual affairs.

Seed Thoughts

How often do we sigh for opportunities of doing good, whilst we neglect the openings of Providence in little things, which would frequently lead to the accomplishment of most important usefulness.—Crabbe.

Facts and Figures on Your Telephone

By EDWIN F. HILL

Edwin F. Hill

Talk, once cheap, is now cheaper. Telephone users in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia will benefit about $256,000 annually as a result of the reduction in toll and long distance telephone rates which became effective January 1.

These reductions cover messages both over the lines of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone System and the long distance lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The reduced rates, telephone officials say, apply largely on station to station calls, but there are also some reductions on other classes of service.

Such reductions apply largely to points ranging in distance from 60 to 300 miles apart. Also, reductions in report charges, ranging from 5 to 40 cents, affecting the schedule of calls made for distances ranging generally from 100 to 2,200 miles, have been made.

This is the fourth reduction made in toll and long distance rates of the Bell Telephone System in the past three and one-half years, officials say.

Not only have the rates on telephone tolls been reduced, but the service has been improved very materially, since the statement is made that about 95 per cent of all toll and long distance calls are now handled while the calling party remains at the telephone, as compared with 90 per cent at the beginning of 1928 and 70 per cent in 1925.

The total annual saving from the latest reduction to telephone users throughout the United States is estimated to be $5,000,000.

MT. LAKE PARK

Wednesday of this week was the anniversary of the birth of William McKinley, 35th and third martyred President of the United States. He was born at Niles, Ohio, January 29, 1843, and died September 13, 1901, the result of a bullet fired at Buffalo, N. Y., by Leon F. Czolgosz, an anarchist, who was executed for the crime.

Those of us who have been anxious to find something for the boys and girls of the Park to do to put in the time during the winter months, now have the opportunity to prove our sincerity by deeds, not words. For the benefit of the young people's orchestra of Loch Lynn, a social and food sale will be held next Friday night at the Baptist parsonage. There will be no admission charge and if you are too tight to buy anything, it won't cost you a cent. In addition to the entertainment of music and games of all kinds, the ladies will have on sale the good things they know so well how to prepare—cakes, pies, sandwiches, coffee, etc. This is a worthy cause and we ought to give them a hand.

If next Sunday is as bright as today (Wednesday) pa, ma and the little groundhogs will strut their stuff after the fashion of an Easter parade. We wish to suggest to our friend, Senator A. D. Naylor, that here is an opportunity to do some real constructive legislation—abolish ground hog day. This move would relieve us of a good deal of anxiety and false prophesy.

Mrs. J. W. Calhoun, who suffered a stroke of paralysis about ten days ago, died Friday and was buried at Mount Pleasant. Rev. Speedy, pastor of the Pentecostal church, officiated.

Mr. C. A. Oswell has returned from a short visit to his family in New York, where they are spending the winter.

Assistant Superintendent Moomaw has completed the work of filling the lake-side ice house with seven to eight inch thicknesscs of ice harvested from the lake.

C. P. Martin & Son will equip their store and meat market with a unit for artificial refrigeration. It will he in operation early this coming spring.

Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Leighton and a sister of Mrs. Leighton, with Miss Grace Falkenstein, left for Florida yesterday morning for a few weeks' stay. Mr. Leighton while there will inspect an orange grove in which he and others of the Park are interested.

Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Bringing many a silent tear.

If a student fails in the first semester in any subject he still nas an opportunity to pass at the end of the year, providing he makes every effort and studies diligently, Miss Conley said.

Parents are cordially invited to visit the school at any time to attend classes or to inquire about the progress of their boys and girls.

The list of possible June graduates will be printed next Thursday and only those will be listed who have passed in all their subjects to date, it was stated. Sixteen units are necessary for graduation.

Ice Boat of Local Mechanics Makes 50 Miles Per Hour

An ice boat, made by R. E. Dawson and Sherman White, two mechanically minded young men of Oakland, has been tried out on Deep Creek Lake, eight miles north of Oakland, and it attalned a speed of approxlmately 50 miles per hour shortly after the take-off.

The power for the machine is obtained from a two-cylinder motorcycle motor, with a five-foot propellor attached in front. The craft, which resembles an airplane minus its wings, is seventeen feet long, has a wood frame with cloth coverlng, and weighs three hundred pounds.

It carries two passengers, the pilot operating the machine from the rear cockpit where he has the rudder bar, joystick and accelerator at his finger tips.

Deep Creek Lake, fifteen miles ln length, and approximately one mile wlde in places, with a shore llne of 75 miles, affords ample space for the craft to perform, and it is expected that the success of Garrett county's first attempt at lce boatlng will be followed by many more in the near future. The boat ls now owned by Sherman White and Otto Shultz.

THREE FAMILIES ROUTED BY FLAMES AT CRELLIN

Fire In One of Coal Company's Large Houses is Extinguished

Fire, caused by an overheated chimney Tuesday evening about 7:15 o'clock drove three families from their homes and caused an estimated damage of $500 to one of the large dwellings owned by the Stanley Coal Company at Crellin, four miles west of Oakland.

The dwelling, which contains 18 rooms and was formerly used as a boarding house, was occupied by Chas. Rexroad, Lester Steiding and Charles Borgman and their families, all of whom were forced to flee the flames, the fire gaining rapid headway before the arrival of the Oakland Fire department.

Four rooms in the building which were occupied by Mr. Rexroad and his family, were entirely destroyed, along with all the furniture and the clothing belonging to the family. Adjoining rooms on the second floor were also considerably damaged and three rooms on the first floor were considierably damaged as a result of water.

The Oakland Volunteer Fire department was called and after ascertaining that the chemical apparatus was ineffective, due to the intense heat and scope of the fire, the pumper trick was brought into play with the result that the fire was soon under control and was extinguished in a comparatively short time.

The structure was insured by the coal company for about one-half of its value, Mr. Charles W. Ream, president and superintendent of the company, stated.

FORESTRY PICTURES AND PROGRAM ARE PRESENTED

Final Show In County Scheduled for Tonight at Jennings School

A program of more than passing interest and lasting over a period of one week, which was sponsored by the State Forestry department, will end this evening at Jennings school house when "Trees of Rlghteousness," a three-reel moving picture, and "The Weather's the Weather," a one-reel Felix Cat picture, will be shown.

The pictures have been shown at eight other communities, with packed houses each time, according to H. C. Buckingham, district forester, who has charge of the films. It is estimated that 1500 or more people saw the pictures at New Germany, Fairview, Bond, Dry Run, Bray, Bittinger, Avilton and Dorsey, the shows taking place in the school houses of the communities mentioned.

Mr. Buckingham, at these meetings, also explained the purposes of State forests which were for the production of timber. for game and fish protection and for water supply. He pointed out that a State forest was the only place on which a hunting license in Maryland gave one permision to hunt.

The telephone line from the Bittinger tower to Bond is being extended and soon the foresters will start cleaning trails, camp sites, etc., for the purpose of speeding up fire control.

Man, 83, Sees Moving Pictures for First Time at Bond School

George Oliver Broadwater, 83 years of age, Bond, this county, has just seen his first moving picture.

He was one of those present at the Bond school house last Thursday evening when the State forestry picture "Trees of Righteousness," was shown and the movement of the people on the screen was a never-ending source of wonderment brought to him thruout the three reels when they were projected by H. C Buckingham, the district forester. The evening was one of revelations to the aged gentleman.

He had heard of moving pictures, he said, but had them figured out as fast moving stereopticon views. That he enjoyed the entertainment goes without saying. Mr. Broadwater, however, was only one of a number who last week saw moving pictures for the first time in their lives, but he probably was the oldest one among them.

Dr. N. I. Broadwater plans to leave Oakland Saturday night for Milwaukee, Wis., and Mineapolis, Minn., to attend the sessions of the American College of Physicians to be in session ten days or more. Returning from the west he will visit Rochester, N. Y., before returning to Oakland. He will probably be absent two weeks in all.

PRESTON FOUND GUILTY IN ASSAULT INDICTMENTS

Frostburg Man, 24, Convicted of Attacking 15-Year-Old Girl By Allegany County Court

Bernard Preston, 24, of Frostburg, was found guilty in the Circuit Court at Cumberland Saturday on three of the four counts of the indictment under which he was tried for the felonious assault upon Miss Ethel Rosenberger, 16-year old Garrett county farm girl, on June 30, 1929.

Though Preston was not found guilty of the first count of the indictment, his range of punishment still includes the death penalty. Assault with intent to commit the statutory offense, the second count, carries with it a sentence of death or at the discretion of the court not more than twenty years nor less than two years in prison. The final count, having carnal knowledge of a girl between the ages of fourteen and sixteen by a man over 18, carries a sentence of from two to ten years.

The jury which got the case at 11:40 a. m., returned with their verdict at 3:05 p. m. The third count on which Preston was found guilty was simple assault. The first count was that of the statutory offense itself.

Second Conviction in Case

Preston was the second man to be tried for assaulting the girl. Enoch Plunkett, 33, with whom Preston had been drinking on the Sunday when the assault took place, is serving 21 years for the crime, having been convicted at the December Term of the Circuit court at Oakland. Preston plead a severance of trial from Plunkett's trial and later a change of venue. He was defended by E. J. Ryan, Allegany county, and William R. Offutt of Oakland.

Sates's Attorney Julius C. Renninger prosecuted Preston, assisted by William A. Huster, State's Attorney for Allegany county. The assault took place near the junction of the Pocahontas road and the National highway, just over the Allegany-Garrett line in this county.

The court waited a considerable time for attorneys for Preston to appear, indicating that the sentence was to be pronounced at once, but when they could not be located, dismissed the jury. Preston's mother and sister broke down when the verdict was given.

INSPECTION OF SCHOOL CHILDREN IS BEING MADE

207 Have Been Examined For Health Defects—45 are Found To Be In Perfect Condition

One hundred forty-nine visits to homes, schools, etc., for instruction to school and pre-school children, and for examination for minor health defects, were made during the month of January by Miss Ruth Martin, public health nurse for Garrett county. Ninety-seven visits were of an instructive nature.

School children were inspected at Pleasant Valley, Engle, Mar's Hill, Manadier, Red House, Swan Meadow, McHenry, Sebold, Sang Run, and Oakland Fourth grade. Two hundred seven children were inspected and only 45 were found who were apparently entirely normal.

Abnormal conditions were noted among children as follows: defective vision, 8; defective hearing, 4; decayed teeth, 147; apparently abnormal throat, 26; skin eruptions, 5; malnourished, 24. Notices were sent by the health nurse to parents of all abnormal children advising them to see their family physician or dentist as soon as possible. Thirteen children were excluded from school during the past month because of having been exposed to communicable disease, Miss Martin stated.

Class in Home Hygiene

A class in "Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick" has been organized in the Accident High school and will be conducted by Miss Martin. Ladies of the community desiring to take this course with the high school girls may do so by communicating with Miss Kathrine Brown, home economics teacher at Accident.

Parent-teachers meetings were attended at Red House and Sunnyside by the health nurse and a talk given on "Health in School and Community." A new scale for use in the school inspection work in the county was presented to the health department by the County Board of Education.

Home conditions of fifteen children were investigated in January and reported as required. Necessary medical treatment was provided for four persons this month and arrangements are being made for three crippled children to enter Johns Hopkins hospital for treatment.

Robber Who Stole Trousers Last July Returns for Coat and Vest

A robber, who last July stole a pair of trousers from Mr. Henry Mosser, Underwood, near Oakland, returned to the same place last Friday and succeeded in confiscating the coat and vest of the same suit.

A new pair of shoes and other articles of clothing was also taken. Entrance was effected through the front door. He was tracked a considerable distance in the snow and it is thought that the identity of the thief is known by Mr. Mosser, who is not disclosing his name, in the hope that he will return the property. This is the eighth time Mr. Mosser has been robbed.

FINED $1.00 AND COSTS IN ALLEGED WHOOPEE PARTY

Youths Found Guilty of Malicious Mischief by Justice

A fine of $1 and costs was imposed on Guy Simmons, Donald ("Nixie") Davis, George Jeffries and Gertrude Haskell at the conclusion of a two-day trial held before Justice W. A. Gonder yesterday afternoon.

The parties fined were charged with malicious mischief arising out of an alleged whoopee party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Waingold on December 8 at which time both Mr. and Mrs. Waingold were in Cumberland.

A charge of breaking and entering was also lodged against the youths, but due to insufficient evidence they were not held on this charge, which is an indictable offense and one for grand jury investigation. The trial before the Justice began Monday morning and after continuing until that evening was resumed yesterday afternoon at which time a witness summoned from Cumberland was to testify in the matter.

According to the testimony of the boys, Jeffries had orders to care for the furnace fire [illegible] the Waingolds from Cumberland and that the party had intended going to Terra Alta when they stopped at the home for a few minutes while Jeffries looked after the fire. Before they had resumed their contemplated visit to Terra Alta, Mrs. Waingold returned unexpectedly and found the boys and girl in the house. She notified the sheriff and arrests followed.

Testimony on the part of other witnesses was to the effect that a number of eggs had been broken and scatterd over the floor of the kitchen, a lot of fruit crushed and furniture damaged and evidences of a drinking bout were also observed.

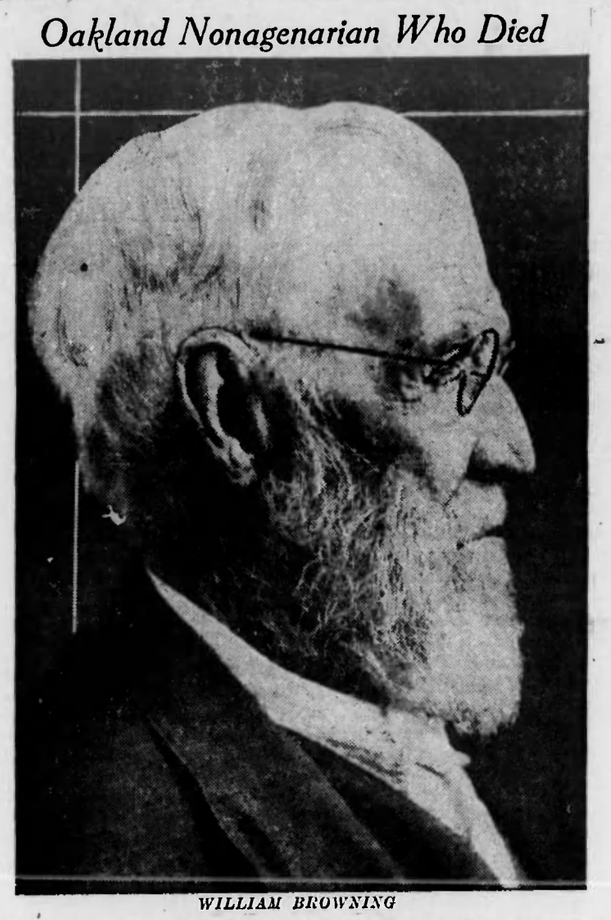
Oakland Nonagenarian Who Died



WILLIAM BROWNING

The funeral of Mr. Browning, aged 93 years, the oldest descendant of Meshack Browning, pioneer hunter and settler of Garrett county, who died last Wednesday afternoon at his home in Oakland, was held Saturday morning from St. Peter's Catholic Church. He was a brother of the late Senator Richard T. Browning and a half brother of George D. Browning, president of the Board of County Commissioners of Oakland.

Lines Dedicated To The Late Nonagenarian, William Browning, of Beloved Remembrance

I long to rest,
And from this world of toil and grief and eare,
Upon thy breast
O! Lord! to dwell in peace forever there.

'Tis winter now—
The cold world's doors are elosed—how chill the blast!
O! Father! how Long—long, before this weary life is past?

These age-dimmed eyes
Have seen youth, beauty, seekers after pelf;
The good, the wise
All 'round me die—would I were dead myself!

Through my long years
Of wearying, worn and tired life
Thou wipe'st my tears—
Oh! take me from this world of endless strife!

And when bells toll
Their requiems—when the last sod lays on my breast,
Then grant my soul,
O! Father! holy peace give me, and rest, sweet rest.

—K. R. RASCHE.

Oakland, February 4, 1930.

WARNINGS AND PROMISES

(TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 7:1-29 (Print vv. 1-12, 15-27).

GOLDEN TEXT—Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and east into the fire.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Obeying Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Keeping the Law of Christ.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Truth About Alcoholic Beverages.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Cutting Down the Corrupt Tree.

I. Concerning Censorious Judgments (vv. 1-12).

1. The sin and folly of (vv. 1-5).

This prohibition should not be so construed as to forbid our making an estimate of the lives of those about us, for "by their fruits ye shall know them." Neither should it prevent us from administering rebuke to those who deserve it. It is not wrong to condemn the errors and faults of those who are in the way of sin. It does not mean that sin should go unrebuked until we ourselves are perfect. It rebukes readiness to blame others and to magnify their weakness and error.

2. The duty of discrimination in dealing out holy things (v. 6).

The Gospel should be preached to all. We should turn from those who reject and treat with contempt the Gospel message.

3. Qualification for discrimination (vv. 7-12).

(1) A life of prayer (vv. 7-11). Only those are able to rightly divide the word of truth who live a life of prayer. (2) A disposition to treat others as one would be treated (v. 12). It is not merely to refrain from doing injury, but positively to do for others that which we would desire to have done unto ourselves under similar circumstances. No man can live this rule unless he has been born from above and abides with Christ.

II. Entrance Into the Kingdom Urged (vv. 13, 14).

There are two ways only before each one—life and death, heaven and hell. The narrow gate is the way of life. While the gate is strait and the way narrow, it is an open gate and the only gate to life, and all are invited to enter. The gate which opens to every good thing in life is strait—restricted. The way of Jesus Christ is not the way of the crowd.

III. Warnings Against False Teachers. (vv. 15-20).

1. Their real existence (v. 15).

Ever since God has had a people, false prophets and teachers have appeared among them.

2. Their nature (v. 15).

(1) They are hypocritical. The devil does his most successful work by masquerading as an angel of light (II Cor. 11:14, 15). His ministers appear in this way and turn people from the narrow to the broad way. (2) They are destructive. This is suggested by their being ravening wolves. It is when the wolf is in sheep's clothing that it does its most destructive work. False teachers are doing their most deadly work while pretending to be loyal to the Bible and Jesus Christ.

3. The unfailing test (vv. 16-18).

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Every tree bears its own kind of fruit. One may search the universe in vain for an exception to this rule. It is equally true in the spiritual world—there is a vital connection between faith of heart and fruit of the life.

4. Their ultimate end (v. 19).

Although God has infinite patience and bears long. He will see to it that this evil work does not go on forever.

IV. The Dangers of Empty Profession (vv. 21-23).

1. Merely calling Christ Lord will not answer for doing his will (v. 21).

2. One may do supernatural works and not be saved (vv. 22, 23).

Not all supernatural worlds are divine. There is a supernatnral world of evil. It is the business of every believer to test the Spirit (I John 4:1, 2).

3. Separation from God (v. 23).

One may have been a Sunday school teacher or a minister and have performed many mighty works and yet hear from Christ the awful words, "I never knew you: depart from Me."

V. The One and Only Safe Way (vv. 24-29).

1. Hear the sayings of Christ (v. 24).

To do this one must give attention to reading the Word of God.

2. Do what Christ commands (vv. 24-29).

Hearing and doing the teachings of Christ is building upon solid rock. Hearing and not doing Christ's sayings is to build upon the sand.

Properly Protected

If a man have Christ in his heart, heaven before his eyes, and only as much of temporal blessing as is just needful to carry him safely through life, then pain and sorrow have little to shoot at.—William Burns.

Faith

By faith we understand that the worlds have been framed by the word of God, so that what is seen hath not been made out of things which do appear.—Epistle to the Hebrews.

13 CASES PARROT FEVER REPORTED DURING MONTH

Is First Time Disease Has Been Recognized In Maryland

Thirteen cases of parrot fever were included in the notifiable diseases reported by the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health during January. This was the first time the disease was recognized in Maryland. Seven of the cases occurred in the counties and six in Baltimore City with two deaths in the city. Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State department of health, stated that every case recorded in Maryland was associated with the care or handling of parrots that had recently been imported into this country from South America.

Outbreaks of parrot fever, similar to the one in Maryland, have occurred recently in widely separated areas in this country and also in Germany, the central European countries and South America. The first of the Maryland cases were reported early in January. Following closely upon them the U. S. Public health service was notified of similar outbreaks in California, Hawaii, Florida, Minnesota, Connecticut, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, a total of 56 cases and 8 deaths.

As a result of the outbreaks in Germany an embargo was placed upon the shipment of parrots into German ports. To prevent the further spread of the disease into this country, after a conference with Surgeon-General Cumming of the U. S. Public Health service, President Hoover issued an executive order, the latter part of the month, declared an embargo upon the importation of parrots from any foreign port into the United States, or any of its possessions or dependencies until further notice. Because of industrial and commercial questions involved, the matter was also taken up by the Bureau of Industrial Hygiene of the League of Nations at Geneva.

Parrot fever—or psittacosis—to give the disease its scientific name, which is derived from two Greek words meaning parrot and disease, has been known for half a century as a disease of parrots transmitted to humans and characterized in parrots by fever, debility and diarrhea and in humans by the symptoms of typhoid and pneumonia. The first outbreak was reported in Ritter in 1879. In 1892, Nocard of the Pasteur Institute isolated what was believed to be the germ of the disease during his study of the causes of an outbreak in Paris, traced the diseased parrots imported from Buenos Aires.

Only a few cases were on record in the United States before 1917 when several traced to parrots, consigned to department stores, were reported in Wilkesbarre, Pa., and in Binghampton, N. Y. The recent outbreak in this country is generally associated with the importation, during the latter part of the year, of birds from the sources connected with the South American outbreak.

"Very little has been known about psittacosis," Dr. Riley said, "except that it is primarily a disease of parrots and spreads from parrots to man. It is highly infectious and frequently, several members of a family may develop the disease. Apparently, it is not transmitted from man to man. The most common modes of infection are through mouth to mouth feedings—a dangerous practice at any time—and through kissing or fondling sick parrots.

"It is hoped that the present outbreak is under control, but should suspicious symptoms be observed in those associated with parrots, no time should be lost in securing medical attention. The greatest care should be taken at all times in handling sick parrots and in the proper disinfection of their cages."

In Chicago, while two policemen were hunting an automobile thief, two other thieves stole their bright yellow police car and escaped.

"HELPING" THE FARMER

Arthur Brisbane, one of the most persistent and talented horn-tooters for Soviet Russia in the country, writes, after taking a slam at industrial conditions in the United States:

"News to worry grain merchants in Europe and interest American farmers. Russia's soviet steamer 'Proletariat' arrives in the Baltic with 2500 tons of grain offered by the 'Soviet Trade Legation' at prices 25 to 35 cents a bushel below the world market prices. Communist Russia promises heavy exports of rye, oats, barley, fodder and will if necessary cut prices ruthlessly. Russia's government really interests itself in farmers, buying tractors for them by the thousands, experimenting intelligently with wholesale farming destined to solve the farm production problem as wholesale manufacturing has solved automobile production."

The news will indeed interest American farmers and the American people generally, but not just the way Moscow's press agents might believe.

In the first place it is significant that Soviet Russia is dumping grain on the world market at cut prices while millions of Russians are starving or on the verge of starvation. It is recalled that when the American Congress sent twenty million dollars worth of food stuffs to Soviet Russia to keep hundreds of thousands of people in the Volga district from starving to death, they met cargoes of grain in Russian ports being shipped out of the country by the Moscow government to raise money to keep the biggest army in the world and provide money for world-wide revolutionary campaigns.

Americans are also interested in the fact that American capitalists, including a leading automobile manufacturer, the General Electric Company and other factors in big business, are helping finance Soviet Russia's movement to take the land away from the farmers, and go into state farming on a huge scale, with the peasants reduced to practical slavery and compelled to work at such wages as will make American farm competition in the markets of the world impossible.

"Russia really interests itself in the farmer," says Mr. Brisbane. Press dispatches show the way in which the Moscow government is interesting itself in the farmer. The farmers' lands are being expropriated by the government. Every farmer who owns a domestic animal or two is classed as a kulak or "rich peasant." He is not only being robbed of his land, but is being divested of political and economic rights, and has been told by the Moscow masters in so many words that he can "go jump under an automobile" if he wishes to end his misery. Even Lenin's widow has publicly protested against this brutality, yet we hear it praised in the United States! Hundreds of these farmers guilty of owning a horse or cow have been killed, jailed, exiled because of resisting this seizure or even complaining about it. Terms of two years in prison are being handed out to peasants who try to put themselves out of the "rich peasant" class by killing their domestic animals.

This is the sort of thing recommended to the American farmer by the Moscow publicity agencies. It amounts to reducing the nation to a gigantic jail and poor farm. At the same time it is interesting to note that American "big business" is helping finance this Russian enterprise, and is careless of the fact that if Russia can be equipped for state farming with slave labor the price the American farmer can receive for his surplus grain will be decreased by from 25 to 50 per cent.

GENEROUS AMERICA

In spite of our national knockers, it can be said without fear of contradiction that the United States is a generous nation. We do spend a great deal of time in making money but at the same time we give away a lot of it. The figures prove this quite abundantly and show that the United States is the most philanthropic nation on earth. For instance, in the year 1929 we exceeded all records in the amount of money given for public and charitable purposes. The bequests of this kind in the United States during the year amounted to two billion dollars, and this is an increase of a hundred and twenty millions over the best preceding year. Two billions of dollars is a sizeable sum, and if money talks, as it is usually credited with doing, it must have something to say about the generosity of the American people.

The gifts went for religious, educational and charitable purposes, for the promotion of fine arts, for increased playgrounds and public recreation. Churches, hospitals, schools and various institutions of a social and charitable nature were remembered.

More and more each year the successful man, the man successful in a financial way, is coming to regard his money as a public trust. He is coming to realize that since he can not spent all of it in a personal way, the best way to get a lasting memorial for himself is to do something with it that will be of benefit to the people of this and succeeding generations, so gaining for himself a kindly memorial in the hearts of men.

Let our record of public benefactions stand as an answer to those who sneer at the idealism of the United States and paint us as a nation of money grabbers. The Cincinnati Enquirer well stated recently:

"It is such a land, such a people, such individuals with the essence of divinity in their souls that is traduced and maligned by those social revolutionaries who see in Russia, for example, the workings of a 'great ideal' and who constantly urge a change of the principles of government and society which have brought America to the peak of prestige and power the country enjoys today.

"This is a land of labor and business, but its great souls find time and opportunity to send the sun days of happiness, comfort, uplift, education and gentle, practical charity into the lives of millions."

OUR PRESENT POLICY

In a recent address at Philadelphia, Vice-President Charles Curtis said:

"It is a pleasure to call your attention to the fact that since the World War the peoples of the civilized world have engaged in the most important movement—world peace.

"We would like to see the time when nations will settle their disputes by methods other than war. As a government and as a people we are doing and will continue to do everything possible to bring this about, but we have no desire to and will not be drawn into other countries' political quarrels, nor into entangling alliances with other nations."

It seems to us that this sums up the present policy of the United States in a nutshell. That the United States is willing to do all it can to promote peace is evidenced by the record. In 1921 this nation called the naval limitations conference and made considerable sacrifices in the way of battleships in an effort to promote international disarmament. We promoted the Kellogg peace pact which is the most important step yet taken by the nations of the world toward world-wide understandings in the interests of peace. We have gone to the London conference with a willingness to do what we can to further the cause of the limitation of armament and are only insisting that in the final agreements we shall have naval parity, something which our position in world affairs, our world trade and national wealth entitle us to.

We feel that we can best promote the cause of world peace by keeping the skirts of the United States free from foreign entanglements and alliances with the nations of Europe All efforts to involve us in such entanglements will only create suspicion and distrust in the United States. We are willing to go as far as any nation along the path of universal peace but we feel that we can be of greatest service to world peace if we retain our national sovereignty an dindependance of action.

An Interesting Fact

Frequently the most interesting phazes of the history of a state are found in obscure foot notes used by the author to explain a happening of outstanding importance.

Charles Willson Peale was an artist of unusual ability of the American Revolutionary period. As early at 1774, while in London Peale painted a portrait of William Penn, which he called the "first fruit" of his art, and which seemed to particularly please the English in those troublesome times. With the possible exception of Copley he remained throughout the period of the Revolution the leading painter of his day. It was Peale who painted the first portrait of Washington as a colonel in the Virginia malitia and later a full length portrait of the General as commander in chief. His final portrait of Washington as President was painted in 1795. His son, Rembrandt is probably better known in gencral history than his father.

His reputation, therefore, as an artist is well fixed in history. On the other hand, he is perhaps not so well known as an inventor.

Benjamin H. Latrobe, architect of the Capitol at Washington, an Englishman, had a very voluminous correspondence regarding men and events of the post-Revolutionary period, of which letters he kept copies. At that early period, before the time of typewriters and carbon papers or letter presses, it might be wondered how Latrobe, a man of large affairs, could find the time to retain copies of letters, as the "home copies" of letters to friends in America are the same as the ones addressed. This he was enabled to do by the use of a cleverly devised two-pointed pen and accompanying apparatus designed by the artist, Charles Willson Peale. This device enabled the writer simultaneously to inscribe two copies.

Again, a Marylander took the lead in advancement.

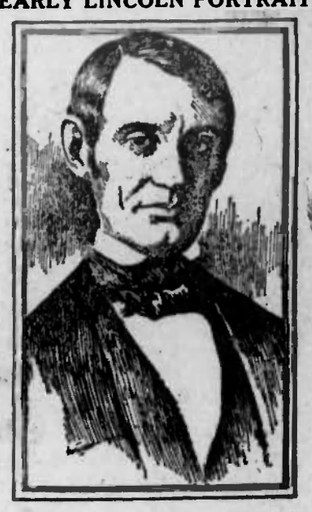
EARLY LINCOLN PORTRAIT



The earliest portrait of Lincoln taken just before he was 40 years old. This was fourteen years after he courted Ann Rutledge, but he must have looked very nearly like this at that time. Woodrow Wilson said of this portrait: "It seems to me both striking and singular. The fine brows and forehead, and the pensive sweetness of the clear eyes, give to the noble face a peculiar charm. There is in the expression the dreaminess of the familiar face without its later sadness."

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Md.

At a recent meeting of the Directors of the Baltimore Livestock show it was decided to hold the 1930 show October 14, 15, 16, 17. A new classification was presented and other plans discussed for improvements in the various departments.

Baltimore Livestock Show

One of the features of the coming show will be an open class for individual steers. No 4-H club entries are eligible in this class, which is designed for farmers and cattle feeders only. The steers in this class must be shown at the halter. Entries in this class cannot be entered as one of any group or carlot. The object of this class is to give an opportunity to farmers and cattle feeders who cannot get into the other classes. The steer winning first in the class will compete with the winning 4-H Club steers for the championship. Classes for fat hogs and fat lambs were also provided.

The fat cattle carlot classes were divided into one for heavy steers weighing over 1100 pounds, and the other for fat steers weighing under 1100 pounds. Classes were also provided for a group of steers, 6 to 10 in number, weighing over 1100 lbs., and another of similar groups weighing under 1100 lbs.

It is not too early for livestock men to start plans to have their entries ready for the show next fall.

Dates for Canning Crops School are Set for February 18 to 20.

Canners and growers of canning crops from all sections of the State are expected to attend the annual Canning Crops School, to be held at the University of Maryland, February 18 to 20.

According to F. W. Geise, professor of vegetable culture at the University of Maryland, a long list of interesting speakers has been arranged. The meetings will be held in the Agricultural building and will start each day at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. Tuesday evening there will be a get-to-gether dinner at which President R. A. Pearson of the University of Maryland, will say a few words to the visiting canners and field men. H. P. Hall, president of the Tri-State Packers' association and Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the University of Maryland Experiment Station, will also speak at this time.

The meetings will open Tuesday morning with an address of welcome by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University Extension service. Following Dr. Symons, individuals from the University and State will talk on the problems of grower and canner. The meetings will continue through Wednesday and Thursday.

In addition to the discussion groups there will be interesting exhibits of the latest spraying and dusting outfits, especially those adapted for the Mexican Bean Beetle control work. A number of insecticide manufacturers and dealers will also show their products. Much of the conference will be taken up with talks on the Mexican Bean Beetle.

Silage is Cheapest Roughage for the Cows

Feeding silage to Western beef calves at the University of Illinois last winter saved $1.70 a hundred in the cost of grain. The lot to which silage was fed put on fat at a cost of $8.80 a hundred. A similar lot fed mixed hay in place of silage gained at a cost of $10.50 a hundred over a period of 168 days.

Livestock specialists at the Illinois Station say that feeders who turned away from silage a few years ago when they changed over from heavy cattle to calves are now filling their silos again. It was a tendency among many farmers at first to feed too much silage to calves. This overfeeding of roughage resulted in rapid growth but slow fattening. Since that time, experiments have shown that the amount of silage fed to beef calves should be limited.

Calves fed at Illinois University were given eight pounds of silage per day and two pounds of alfalfa hay in addition to their grain ration. As a result, they gained 2½ pounds a day for seven months and sold within a half dollar of the top of the market. No other ration has given comparable results with calves at the experiment station. The Herd Improvement records showed that cows that were fed silage, the cost of producing milk was reduced 35 to 37 cents per 100 pounds.

What About the Dairy Situation

The dairy situation is causing a lot of excitement and anxiety among the dairymen. It seems to me if all dairymen would get busy and cull the "boarder" cows from their herds they would make more money, first by receiving a larger income per dollar invested. Second, the marketing of the low producing cows would lower milk production thereby relieving the milk and cream situation.

The following was taken from a radio talk given by C. V. Whalin, on January 27, 1930.

"The dairy industry apparently has reached a point in the production cycle where further immediate expansion is likely to react unfavorably on prices and may bring serious loss to producers.

"Dairymen face a period of readjustment. The number of milk cows was increased 3 per cent in 1929. The number of heifers, 6 per cent greater than a year ago, is sufficient to cause still further increases in cow numbers in 1930. While the underlying situation is not so bad as would appear from current butter prices, the duration of the period of readjustment will depend partly on the promptness with which producers adjust their methods to meet the situation, by close culling out of their old or low-producing cows, and by either marketing a larger quantity of milk in the form of veal or, in the beef section, allowing more calves to run with the cows."

Paul Kern, Hungery's insomniac welfare worker, wounded in the head in 1915 while fighting the Russians, the bullet wound causing a nervous disease, has not slept for fifteen years. He is the wonder of medical science.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

Opponents to the fourth term have not been seeking much publicity this week but they have been busy nevertheless. Their current task is to further consolidate the opposition to Ritchie behind State Senator David G. McIntosh, Jr., before making any announcements.

Some of those inimical to the Governor's plan to hold on have been puzzled or disappointed at the apparent lack of activity but those within what might be termed the executive camp say there has been no idleness whatever. Every day has been utilized in strengthening the lines of the combination that has been formed in the effort to prevent a general defeat of the Democratic party in the next election through one-man domination.

As it is now stated the one obstacle to a reasonable amount of harmony within the Maryland Democracy is the attitude of the Governor and his effort to hold on to office indefinitely. Once Ritchie is gotten out of the way it appears that a slate for the next election will be speedily agreed upon by the leaders and the party may avoid a primary election contest.

At last, it appears, some of those close to His Excellency have come to realize the seriousness of the party situation. The result is that where they were defiant a month or so ago they now hint at a conference. A conference, they seem to think, is the best way to compose the differences in the party.

The fact seems to be that no large element of the party is strongly opposed to the nomination of Senator McIntosh. Nor is any big element vocally antagonistic to the nomination of any one of the party men who have been suggested for the office recently—except Governor Ritchie. The present Governor is the one man against whom thousands of Democrats—who have supported him three times—have at last turned. Thousands of regular Democrats are now anti-Ritchie without being strongly pro-anybody else. They are determined not to vote for Ritchie any longer and resent the attitude of the Governor in trying to force his renomination.

In the absence of a carefully taken straw vote there is nothing on which to base an opinion of the situation except the public and private expressions of individual voters. Reports from various parts of the State agree in substance and to the effect that the disaffected vote is more than sufficient to wipe out the plurality that the Governor obtained in 1926. Not only is this the plain fact but there is ample evidence to show that the Ritchie strength is fast ebbing.

Apparently the Governor would have done better had he announced himself a candidate in the Autumn soon after the McIntosh movement started. He would then have appeared as the possessor of courage. Now with his ears to the ground, trying to line up this one and that one, visiting this leader or that and trying to win support for a fourth term, he is no heroic figure. And the longer he delays his announcement the more desperate will his position be.

Republicans Can Take Their Choice

From the inner precincts of the City Hall come two reports—sure thing reports too. The first is that Mayor Broening will soon announce himself a candidate for Governor on the Republican ticket; and the other is that the Mayor will not be a candidate at all.

Both reports come from what may be called well informed sources and as the one contradicts the other the reader will have to make his own choice.

Fact is, we have never before had such contradictory reports from the City Hall. All we can make out of it is that at this writing the Mayor has not made up his mind. Mature deliberation is a habit with him and he is not likely to change his habits.

Circumstantial is the report that Senator Goldsborough, National Committeeman Jackson and ex-Senator Weller are in substantial accord on the subject of the Mayor's candidacy and that all three are of the opinion that the party can make a successful fight on a wet and dry issue—the very issue that is the favorite of Governor Ritchie—in Maryland.

Mayor Broening is considered anything except a dry. He has never been a wet champion but all his surroundings are wet. The Anti-Saloon League people look upon him as an out-and-out wet and they have already begun mauling him on that account. The Mayor's friends say that he would run on a platform of constitutionalism, whatever that may mean or not mean. They say Mr. Gildsborough got through that way and it is the Goldsborough vote on which the drys build their hopes of being able to carry Maryland in the State election.

Coming Events Cast
Their Shadows Before

The Governor has had his portrait painted and hung in the State House and this seems to qualify him for early retirement if nothing else does. So far as we know the late Edwin Warfield was the only Governor who had his portrait painted and hung in the State Capitol before his retirement from office. And for that with other things he got a vigorous panning from the late Joseph B. Seth, at that time President of the State Senate.

The Governor's portrait was painted in Washington by an English artist who is engaged in putting on canvas the likeness of President Hoover and other prominent Americans. The picture cost $1,000 appropriated by the Legislature and on top of that, we understand, $250 had to be expended for a fitting frame.

Coincident with the painting of the official portrait of His Excellency there was also painted by the same artist a picture of State Treasurer John M. Dennis, although there is no good reason to think that Mr. Dennis has given serious thought to the suggestion that he might retire at the end of his present term. The Dennis portrait has been hung in the State Treasurer's office at Annapolis and the whole business was done at the expense of the Treasurer himself. We have not yet seen it and therefore we cannot say whether the likeness is a good one but we are told that the Treasurer liked it well enough to pay the money for it and that should make it satisfactory to pretty much everyone else.

Some think that the Governor's portrait makes him look older than his years but the fact is that in recent months he has had much to disturb his equanimity.

Brooke Lee Scheme
Bumps Into Snag

A scheme said to be backed by Mr. Brooke Lee for the building by the Federal Government of a memorial highway between Washington and Gettysburg appears to have hit a snag or two. The resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to study the question was introduced in Congress by Senator Tydings, a friend of Lee. Following its introduction the Silver Spring (Lee) Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution suggesting that the highway should be an extension of Sixteenth Street. That would be a benefit to the Lee real estate holdings.

As soon as the project was understood in Montgomery county a ruction was started, the residents along the present State highway from the District of Columbia to Rockville raising a protest that they were to be ignored. Accordingly they sent delegations to call on Senator Goldsborough and Representative Zihlman with the result that the Silver Spring part of the scheme has been given such a jolt that it is not thought the Tydings resolution will pass.

And then right on top of that it is stated that State Senator Eugene Jones, formerly a Lee adherent, will be the anti-Lee candidate for the State Senate in the coming primaries. This probably does not please the Lee forces, as Dr. Jones is a strong man.

Scoop to Get Invitation

Art Green, one of the chief gazaboes of the Swanton road celebration in early spring, was in The Republican office on Monday with apologies that invitations had not yet been sent out to Scoop, the boss editor, and Archibaldson. Art promised an embossed invitation in the near future and explained that a printer's strike down in Swanton had held up the party.

The corn club of Swanton had passed all requirements, he said, because members of the Oakland Corn club had tested the results and had found them up to standard. "All we need now is time," he said.

That note at the bottom of the Homemakers Corner last week looked like a mistake, but the recipes wouldn't have been complete without them. The names of the homemakers could be added by purchasing Campbell's vegetable soup, extracting the necessary letters for spelling the names, and adding with a pinch of salt to each one. This would have resulted in a tasty morsel.

Amalgamates Meet Again

At the first meeting of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work to be held this year, the president moved that if the members couldn't forsake Amos and Andy long enough to have a meeting, there wasn't any use of keeping up the society.

They turned off the radio long enough to adopt the following:

Extracts from the creed of members of the society, few of which they believe:

That George Washington never told a lie.

That it is much more creditable to be the father of a son than a daughter.

That turkey is much better if it has been frozen.

That carrots are good for the complexion.

That milk will take away the smell of onions.

That an hour's sleep before midnight is worth two after midnight, and that it's never too late till two, and then it's too late.

That a girl who smokes cigarets is immoral.

That women are the weaker sex.

That you can tell a hen-pecked husband by his drooping shoulders.

That the members would rather be right than be president.

That we used to have much heavier snows than we do now.

That the town drunkard is really the smartest man in the county if he would stay sober, and ain't it a shame he can't control himself?

That too much meat causes high blood pressure.

That even your best friend won't tell you about halitosis.

That all women are beautiful to their husbands.

Vice versa.

That all prescriptions given by physicians contain either castor oil or Epsom salts.

That it is impossible to cut your chin with a safety razor.

That a battered hat, several years old, denotes sophistication.

That some women "just look good in anything."

That you wouldn't trade your radio for any you have ever heard anywhere.

That Garrett county is drier since the last meeting of the Grand Jury.

That it's no use being Irish unless you're dumb. (according to Jim Kerins.)

That corn in a bottle is worth two on the feet.

Scoop Gets Official Forecast

Joe Gonder's spotted male pup presented the following to Scoop at the Postoffice on Monday morning:

Homeden, Snaggy Mountain,
February 3, 1930.

Dear Scoop:

Whenever you refer to me in the future do not confuse me with sausage. I admit that sausage is ground hog, but, remember, I am the only original weather prognosticator.

In order that those of my friends who still have confidence in my sagacity may know how to prepare for the next six weeks, I want to report that on yesterday I aroused myself sufficiently to waddle to my front door to cast my weather eye about. At first glance the surrounding gloom filled my heart with joy. I looked to the right, I looked to the left, I looked in front and I looked behind. No shadow! I was just preparing to descend to the low lands for a few nibbles of my favorite spring tonic, when, cursesl the clouds parted and the blinding rays of the morning sun penetrated my leafy bower. Hastily casting my eye in all directions I found my shadow sharply defined against a rattle snake den. Ye gods and little fishes! Hastily gathering up my eye which I had cast about, I gave the lowbrow sign of high derision to the Sun, and returned to my bed chamber, for another snooze.

Please tell some of your red nose friends that in about six weeks I'll need a little eye opener.

Yours for six weeks of ..!.. weather,

DADDY GROUNDHOG.

Five Copies of Lincoln's Speech At Gettysburg

Abrnhnm Lincoln's nddress at Gettysburg is unique among his speeches in many particulars, one of which is that there are in existence nt the present time no less than five copies of it in Lincoln's own handwriting. In only a few cases is there a single copy of other speeches. The first inaugural, for instance, was composed in Springfield and set up in pica type in the office of the Illinois State Journal, and, after some interlineation and the addition of a closing paragraph suggested by Secretary Sewnrd, was delivered from the corrected proof, and not from the original manuscript. So far ns I am aware the manuscript was not brought away from Springfield by Lincoln nor preserved in the printing office. The Journal for many years hnd been accustomed to receiving editorials and other matter in his hand writing, and neither the editor, Simeon Francis, nor any one of his compositors took thought that this was to become a document of historic interest and that the original would he valuable.

Copy Not Preserved.

Most of Lincoln's speeches, if written out, met a like fate. If the copy came back from the office with the proof, Lincoln tossed it into the waste hasket, and no one rescued it. After be became President, of course, he knew and every one knew that his handwriting would be in demand, but no one looked for the time when his letter to General Hooker would sell at auction for $10,000. So most of his speeches perished in the original manuscript, perished in the very process of preserving them in print; and of the few that were prescrved there is usually only one copy.

The five copies of the Gettysburg address, two are in the Library of Congress. One of them is mainly in ink, written on a sheet of paper headed with the usual "Executive Mansion" caption. The other sheet is ruled letter paper of the snme size, and with wide spaces between the lines. It is the paper that was commonly used in the White House for speeches or docnments likely to need interlineation, and is identical in quality with that used by the President for the second draft of the Gettysburg speech and for the second inaugural. The writing on the second sheet of the first draft of the nddress is in pencil. The pencil was used also to erase a few words at the bottom of the first page.

The second Library of Congress draft is a fair copy of the first draft. It is written wholly in ink.

Without stopping here and now to give my reasons, I believe that the first page of the first draft was written in ink before Lincoln left Washington. If he completed this draft at the time, nnd there was a second page in ink, he became dissatisfied with it and cast it aside. I think he wrote the second page, in pencil, in Gettysburg, probably on the night before the delivery of the address. The second Library of Congress draft I think was written in Gettysburg on the morning of the delivery. The place of writing was in the home of Judge Wills, facing the public square.

Just to dispose of a question which is sure to rise, whether Lincoln did not write the nddress upon the back of an envelope on the train on his wny from Washington to Gettysburg, let me nnswer that he may have made a few pencilled notes, and for this purpose may have nsed the back of an envelope, but he did not write the address as a whole in any such fashion. In my judgment the two Library of Congress drafts were both written before the delivery of the address. Of the other three we know the history. They were all written after the address hnd been delivered.

Five Texts of Speech.

The first two copies vary but little from each other. The last three copies vary but little from one another. How they vary I have set forth in interlinear versions in my "Life of Lincoln." The important fact is that we have five texts in Lincoln's handwriting, no two of them exactly alike, and that they fall clearly into two groups, two in one and the earlier group, three in the other and the later group, and that we know in detail the history of the last three.

Intermediate between these two groups in Lincoln's own hand are a number of other versions printed at the time. First of these is the Associated Press report prepared by Joseph L. Gilbert. He did not pretend to have taken down Lincoln's exact words, but reported the speech partly in shorthand and checked up in a hasty comparison with Lincoln's manuscript. The second was a special report used in one Philadelphia newspaper, one Cincinnati newspaper and in the local newspaper in Gettysburg. It was a very poor report. The third was, as I judge, the one report that tells us exactly what Lincoln did say. It was made by Charles Hale of the Boston Advertiser, one of the official Massachusetts commissioners. His written affirmation to Gov. John A. Andrew, that Lincoln spoke very slowly, and that Hale was able to get the precise wording, is as good as the oath of a court stenographer certifying the accuracy of his version.

We know, I think, what Lincoln intended to say, what he did say, what he was reported to have said, and what he wished he had said.

Surely Lincoln's Words.

Neither of the drafts of Lincoln's manuscript made before the delivery of the address contains the two words, "under God." Both say, "that we here highly resolve . . . that the nation shall have a new birth of freedom." But every stenographic report, good, bad and indifferent, says "that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom." There was no common source from which all the reporters could have obtained those words but from Lincoln's own lips at the time of delivery. It will not do to say that Stanton suggested those words after Lincoln's return to Washington, for the words were telegraphed by at least three reporters on the afternoon of delivery and published all over the country. Nor will it answer to say that Seward suggested them the night before as words that would convey to the people assembled a suggestion of piety, for John G. Nicolay gives a clear history of the writing of the second draft on the morning of delivery, and the second draft does not include those words.

But all three of Lincoln's copies that were made after the address had been delivered do contain the words of the three or more reports made while he was speaking, "under God." Lincoln said those words; the several independent reports that went to the wires at once agree that he said them; and Lincoln certainly wished to be remembered as having said them, for he wrote them into every one of the three copies which he made for permanent record.

Where, then, did Lincoln get those words? He got them, I think, out of his own stock of phraseology. He was not given to the careless use of religious phrases, but this one he used at other times. It came to him as he sat on the platform at Gettysburg, inspired by the sense of solemnity that the occasion brought upon him. The journey, the reception of the night before, the parade, the sight of the battlefield, the long and eloquent oration of Edward Everett and the growing depth of feeling as his own time came to speak, roused in him a deeper sense of the nation's need of reliance in God than had been in his mind when he was engaged in the work of writing.—William E. Barton, in the New York Times Magazine.

MT. LAKE PARK

We do not need to tell the readers of this column that news has been scarce in these parts for some weeks past. And the groundhog has just about finished what little activity there was. Stopping in Weeks & Weeks store to get our daily papers we found the usual bunch discussing the weather, but as Mark Twain remarked, they didn't seem to be able to do anything about it. Then dropping down to Harvey & Ream's to see if the junior member had any news for us, we found that he belonged to the Know Nothing party. While he continued his sanitary, if unprofitable job of dusting off the merchandise and trying to sell a job-lot of collars, ranging in size from 00 to 17 and a half, one or two of the bunch, with some show of energy, began to discuss politics. We began to cast about for an excuse to "duck," as we can't get het up at this season of the year over that subject, when one of the buttonholders remarked that he thought we ought to be represented in this community on the Board of County Commissioners. Well, we became interested at once and "yessed" him with energy. That sounded to us like a good, sensible proposition, for with the completion of the new road to Gorman we are going to be on an improved through highway and on the map. The region over the mountains is going to develop and this community will be something more than a fly speck on the map of Garrett county.

And further, we have heard it suggested that Charles E. "Bush" Hardesty, the present Mayor and member of the Council of Loch Lynn, would be a good man to represent the community in this most important position. There is other good timber on that side of the railroad track. Likewise we have in mind two or three upstanding gentlemen here in Mt. Lake Park proper, any of whom would fill the position with credit.

Well, we have made the suggestion and if any of the political-minded think it worth while, it is not too early to get busy.

* * *

The groundhog seems to be starting in with a firm determination to make good his prophecy of the second. Which, by the way reminds us that we saw in the press that some church organization in a neighboring city has staged a supper, the principal item on the bill of fare being—what do you suppose? Turkey, chicken, or oysters? No, sir. Groundhog! We approve of this idea. We note that great throngs flocked to the supper and a number of these ill-omened prophets, flanked by sweet potatoes and hominy, are no more.

We believe church organizations, Rotary clubs, Knights of Columbus, Knights of Pythias, and Masons should adopt for their slogan for the next six months "Eat Groundhog," and then adopt a by-law making it compulsory for each member to eat so many during a given period. As an aid to this campaign, we would enlist the active cooperation of the president of the Annanias club, Daniel Boon, his chief of staff, and Davy Crockett, its secretary. These combined efforts would so intimidate Mr. Groundhog tha twhen the second of the next February rolls around, he would be afraid to come forth and, therefore, there would be no shadow, even if the sun did shine. We could therefore end winter at the proper time.

SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WEEK TO CLOSE WITH PROGRAM

Get-together Meeting to be Held Tonight at the K. of P. Hall—Scout Executive To Speak

The peak of Scout Anniversary Week will be reached tonight at a get-together meeting of members of Oakland Troop, No. 1, with their parents, members of the Court of Honor, troop committee and Ladies Auxiliary to be held in the Knights of Pythias Hall at 7:30 o'clock.

The program will include a first aid demonstration and the presentation of a short play by the Boy Scouts, an address by Mr. Frank B. Gale, scout executive of the Cumberland Council, and short talks by Mr. H. A. Loraditch, vice-chairman of the Court of Honor; Mrs. B. I. Gonder, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary; Mr. Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the troop committee, and George H. Hanst, local scoutmaster. Mr. Dawson will also act as chairman of the meeting.

Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary will have charge of the refreshments. The meeting tonight will bring to a close the celebration of anniversary week, which began on February 7.

Mobilized Wthin Half Hour

By a new method of mobilization, which was tried out Saturday morning, forty of the forty-five scouts were at the scout hall within twenty-five minutes after the signal was given. Only the four buglers and the scoutmaster knew what time the signal was to be sounded.

After the assembly each individual scout inspected the town with the express purpose of listing all the fire and safety hazards which he discovered.

Attend Church Services

Thirty-four members of the troop gathered at 10:30 Sunday morning and attended services in the Lutheran church where the pastor, Rev. C. A. Shilke, delivered a sermon to the scouts and the assembled congregation.

Yesterday was known as "Home Day", and a number of parents had special dinners in honor of their boys. The scouts, in turn, did some special "good turn" in the home on that day.

"Scout Anniversary Week is celebrated for the purpose of bringing more definitely to the attention of each community the value of scouting as a program for work with boys for the development of character and for training in citizenship," the scoutmaster stated.

"It is also celebrated so as to impress upon the minds of the scouts themselves that there are many troops throughout the world committed to the same obligation and that their members do a 'good turn daily.'"

SAFETY HAZARDS OF CITY LISTED BY LOCAL SCOUTS

Report Will Be Turned Into the Mayor and City Council

Members of the Oakland Troop of Boy Scouts inspected the entire town for safety hazards and fire hazards, as their part in the Community Day program of Anniversary Week, which is being celebrated over the entire United States from February 7 to 13, inclusive. The inspective was done at the suggestion of A. T. Shaw, superintendent of the West Maryland Power Company for Oakland district.

"A Good Turn for the Community" was the special assignment for Saturday, February 8, and this was done by the 45 members of the troop when they uncovered many places deemed to be unsafe for the welfare of the town and its citizens. The list, when checked over by Mr. Shaw and Geo. H. Hanst, scoutmaster, will be presented to Mayor Fraley and the City Council. Investigation into the safety and fire hazards as reported by the Scouts will be made by the town offirge first aid kit will be pre- to the patrol in the troop find- largest list of real dangers. er first-aid kit, but complete detail, will be presented to dual Scout reporting the nber of real dangers. Both resented to the troop by rough the courtesy of the nd Power Company.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE IS SCHEDULED FOR MT. LAKE

Four Hundred to Five Hundred Persons Expected in August

That the Moody Bible Institute would hold its annual conference at Mountain Lake Park this summer is the information received from reliable sources in that community and also direct from the Institute In Chicago. Definite arrangements have been completed and the conference will meet in August.

The institute includes a number of internationally known men and women who will give tone to the program and the matters that will incidentally come up for discussion. A like conference was held at the Park a few years ago at which time the meeting was a highly successful one.

This booking will tend to bring to the Park some four hundred or five hundred delegates from all sections of the country.

The program for the rest of the season is being completed, Mr. Frank E. Baker, superintendent of the Park, has announced. The completed program will be arranged and printed in a short time and will then be distributed and will include the camp meeting, theological conferences, Epworth League institutes, interdenominational School of Missions and various other attractions of the highest order.

FARMERS BANK IS NOW A STATE DEPOSITORY

Recently Designated As Such by Treasury Department

The Farmers Bank of Oakland, a State chartered institution, was recently designated by the State Treasury Department as a depository of State funds, which means that at all times the local institution will carry on deposit money placed there by the financial officers of the commonwealth.

It is said to be rather unusual for a bank as young as the local institution to be designated as a depository of State funds. This fact is a creditable reflection on the management of the bank and its standing in the community.

Violator of School Attendance Law Sent to Jail

John C. Uphold, of White Rock, near Friendsville, was committed to jail Wednesday morning when he failed to pay a fine of $5 and costs for violating the school attendance law.

Uphold has refused to send his children to school for some time past and as a consequence he was arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace E. I. West after the constable having the warrant to serve had made three trips to his home, each time until Tuesday Uphold being absent.

Orval Friend, of McCabe school, was fined a like sum with costs by the same justice on a charge laid against him similar to that against Uphold. The latter paid the fine and was dismissed.

PROF. WILBUR J. GLENN

Prof. Wilbur J. Glenn, principal of Friendsville High School, will be the chief speaker of the evening at the regular weekly meeting of the Oakland Rotary club tomorrow evening at 6:15 o'clock at the William-James hotel. He will address the Rotarians on the subject of "Lincoln." Professor Glenn has been principal of the Friendsville High school for two years.

HOMEMAKERS TO SHARE IN COOKING DEMONSTRATION

To Be Held Coming Week Under Miss Benthien's Supervision

Cooking demonstrations will be held during the coming weeks at the Loch Lynn Aid hall, office of the home demonstration agent, and in homes of the various clubwomen, according to Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent. These demonstrations are a part of a county-wide project in the preparation and serving of meals which is being carried on by the women of the county under the supervision of Miss Benthien. There will be demonstrations at the home of Mrs. S. C. Beachy, Bittinger, and at the home of a member of the Friendsville and Selbysport clubs.

At these meetings "muffins" will be baked, using a pattern recipe with emphasis on what a pattern recipe is, the accurate measurements, proportion of ingredients and method. "Nutrition plays an important part in each food demonstration," Miss Benthien said, "so with muffins, there will be a number of variations that will add interest as to the health factor."

Several homemakers will assist with the demonstration. The muffins will be judged so that all may learn some of the causes of failure and just what must be done to obtain a successful product.

Unusual interest has been shown in this prospect by the women of the county, according to Miss Benthien, and in her opinion it is one of the most helpful they have understaken. It deals with the practical and everyday problems which make the routine in every home and which every homemaker is striving to make easier and less time consuming. She is particularly anxious that many of those who have not been in the habit of attending demonstrations in past years shall take advantage of this opportunity. It is her advice that each woman locate the demonstration that is most convenient to attend and then make plans to do so.

Walter W. Dawson To Address Local Brotherhood

Walter W. Dawson will be the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood to be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the Lutheran church.

73-YEAR OLD FARMER IS KILLED BY HIS OWN GUN

August Snyder, Bittinger, Insantly Killed When Shotgun is Accidentally Discharged

August Snyder, 73-year old Garrett county farmer, was instantly killed Tuesday afternoon about two o'clock at a point on Negro Mountain four miles from Bittinger when his shotgun was accidenally discharged, the load of shot penetrating his side.

The man's lifeless body was found about twenty minutes afterward by a hunting companion, Luther Miller, of near Grantsville, with whom Albert Jones, of Fairchance, Pa., and Mr. Snyder were hunting foxes on the Joel Beachy farm located on Negro mountain. From appearance and the fact that the body was found by a stump it is presumed that Mr. Snyder had climbed upon it and in drawing his firearm toward him the hammer had caught on the bark and caused it to discharge. His companions heard the explosion but thought he had fired at a fox or some other animal and did not at once go to the point where he was.

Mr. Snyder is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Snyder and by ten children, four sons: Ellis, Sherman, Elmer and Irvin, and by six daughters: Mrs. Chariotte Platter, Mrs. Carrie Beitzel, Mrs. Cynthia Beitzell, Mrs. Ella Wiley, Mrs. Ethel Ohler and another daughter whose name could not be learned, all of them residing in the Bittinger community. He is also survived by one brother, Adam Snyder.

Mr. Snyder will probably be buried today following services at his late home. He was a member of the M. E. church.

FAIRSWEEP AND PEERLESS LEADERS IN ATTENDANCE

Two Schools Have Percentage of One Hundred During January

Fairsweep and Peerless schools, both rural, are again tied for first honors in attendance during the first month of the new year according to John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer, for Garrett county. Each of the above named schools had one hundred per cent in attendance, making the third consecutive time that Fairsweep has attained that mark, and the second consecutive time for Peerless school. Fairsweep school has been at the head of the attendance bulletin for four months.

The Friendsville supervisory unit, under Miss Gladys Hamill, had the highest average in attendance of any of the four units with a percentage of 92. Grantsville unit, under Miss Kate Bannatyne, had 91.8 per cent; Oakland unit, under Miss Grace Shatzer, had 91.7 per cent, while Kitzmiller unit, supervised by Miss Flossie Skidmore, had a percentage of 88.3. Oakland and Kitzmiller supervisory districts had the two highest schools in attendance—Fairsweep in Oakland district and Peerless in Kitzmiller district.

Accident High Above Other Schools

Accident High School led the other five high schools of the county with an average of 96.8. The others in this group were as follows: Kitzmiller, 95.3; Grantsville, 95.1; Friendsville, 95; Kempton, 95; Oakland 92.7.

Schools making 97 per rcent or more include Promised Land, Lake Ford, Pine Swamp, Rich Hill, Long Stretch, New Germany, Mineral Spring, Caton, Strawberry Hill, Dry Run, Rock Lodge, Bishoff and Short Run.

To Assist In Filing Income Tax Returns

A deputy collector of internal revenue will be in Oakland on February 25 and 26 for the purpose of assisting taxpayers in filing income tax returns for the calendar year 1929, according to Galen L. Tait, collector, of Baltimore.

Oakland is the only place in Garrett county scheduled for a visit.

Suffers Broken Leg While Engaged in Logging

Albert Steyer, aged 40 years, son of Samuel G. Steyer, of near White Church, had the misfortune of having his left leg broken on Friday last while engaged in logging. He was attended by Dr. N. I. Broadwater, of Oakland.

CLERK GETS MANY LETTERS AND TELEPHONE CALLS ASKING DETENTION PROSPECTIVE MARRIAGE COUPLES

Messages Frequently Direct Arrest of Parties—Four or Five Letters Received Daily

There is no law against a man thinking that he would like to get married, and even going so far as to get the consent of his "one and only" and bringing her to Oakland for that purpose, but judging from the number of letters and telephone calls received at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court and by the Sheriff of Garrett county, practically everyone appears to think so.

"Arrest him when he gets to Oakland and hold the girl until we get there," is a customary command over the long distance wire, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk. But the man must have done something to deserve arrest before anything like that command or request can be carried out effectively.

Four or five letters are received almost every day at the Clerk's office in reference to the issuance of marriage licenses, it is said, and many requests for information are entirely beyond reason and out of the question. Some man from West Virginia or Pennsylvania will ask the clerk to please send a list of the marriage licenses issued between December 15 and January 30, giving names of parties, places of residence, ages, occupation and minister's name who married them. This question in itself would take more than a day to answer, it was said.

Oother letters come in asking that a license be not issued to Miss Take and Mr. Nogood for various reasons. Telephone messages repeat similar requests.

"The only thing we can do in cases like these," Mr. Ross said, "is to question the applicant more closely than usual, and tell him the consequences of perjuring himself. He is under oath, whereas the senders of the telephone messages and letters are not, and then there are the possibilities that a joke is being played, a rival trying to stall for time, or somebody with a grudge against one or both of the parties trying to get even."

"If the applicant, under affidavit, says he is 21 years of age, and the girl eighteen years of age, and other questions are satisfactorily answered, there is no reason why a license should not be issued. Sometimes the persons enquired about never put in an appearance. But the letters and telephone messages continue to come and probably will continue until Oakland ceases to become the mecca for prospective husbands and wives."

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

So quiet and peaceful have the Democrats been the last few days that attention has been centered more or less on the Republicans and the question one most often hears is: "Whom are the Republicans going to nominate for Governor?"

Those who were predicting that Mayor Broening would before his departure for the land of the Everglades announce himself a candidate for the chair to which Mr. Ritchie is trying to attach himself for life were sadly disappointed and joined the list of poor guessers. The Mayor said not a word and thereby caused some of the keenest observers to remark: "I told you so. He'll never make any announcement at all."

Well, the Mayor is some sort of a postponer by nature and he is running true to form. He likes to delay till tomorrow what he doesn't have to do today. And that covers much.

Under the influence of the Florida sunshine His Honor is expected to become even more deliberative. Certainly he is counted on to deliberate until he gets back to dear old Baltimore.

Some of the City Hall chiefs are going down to Florida this week-end to make more or less whoopee with His Honor. We haven't the list of names but it may be changed at the last minute anyway. Another snow might come and that should keep Commodore Goob home to answer the complaints of those who think the snow isn't removed fast enough. And so on with some others in the Hall.

The impression that the Mayor will not get into the race for Governor grows. It is based chiefly on a belief that Mr. Broening wants to keep step with other State leaders and not muss up his party in a day of excellent prospects.

But whom will the Republicans nominate? Nobody knows. There is insistent demand from some that a dry be named—a dry known to be dry. This on the strength of the Goldsborough vote over Wm. Cabell Bruce in 1928. A lot of city wets make dry faces over this and mutter cuss words. Yet in the counties many dry Democrats applaud the suggestion, as both Governor Ritchie and Senator McIntosh are wet. It is said on every hand that a Republican dry would draw a tremendous dry Democratic vote in the counties and especially on the Eastern Shore.

The Democratic situation, to put it candidly, gets no better. Ritchie's under cover struggle to get a renomination and retain his hold on the party machinery is creating such bitterness that many predict an overwhelming Republican victory in the general election. No one knows what the Governor will do in the end but everybody knows what he is doing now, and that is playing politics to the limit and trying to muster support for renomination regardless of election chances. Evidence of his activities are seen in the effort of his followers to organize some of the most insurgent wards in the city to his advantage.

In the counties, it is no secret, some of the Governor's supporters in past campaigns are weakening. They despair at the prospect of electing him if nominated. They don't want to lose their local candidates. Some have even gone so far as to advocate a policy of nonresistance and to suggest that he be allowed to nomination by default in order to prevent local fights. Then, according to this school of Democracy, Mr. Ritchie would be permitted to "get his" with all accumulated interest in the general election next November.

But this is only one view and it is not held by so many although practically all of the Ritchie opponents now agree that his strength is waning and that no matter what it may amount to it will never be sufficient to elect him over a Republican of average standing.

The quiet in the McIntosh camp is said to be only temporary. The leaders in that camp are doing all they can to line up organized support. They report good progress but at this time not sufficient to shut off the Governor's candidacy and drive him to retirement. But the one thing that puzzles them most is the apparent belief of the Governor in his own political invincibility. They marvel that he has no friend candid and able enough to impress the truth of the situation upon him.

It is noticeable that the Ritchie shouters have in the last few weeks ceased their noises. Some have become sceptical and are looking for a place to go. They are not yet sure that McIntosh will be the party nominee. They want to get on the high side.

In the city court house the silence and doubt continues. There is little talk there for Ritchie. Criminal Court Clerk Eddie Gross, a Ritchie enthusiast, has gone to Florida to look after his spinach crop and some others over there are playing the soft pedal and saying they do not want to lose their jobs.

Governor Tries
A New Scheme

On the very day that the ten cent car fare was made effective in Baltimore City the Governor came to the front with a proposition that the State (taxpayers) build the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge, which is to cost $11,000,000 plus. Evidently His Excellency thought something should be done to distract attention from the car fare which has been boo'ed along by the Public Service Commissioners through one move after another including the placing of a high valuation on property that nobody seems to want to buy at any price.

The Governor's scheme is not new but it evidences a change of heart. Indeed as far back in 1926 when the Democratic State platform was being drafetd, Howard W. Jackson, then the Mayor of Baltimore, suggested that the project be mentioned or indorsed in that document. But the Governor gave it the high hat. He didn't think it proper, and even as late as the Legislative session of 1927 when the first bridge bill was pending in the Legislature he manifested no concern. In fact one Senator went to him to get information on the subject and was surprised that His Excellency knew so little about it. In reply to questions the Governor is reported to have said in substance:

"All I know about the bridge is that I expect to ride over it if it is ever built."

But now the Governor thinks he can hook some Eastern Shore and Baltimore City support by getting back of the scheme and he is to name a friendly commission to make a report. All a political job, bald and open, and should fool nobody.

Mayor Broening's friends in the City Hall appeared much chagrined over the Governor's bridge proposal bacause His Honor had lately suggested that the enterprise should be made a matter of public aid and one of his supporters, we are told, had drafted a speech to be shortly delivered in which the idea was to be expanded as a boost to the Mayor's aspirations for higher office. Friends of the Mayor assert that there must have been a leak somewhere but they have not found its source, and woe be unto the leaker if he is discovered.

Furst Declaration
Is Deemed Important

Opponents of Governor Ritchie's fourth term project are interested in the reported declaration by Frank A. Furst to the effect that if the Governor is to be renominated then all the old Democratic ticket should be renamed. The others are Attorney General Thomas H. Robinson, Comptroller Wm. S. Gordy, Jr., and Appeals Court Clerk James A. Young. The State Treasurer does not run on the ticket—he is chosen by the Legislature.

If Mr. Furst sticks to his reported declaration then the Governor will be much embarrassed as he does not want his old running mates this trip. He evidently fears that so much reelection would weaken the whole ticket. Not only that, but he is said to regard Mr. Robinson as a load too heavy for sefety while he has just about as much love for Mr. Gordy as he has for State Treasurer Dennis. No doubt he would like to see all three of them thrown into the middle of the Chesapeake Bay with no life preserver or rescue boats in sight.

To date Mr. Furst has given no public approval of the fourth term candidate although those who have talked with him doubt his ability to resist the Ritchie blandishments. He yielded easily four years ago and is therefore expected to repeat the performance. Probably he feels under obligations to the Governor.

In the past Mr. Furst has proved his friendship for Messrs. Gordy, Robinson and Dennis. He is looked upon as their political savior. For years Mr. Dennis has been very friendly with Mr. Furst.

Nearly everyone now knows that the Gevernor has been casting around for a new candidate for Attorney General. His first choice apparently is former Judge Walsh of Cumberland. He is said to have flirted a bit with State's Attorney O'Conor, but friends of the latter consider him alert enough to discern the storm signals. Possibly O'Conor is not willing to be used as a sort of life preserver for His Excellency. And as for Mr. Walsh, although he is a great Ritchie devotee, he must by this time be aware of the unfavorable condi-

NEARLY 7,000 CHILDREN ARE GIVEN EXAMINATIONS

State Health Department Says "Keep Well Babies Well"

The importance of keeping the well baby well and of continuing the health supervision of the baby's older brothers and sisters, was brought to the attention of the mothers and fathers throughout the counties of Maryland in 1929, in connection with the child health conferences held under the joint direction of the local health officers and the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. Nearly 6,800 children, under school age, representing over 4,000 families, were brought to the conferences for a physical examination.

The report of the conferences, prepared by the Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., shows that 5,308 of the total number of children were white and 1,483 colored. Of the white children, 1,847 ranged in age from babies a few weeks old to children nearing five years old and 3,461 were from five to seven and were getting ready for admission to school. In the colored group, 882 were under five and 601 from four to seven.

A total of 420 conferences were held during the year and in connection with them 277 places, representing every county, were visited. Largely through the cooperation of the Parent-Teacher Associations, the State Board of Education, the County Superintendents of schools and teachers, many of the spring and summer conferences were held in, or near, school buildings and were arranged for the examination of children who were eligible for admission to school in September. Wherever conditions in need of correction were found—whether in the younger or the older group—the mother was instructed to take the child to the family physician. After each examination, a record of the findings was sent to the family physician.

Of the total number of children examined, 4,476 were from handicapping conditions. Forty per cent had unfavorable conditions of the nose or throat—1,987 with enlarged or infected tonsils, and 698 with adenoids. Of these, 389 were mouth breathers. Thirty-eight per cent—2,543 had decayed teeth and were in need of dental attention. Fifteen per cent—1,018—gave evidence of faulty nutrition; 356 had postural defects; 173 had unfavorable conditions of the lungs and 138 of the heart; 147 had some defect of vision; 134 of hearing and 45 were mentally retarded. Of the 3,461 in the pre-school group, 58 per cent—2,368—had not been vaccinated against smallpox.

The results of the examinations, Dr. Knox said, indicate clearly that a large proportion of the young children in the counties are not being taken to their doctors by their parents at this important period of growth and development, for the examination and advice that will keep them well.

Consumers' Wishes

The grading and standardizing of farm products is one of the most outstanding features of all agricultural meetings of today. The time is here when the consumer wants some assurance of quality whether his purchase is vegetables, eggs, meat or live stock.

The grading of hogs in pens and on the hoof by representatives of the U. S. D. A. is one of the latest developments in the hog market in Chicago. I believe the sooner producers find a way to get their products graded by "impartial, official, federal and state inspectors" the sooner they will solve some of their marketing problems.

The Garrett County Maple Products association will attempt for the first time to market its products under "Federal-State inspection." This is the first work of this kind to be done in this county. The producers and the Extension Service asks the loyal support of every citizen in the county, especially the business men.

The success of this work will determine to a great extent the success of the maple syrup industry in Garrett County in which all the Garrett Countians are or should be interested.

A Thimbleful Every Day

"Have you had your thimbleful of protein today?" said one baby chick to the other. The baby chick greeting came from the discovery made by specialists of poultry departments that a thimbleful of feed, high in protein, should constitute the daily meal of the young chick.

These research studies definitely establish two facts. First that a baby chick can consume only a very limited amount of feed daily—one-fourth of an ounce or about one thimbleful. Second, that the baby chicks' feed should be high in animal protein on the very order of feed that nature furnished all young birds in the days before civilized men entered an era of domesticating birds for his use. In milk products, meat scraps, wheat germ, alfalfa leaf meal and other ingredient these scientists discovered by experiment the feed exactly needed for the baby chicks.

Mr. Kaufman and his orchestra will play for the Firemen's dance, to be held in Naylor's Hall, Oakland's basketball floor, next Wednesday night. Mr. Kaufman played for a dance in Fraley's hall a short ago and won the favor of the dancers of Oakland and surrounding cities. The program will be played between the hours of 9 and 1 o'clock.

Big Attendance

Scoop is receiving some high words of commendation from officers of the Knights of Pythias lodge for making the mistake in the paper last week when he stated that the valentine celebration upon the founding of the lodge would be held last Friday evening instead of tomorrow evening. It is reported that there were members present who hadn't been inside the lodge room for ages and the attendance was far above normal. Mistakes occur sometimes, don't they, Harry?

The Truthful Editor

Don't get the idea that the following is all original, but the following news items have been received at The Republican office and are being printed with the names substituted. This is to give one an idea of what might happen if an editor always told the truth:

NEWS ITEM—Mrs. I. M. Downtrodden and two small children left today for the former's mother's home in Friendsville. Mrs. Downtrodden told us she was going to spend a few weeks with her mother, but it is common knowledge that her husband is on another toot and she has threatened to leave him again.

This makes the fifth time this year, that Mrs. Downtrodden has gone back to her mother and it may be that she will exceed her record-breaking year of 1926 when she made 14 trips to Friendsville.

Society Item.

Mrs. O. So Tight, Second street, whom we call prominent because her husband owns a share of stock in this paper, gave a party at the Blue Bird Inn last week; honoring her daughter who is visiting here from Grantsville.

This is the first party given by Mrs. Tight since her sister from Scotland visited her in 1913, and when the invitations were first reccived we all thought someone was playing a practical joke. Practically everyone took advantage of the invitation because at that rate there will be no more Tight parties until the fall of 1947.

Marriage Item

The community was not surprised to hear of the mariage of Oscar Nogood and Miss Mary Dumbbell, at Accident last week. The real surprise has been that they were not married long ago. The bride is exceedingly ugly. She says she is 30 but counting in the future as she has been keeping tract of her anniversaries for some years past, she will be 29 her next birthday. She graduated from the local high school while her father was a member of the school board. The groom is a very recent graduate of the Maryland House of Correction, and a post-graduate of the other institution located at Jessup's Cut. They will live at the home of the bride's father.

Obituary

O. U. Bluff, age 56, passed from all life one year ago today, February 13, 1929. Mr. Bluff was born in West Virginia and he was converted at an early age and received unto the local church. He remained a steadfast member until 15 years of age when he went into the saloon business. From then until he was 54 he lived a worldly life featuring lying, stealing, bootlegging and blasphemy. At 54 he developed tuberculosis and lived a Christian life until his death. If he is going to Heaven, aren't we all?

Play Presented

The ladies of the Now-Don't-Repeat-This Sewing Circle of Deer Park gave a so-called play Saturday before a large crowd of husbands and other relatives. Mrs. Jones received the most applause, but this was generally attributed to the fact that there are more Joneses in that town than there are Smiths. Chances are that the darn thing will be given again next week in Mountain Lake Park.

News Item.

A rumor that Mr. and Mrs. John Doe were the parents again of a baby daughter was confirmed reluctantly by the father here today. It is generally understood that neither of them were beside themselves with joy over the arrival since it will interfere to a slight degree only, however, with Mrs. Doe's bridge playing, and this coupled with the fact that it is the ninth daughter in twelve years adds to the tragedy. They are planning to name it "Enough."

Soak gelatine in cold water about five minutes. Scald consomme or soup stock with tomatoes and add soaked gelatine . When dissolved pour about half an inch layer into mold which has been previously rinsed in cold water. Stand mold in a pan containing ice water or crushed ice. When jelly is firm arrange peas around the edge and place asparagus tips upright around the sides. Arrange slices of eggs and tomato in the center. Fill with remaining gelatine mixture, making layers of egg slices and tomato slices in center of mold. Chill thoroughly in a cold place. To serve unmold on platter and arrange lettuce leaves, sprigs of parsley around it or individual molds may be used. Garnish with spoonfuls of mayonnaise.

Bisque Tortoni

One level teaspoonful gelatine, ¼ cup cold water, 1 cup scalded milk, 2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, 1 cup (½ pint) cream, whipped; ½ teaspoonful salt, ¾ cup macaroons or sugar cookies, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Soak gelatine in cold water about five minutes. Beat egg yolks, add sugar and add scalded milk. Cook on top of double boiler over boiling water until custard begins to thicken or mixture coats spoon. Remove from stove and add soaked gelatine. Cool and then add beaten whites of eggs, vanilla and salt. Fold in whipped cream. Freeze mixture until soft, mushy stage. Then pack in paper cups (custard cup size) and decorate top with bits of nuts, candied fruit or figures made from whipped cream which has been tinted pink or green and pushed through a pastry tube. Return paper cups to ice chamber of mechanical refrigerator to finish the freezing or pack in ice cream freezer container and surround with ice and rock salt. Serve when frozen, leaving mixture in paper cup. Crepe paper frills can be made to dress up the paper cup but is not necessary if dessert is placed on paper doily on a dessert plate of glass or china.

GARRETT PRODUCTS—

For the first time in the history of the county, the Garrett county maple sugar and maple syrup producers will attempt to market their products under "Federal-State Inspection," and introduce to the entire United States that syrup made in Garrett county is as good or even better than that produced elsewhere.

Instead of selling to producers of Vermont maple syrup one of Garrett county's leading products, the Maple Products Association will advertise the syrup and sugar as Garrett county's own and will prove that there is none better.

The association was formed following a suggestion made in The Republican a year or more ago, which was taken up by the Forestry Department of Maryland through Mr. F. B. Trenk, and John H. Carter, county agent, with the producers themselves. The latter have been made to see the value of marketing their products direct, and incidentally this will help advertise Garrett county.

The loyal support of every citizen of Garrett county is asked for this new organization. It is well worth developing.

FIFTY YEARS OF BATTLESHIPS

By Lucy Meacham Thurston

Down in Norfolk last year I was talking with a woman who lived in a house facing Hampton Roads whose people for generations had lived eventless months and tragic days in that same old four-chimneyed house of salt-stained brick. Over that generation which knew the Civil War, the affairs of the Merrimac and Monitor, fought in sight of their windows, had laid an indelible impression. She could tell the tale with earnestness which her mother and grandmother had placed upon it.

Yet within five hours after talking with her I was on a steamer making its way between the gray monsters of battleships lying in that same harbor of Hampton Roads, down at the mouth of the James, where that first conflict of armoured ships had been fought.

Who, fresh from that story of historic fight, could have helped following the first conflict of ironclads on to the date of 1929? And who, familiar with legends of the sea, could have failed to recall pictured ships of the Viking age, with shields swung along their sides, later ships with sheets of metal flung out as guards, on to this 1862 invention of a ship sheathed in iron plate and another turreted in steel, then to the battleship which sprung from these last inventions.

That contest betwee nthe Merrimac and Monitor marked the end of the wooden frigate, and for fifty years and more the battleship succeeding it has grown more ponderous and expensive until other inventions have begun to write a period to its existence.

One invention was the torpedo, followed by the submarine. The torpedo demonstrated its deadliness when in a harbor of Chile, in 1891, two torpedo boats sent their instruments of destruction against two anchored men of war, sending one of them to the bottom in five minutes. The other invention is recent—that of the air plane carrying deadly bombs.

And how about the battleship? How about the amount of the wealth of the nations tied up in them? Should the building of battleships continue? If not, why?

The five great naval powers of the world have now altogether 62 battleships.

The United States, 18; Great Britain, 20; Japan, 10; France, 9; Italy, 5.

The upkeep of the 18 United States battleships costs $40,000,000 per year, it would cost at least $40,000,000 to replace any one of them. Because it is proven obsolete, superseded by other inventions, the battleship is doomed. Yet a former naval officer writes, "The curious part of it all is that the battleship tradition is still strong enough to be a point of debate . . . and though the battleship as a naval unit is slowly passing into oblivion, we may expect it to be a unit of diplomatic negotiations for some time to come.

Yet more than inventive and economic reasons for abolishing the battleship, comes a factor more powerful than either—that of public opinion—the will of the people. This says our strongest defense is not to be in steel, in undersea or overhead weapons of destruction, but in settling international disputes without recourse to war. On this machinery the spirit and intellect of a man is now at work. We are learning that the most powerful defense of any nation is in its freindly relationship with others. Those we now try to cement.

An Interesting Fact

In this age of rapid news gathering we look back with wonderment at the elapsed time between the happening of an event of National importance and its appearance in the press of the day, in early times.

It was not until the year 1837 that the penny newspaper appeared in Baltimore, it being a journal founded by Arunah S. Abell, who rather astonished the reading public, shortly after that time, by establishing an original method of news gathering. He instituted a "pony express" from Washington to Baltimore. For two decades thereafter, the National government was almost entirely dependent on this newspaper of Baltimore for its news.

Then came the introduction of carrier pigeons to supplement the ponies and speed up the dissemination of the news of the nation. It is suggested by one historian that this forward movement was the first air service established in the United States. But these, to us, antequated methods of news gathering were to be cast into the discard.

A young man by the name of Samuel F. B. Morse had been fighting discouragement and skepticism for a number of years attempting to secure the funds for a practical demonstration of a method of "propelling galvanic fluid through wires" with amazing speed." It was in the early part of the year 1844, when by the aid of the influence of the Baltimore Sun and a representative of Maryland in the Congress that Morse secured a sufficient appropriation from the Government to construct an experimental commercial telegraph line from Washington to Baltimore.

We can visualize the high-hatted frock-coated gentlemen of that period, as they gathered in a room in the Baltimore and Ohio passenger station in Baltimore, as the inventor seated himself at the instrument and clicked out, in dots and dashes, the epic-making sentence, "What hath God wrought," the first words to be transmitted between two given points at such a distance through wires by aid of the "galvanic fluid."

On May 11, 1846, the Sun astonished the reading public by giving to it the complete message of President Polk received by telegraphic transmission.

How long will it be before the telegraph instruments are discarded as out of date, to be supplanted by the radio?

Will Maryland again be first.

Bombardment and Capture of Tampa, Florida, by Gasparilla, Pirate, Celebrated.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Mrs. Wilson and myself have just returned to Leesburg from the South Florida Fair at Tampa. They certainly had a great fair this year and it was well attended. It is estimated that 75,000 persons were present on Monday, which was known as Gasparilla Day. Gasparilla was a pirate, and he was supposed to have captured Tampa many years ago. Now they celebrate the event every year by having he and his crew of hijackers capture the city in a friendly way and a great holiday is made of it. This year they had two airships and several air planes, besides the usual boats. Following the bombardment and surrender of the city they have a big parade of beautiful floats, etc., with bands and other attractions.

There are more people in Florida this winter than for several years and tourists are getting more for their money. Hotel rates and living expenses are much lower than in the boom days and if one wants to buy property—well, a pretty good farm can be bought now for what town lots sold for four or five years ago.

Greetings to all my friends in Garrett county. I expect to see you the coming summer, as usual.

BURT WILSON.

NANCY HANKS'BIRTHPLACE LOCATED NEAR KEYSER

Mother of Abraham Lincoln Born and Reared in Mountains

After a great deal of painstaking investigation the site of the birthplace of Nancy Hanks, mothor of President Abraham Lincoln, has been located in the foothills of the Allegany mountains, near Keyser, West Va., near the headwaters of the Potomac river and in a most beautiful section of country.

An interesting story of the Hanks family in that vicinity and of the great difficulties encountered recently in locating the exact site of the home is told in the current issue of the National Republic by Andrew Price, chairman of the West Virginia Nancy Hanks Commision. Among other things, Mr. Price says:

"Nancy Hanks Lincoln was born on the headwaters of the Potomac River, either in the year 1784 or in the year 1785, the daughter of Lucy Hanks and the grand-daughter of Joseph Hanks. The place now ls in the bounds of West Virginia.

"Joseph Hanks was born in Richmond county, near the Potomac River, in the year 1725. He lived there until the year 1779, when he went to the mountains in the extreme western part of the Fairfax Grant with his wife, nee Anne Lee, and his nine children. He established a home in the woods on 108 acres of land and built a substantial log house, and remained there not later than 1787, when he moved to the county of Kentucky and settled in the Rough River portion where his descendants now live and their name is legion.

"West Virginia is divided into two parts, the Eastern Waters and the Western Waters by the Allegany Front, so that forty-seven counties are west of the divide and eight counties are to the east, wholly drained by the Potomac. The oldest county in West Virginia is Hampshire, formed in 1754. Originally it included land now in Mineral, Morgan, Hardy, Grant and Pendleton counties, all on the Eastern Waters.

The census of 1782 shows that Joseph Hanks and his wife and nine children lived in Hampshire county and is conclusive evidence that the Joseph Hanks of Richmond, of Hampshire and Kentucky counties was the same man.

"The eight counties on the Potomac are different from the rest of West Virginia and form what might be called Virginia Irrehenta, having been forced into the new state of West Virginia by force and arms during the Civil War. The all important Baltimore and Ohio Railroad controlled these counties and the war measure would not have been complete without including this railway in that part of Virginia which remained loyal to the Union.

"It is a section rich in history. It was the summer home of George Washington. Here was the Tory uprising. Rumsey invented the steamboat here, a logical occurrence like the Swiss navy; here were three Revolutionary generals, Gates, Lee and Stephens, not to mention Morgan; John Brown's raid; Rosser, Mosby, Custer, John H. McNeill and Jesse McNeill, heroes of the Civil War; Crook and Kelly, major-generals kidnapped from the heart of the city of Cumberland in the middle of an army of ten thousand men by Jesse McNeill and sixty-two free companions."

Auto Party Returns from Texas

Messrs. Charles U. Edwards and son, Mr. Harry Edwards, of Grantsville; Mr. Jesse J. Ashby, of Oakland, and Mr. George Simpson, of Bretz,, W. Va., who left here on January 20 for a business and pleasure trip to points in Texas, returned on Monday of last week.

Going from here over the National Old Trails Route No. 40 to Vandalia, Ill.; thence to St. Louis and the Southwest over Route 66 to Joplin, Mo., and Muskogee, Okla. In southern Oklahoma they went over the Ozark plains and were snowbound for ten hours, making only 175 miles that day. They passed through Dallas, Austin, San Antonia and to Falfureias, Texas, where they visited the King cattle ranch, the largest in the United States and arrived in LaFeria, their objective, on Friday, January 24, at noon. LaFeria is located in the Valley of the Rio Grande River.

The party spent some time inspecting the citrus groves belonging to the Messrs. Edwards. The trees are now yielding a good crop. On the farm are vegetables of numerous kinds, including cabbage, carrots, lettuce, and other varieties of the finest quality, all now ready for shipment to northern markets. Everything appeared to be prosperous there and a number of tourists from northern states are in that section now.

The party also visited the city of Matamoras, just across the international line in old Mexico. The Mexicans were very friendly with the Americans and are making progress in various industries.

Upon the return the party left LaFeria on Thursday night, January 30, coming by way of Dallas, Texarkana, Hot Springs and Little Rock, Ark., to Memphis, crossing the White River, which was in flood. They traveled 18 mlles across water in a shuttle train to Brinky, then to Nashville and Bristol, Tenn., to Tazewell, Va., Bluefield, W. Va., and Parkersburg, to Oakland; thence to Grantsville, coming to Oakland over Route 50 from Parkersburg.

JESUS HEALING AND HELPING

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:1-9:34.
GOLDEN TEXT—Himself took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Healing and Helping.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Healing and Helping.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of the Needy.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Meeting Human Needs.

I. Jesus Heals a Leper (8:1-4).

1. The dreadful disease (v. 2).

Leprosy, the most loathsome aud hopeless disease known, in the Jewish ritual, was regarded as a symbol of sin. As leprosy was incurable by man, so only the divine physician could cure sin.

2. The leper's faith (v. 2).

His cry waa most pitiable, bnt his faith was strong. He fully believed that Jesus was able, but not certain that He was willing to heal him.

3. Jesus' power (v. 3).

He put forth His hand aad toucbed the leper, biddiag the disease depart, and instantly the man was cleansed.

II. Jesus Heals the Centurion's Servant (8:5-13).

1. The disease (v. 6).

The victim of paralysis is helpless and disqualified for service.

2. The centurion's humility (v. 8).

He first sent the Jewish elders and thea his friends (Luke 7:3, 6), because he felt his unworthiness. The case of this servant was so grave that his master brushed aside his timidity and personally appealed to Jesus.

3. The centurion's faith (vv. 8, 9).

He believed that if Jesus would but speak the word, his servant would be healed.

4. The wonderful power of Jesus (v. 13).

He did not need even to see the helpless man, hut only to speak the word and it was done.

III. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-law (8:14, 15).

She was sick of a fever. Jesus was invited into Peter's home to heal this woman. Upon entering the home He touched the hand of the patient and the fever left her, and she arose and ministered unto them.

IV. Jesus Casts Out Demons (8:28-34).

After stilling the tempest, Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by two men possessed by demons (v. 28).

These men were in a desperate condition (see Mark 5:1-17 and Luke 8:27). So fierce were they that no one could safely pass that way. They wore no raiment and no chains were strong enough to hold them.

2. What they knew about Christ (v. 29).

They knew that He was the Soa of God and that He had come to destroy the devil and his work. Amoag the demons there is no doubt as to the deity of Jesus Christ and as to the judgment to come.

3. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 30-32).

The demons quailed before Him, not daring to dispute His power.

V. Jesus Heals a Woman With an Issue of Blood (9:20-22).

1. Her helpless condition (v. 20).

She had been a great sufferer for twelve long years, not only from the disease, hut at the hands of the physicians (Mark 5:26).

2. Her faith (v. 21).

Her faith was so strong that she believed contact with the Master's garment would secure needed help.

3. Her confession (v. 21, cf. Luke 8:47).

She thought secretly to get the blessing, but Jesus perceived that virtue had goae out from Him, aad had her make a puhlic confession.

4. Christ's words of encouragement (v. 22).

He told her that it was her faith, not her touch that saved her.

VI. Jesus Opening the Eyes of Two Blind Men (9:27-31).

1. Their persistence of faith (v. 28).

These poor mea had heard of the wonderful works of Jesus and desired to he healed.

2. The intelligence of faith (v. 27).

They cried nnto Him as the Son of David, which showed that they recognized Him as the promised Messiah. The prophet had forctold such to be the works of Messiah (Isa. 29:18; 35:5; 42:7).

3. The challenge of faith (v. 28).

In reply to His challenge, they gave Him a definite answer.

4. The triumph of faith (vv. 29, 30).

Their faith hrought them into touch with the Lord of life who revealed His power hy opening their eyes.

Heroes and Cowards

Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards; they simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Silently nnd imperceptihly, as we wake or sleep, we grow and wax strong, we grow and wax weak, and at last some crisis shows us what we have become.—Canoa Westcott.

Faith

Faith is aa almighty thiag like the Eternal God Himself; therefore God seeks to prove aad try it.—Luther.

DORIS' WINDOW HOME

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

DORIS WELLS, drawing herself np as tall as her 4 feet 11 inches wonld permit, walked jauatily along a busy downtown street. No one could have guessed from her cheerful expression that she wished this city street would turn into Main street, Wendemere, hy a suddea wave of some fairy wand.

In Wlademere a girl could be 4 feet or 6 feet tall and she could get a steaographer's joh anyhow if she could take her shorthand uotes and read them fast enough later at the typewriter. But in the city it seemed that busiaess meu had more compassionate hearts—if one could call it that, takiag away a girl's job because she was so tiny!

Only that moruing Doris had been writing at her machiae when the mauager came to her desk: "Get your time, Miss Wells. We have another girl for your desk. I'm sorry, bnt I just can't stand it to see a girl as little as you are doing that mammoth amount of work every day! It's too mach for you."

A hnadred answers had sprung to Doris' lips: Wasn't it better to have a hard job than uone at all? Hada't she done the work well, cleaning np everything at 5:30 every evealng before she left for the day? The girl who had held the position before her had often enoagh had eight or ten letters left for the next morning. Doris knew this by the soiled-looking notehook that the other girl had left behind her.

And back in Wendemere—Doris sighed. She coald have kept on with her joh there only it had sickeaed her to sce the girls all making such a dead "set" at Wayne Griswold. Wayne Griswold was the son of the town's mayor. The mayor owned the lumber yard, the coal yard, the ice plant, was president of one bank and a director on the hoard of the other one—oh, Wayne Griswold was undoubtedly a good "catch" and well worth hunting down, but Doris would never hunt down any man, she told herself.

Time had been when Wayne asked her to go to all the school parties, but that had been before the girls had started asking him boldly and baldly if he didn't want to take them. And Wayne, like many another man, liked flattery.

At this moment Doris passed a window where a large, smilea girl was throwing flour on a bright green rug hefore she ran the sweeper over the flour to prove to the onlookers what a good vacuum was for aale within. The manager of the store, to guess from his assured bearing, entered the window at this instant and said somethiag that apparently displeased the demonstrator. Probably he had told the girl to smile for he bared his own fine teeth as an example.

The girl atared at him coldly for a moment, shrugged her shoulders and threw with some temper all the flour in the box at hand on the green carpet and walked out of the little door at the back of the window. Doris smiled. She almost ran into the shop.

"That demonstrator has left her job?" she asked of the man who was by now following the large girl out of the window.

"Yes," he said shortly.

"Then I'd like the job," said Doris promptly.

"But you—you're too little to stand there all day demoastrating that thing," he said doubtfully.

"It doesn't take any great amouat of strength to run a vacuum back and forth," said Doris, "and, besides, when people see a tiny woman doing the work they will have no doubt that can do it if they are of even ordinary size."

"You win," said the man, grinning. "Ready to work now?"

"All ready," said Doris. "Only that's a silly window advertisement. If yon happen to ask my opinion. Sensible folks doa't pour flour on a good rug and then take it up again. That display doesn't come withia folks' experience. Now if yon put a little partition between the two halves of the window and made one half up to look like a garden with a large sand box, and, say, a couple of puppies playiag in the sand—a couple of bones would insure there digging there—nnd then have me at the piano or at a sewiag table where the dogs run in, briaging sand on their feet. I clean ap the sand with the vacuum and—presto—the sales will run up something amazing."

"We'll try it," the man assented. "I'm not sare it will work, but sales have been a little slow—"

"Yes, because people have seen that flour stunt so often that they pass right by the wiadow," said Doris. "More thaa that, folks always stop to look at dogs."

Doris eajoyed arraaging the window. They had let down a drop like a stage drop to hide them while they worked at the saud and gardeu part of it. Tall hollyhocks nodded at a back fence of cardboard.

"You can let the curtain ap again while I straighten out the liviag room part," said Doris, "there's ao use wasting good time whea people are passing the window."

"I helieve it's going to work," the manager said, enthusiastically. "And I'm telling you that something had to work and sell cleaners araund this shop or I—I was going to be on the outside looking in instead of inside looking out!"

Doris pulled over a little sewing tnble close to the comfortable davenport and sat down to wait there until the dogs got their feet covered with the dampened sand. She did not notice a familiar face outside of the window looking at her in amazement. She could hear voices in the store and she smiled. That meant customers!

Whea the little door at the back of the window opened she turned her head. Was the manager coming to congratulate her on her idea or to dismiss her as he had dismissed the other demonstrator? Wheu her amazed eyes saw Wayne Griswold there she sat down agala rather suddenly la the deep cushions.

"If you want to make a home so mnch," Wayne was saylag awkwardly, "why don't yon make one for us instead of a window home for every Tom, Dick and Harry to stare at?"

"I take it that this is a proposal?" said Doris with a little smile at his embarrassment.

"Yoa take it rightly," he said, grimly. "And yon come along with me or I'll kiss you right in the wiadow for every one to see! The idea of your chasing off to the city here without telling me your address! Only the merest chance that I found you at all!"

"But—but," stammered the store's manager when Doris resigaed a few moments later, "I—you can't leave aow! The sales are beginning to pour in. I'll tell you—I'll take you both ou and we'll have a real domestic scene!"

"My father is mayor of Wendemere," said Wayne Griswold coldly.

"Is that so?" asked the maaager. "I never heard of the town, but I'd make you the same offer if your dad were mayor of our city! That girl has idea—"

And the last Doris saw of her job the manager was pushiag the vacuum cleaner back and forth over the sand the dogs had brought in aad a hand-lettered sign said: "My wife's away!"

Roaming Buffalo Once Looked Upon as Pest

New Zealand complains that it has too maay deer and wild pigs aad not enough hunters. Red deer imported to the country bave retired to mountain fastnesses, multiplied rapidly and now descend oa farms and grnzing lands. The governmeat, to afford some relief, has sent out shootiag parties one of which got 700 deer and another 500 deer. The hides of these animals were sold at $1 each, bnt no mention is made of the destiaation of the venison.

What the deer overlook the wild pigs root up. So great are the ravages of these descendants of docile British porkers that the government pays a bounty of 25 cents for each snout turned in, but the farmers complain that there seems to be no dimiaution in the numbers of the wild pigs.

Perhaps it is merely a clever advertisement of New Zealand as a paradise for hunters. It has that attractive sound. But if there is situation as bad as pictured, the New Zealanders should not give up hope of early relief. Just recently W. A. Hoy, a veteran of the Civil war, who has lived in the Black Hills siace the early '70s, was complaining of the buffalo in the early days. "We were held up three days and three nights goiag through one buffalo herd and all the time we could either hear or see buffalos." That was fifty years ago and now the only buffalos la the Black hills are those in the state park for the tourist to gaze at. Fifty years hence New Zealand will be urging conservation of game aad passing laws for closed seasoas.

Under Boots

"Boots!" called the guest in the coaatry hotel, thrusting his head out of his bedroom door. "Boots!"

There was no reply to his call, jast as there had been none to his riaging of the bell. He called agala and again and at last a small boy la a much bebuttoned uniform appeared.

The guest looked him up and down. "I want the boots. You're not the boots, surely!"

"No, sir," said the boy, "I'm the socks."

"Socks!" cried the guest. "What do you mean by thnt?"

"Yon see, sir," answered the boy, "I'm under the boots!"—Montreal Star.

Early Episcopal Bishop

The first Protestant Episcopal bishop to be consecrated in the United States after the break with the English church was Samuel Seabury, who was seat to England to be coasecrated bishop of Connecticut, but the Eaglish bishop found a difficulty in consecratiag one unable to take the prescribed oath (which includes fealty). Thereupon Seabury repaired to the nonjuring bishop of Scotland and wns consecrated November, 1784, at Aberdeen, Scotland, by Bishops Robert J. Kilgore, Arthur Petrie and John Skianer. Later Doctors Provost and Wood were consecrated by the archbishop of Cauterbnry in 1787.

Dr. Phelp's Anti-Dog Weapon

When I took my first bicycle tour in Germany, I noticed that the German wheelmen carried a whip la a receptacle attached to the haadlebars. Upon inquiry, it was for dogs. I carried ao whip, for I found a more excellent way. When chased by infuriated dogs, which happened three or four times every day, I waited till the monster got close. Then leaning over, I spit in his eye, becoming with practice uacaanily accurate. The animal invariably retired. It wasn't the heat, it was the humidity.—William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's Magaziae.

A Guileful Girl

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright)

"GEORGE," said Arabella Stuart, looking meditatively at George Watkins, "I am thinking of getting married."

"Are you, indeed?" replied George with languid interest; "any special person picked out, or is the field open to all comers?"

"Oh, I have picked out the man," said Arabella, and then, after a pause, "George, would you mind making love to me?"

George started. "Why, Bella!" said he, "this is so sudden—and besides there is Bertha, you know."

"Bertha Wainwright? Of course. You and she have been as good as engaged for some time now, haven't you?"

"Yes, we have," answered George, looking with a puzzled air at the girl; "and then, you know, besides, your father hates me as a certain dark gentleman is said to hate holy water."

"Nevertheless and therefore and notwithstanding," said Bella, "I want you for a suitor."

"I am flattered, delighted and charmed, of course, but really—you see—I—in fact—" stammered George.

"Nonsense," cried Bella; "here—let's wander down this garden path. I want to talk to you."

It was at the Hawkin's garden party that this rather unconventional conversation took place. Some of the guests who noticed Bella and George Watkins walking slowly down a patch which wound into the recesses of a pine grove smiled to each other and said: "Look! there goes Arabella Stuart and George Watkins. Heads close together in earnest conversation! My, my! That's a new combination. Fred Waterhouse and Bertha Wainwright ought to behold that picture." And within twenty-four hours it was all over town—"all over town" being figurative and not literal—that Arabella Stuart had, at last, given up trying to catch Fred Waterhouse and was making a "dead set" at George Watkins, who had shamefully thrown over Bertha Wainwright!

It certainly did look as if there was something in these rumors, for at every social function now, wherever you saw Arabella you saw George. they seemed to have conversation and eyes for none but each other. Bertha's "dear friends," after the manner of "dear friends" under like circumstances, condoled with her upon the outrageous conduct of her recreant lover, quite prepared to mingle their tears with hers and thoroughly enjoy the misery they were inflicting. But Bertha, to their surprise, tossed her pretty head and declared that George was of age, and quite free to do his own picking and choosing as far as she was concerned. One of Fred Waterhouse's "candid friends," when he approached Fred on the subject, received for reply:

"See here, just drop that, will you?" and everybody agreed that Fred was "awfully cut up" at Bella's faithlessness. "But I guess he'll survive," said they, "for you can see him laughing and chatting with Bertha Wainwright at every party you go to." "Hearts caught on the rebound!" murmured a sentimental miss. "Change partners for the next figure," laughed a girl of the "sporty" character.

All this—and more—could not fail, of course, of reaching the ears of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart, fond parents of the fair Arabella. Mrs. Stuart was shocked; Mr. Stuart was furious.

"What can Bella be thinking of?" groaned Mrs. Stuart. "George Watkins has no fortune."

"If he had all the money that Croesus is said to have had, he should not marry my daughter," cried Papa Stuart. "The son of that old thief, Tim Watkins—who did me out of fifty thousand dollars in that coffee deal—marry a daughter of mine! His grandfather was a pirate and his father a robber. I want none of that breed in my family."

When Bella, who had been on a short visit to a friend in a neighboring town, returned to the paternal mansion, she found Father Stuart and Mother Stuart waiting for her with knives of sarcasm sharpened and cloths of command uplifted. And then they fell upon her—attacked her savagely before she could get her hat and gloves off. Bella wept.

"Well," she managed to sob out at last, "you wouldn't let me marry Fred Waterhouse. Mother said his social standing wasn't high enough, and you said he was a spendthrift—and if George Watkins—"

"Don't let me ever hear you mention the name of Watkins again," roared Father Stuart, and the fond mother put in, "Do you want to live and die a pauper? His father lost his money in Wall Street after cheating your father. I'd rather see you married to Fred Wainwright than George Watkins."

"Marry the Old Nick if you want to," cried the doting father, "but you shan't marry a Watkins!"

"Very well," said Bella, drying her eyes, "I'll marry Fred then. Will he do as well as the old gentleman you named, father?"

"Oh, George," said Bella that evening at a bride party, "it worked beautifully. Fred and I are going to be married next month. He's awfully obliged to you for helping us out. And tell Bertha she's a dear for the way she went through with it. Let's have a double wedding."

The Power to Do

It is the power to do, that counts. The power and the ability to forge onward, no matter what obstacles must be overcome.

Behind all of the greater business successes of the world, the power to do, the power to act, is supplied by credit.

Credit, maintained upon a business basis by each member of this community, can wield, in proportion, an equal power for each one, enabeling him to take advantage of opportunity for financial betterment as it presents itself.

Let us keep our credit good by paying our bills promptly.

Our interest in the welfare of this community prompts The Republican to publish this message to the people of Oakland and vicinity.

MT. LAKE PARK

Mr. J. A. Enlow Celebrates His 80th Birthday on St. Valentine's Day

Born on the 14 day of February, 1850, on what is now known as the Charles DeWitt farm, just north of Hoyes, in Garrett county (then Allegany) James A. Enlow came into the world on St. Valentine's Day, 80 years ago, one of eight children that blessed the union of John and Prissillia Enlow.

Born to parents in humble circumstances, his mother dying when he was but six years of age, the home and family circle broken, Mr. Enlow, as a child suffered much hardship and mistreatment at the hands of a man with whom he was placed at the death of his mother. Unable to stand the hard work and harsh treatment, he ran away to a neighbor's home, where he was welcomed, the lady of the house, at the point of a gun, preventing the man with whom he had lived taking him back from whence he had made his escape.

Mr. Enlow vividly recalls his boy hood days after his father re-located in Garrett county; of the large flocks of wild pigeons that had to be driven from the buckwheat fields; of the deer and other game with which their home table was supplied and many other events of those primitive times.

Mr. Enlow has lived to see many eventful changes, and until he was 22 years of age, Garrett county was a part of Allegany, from which it was carved. A few months after he was born, Zachary Taylor, President of the United States, died and was succeeded by Fillmore. He has therefore lived through the administration of 18 presidents; was living when the B. & O. railroad was built to the Ohio; when the Western Union Telegraph was established; when Chicago and St. Louis were first reached by rail; when Europe was connceted to the United States by cable; the first oil well dug; the Civil war; the first postal money order issued; the financial panic of '73, the incadescent light, the telephone; the phonograph; the radio; the airplane; the automobile; the linotype, and many other epoc-making events and inventions.

His consistent Christian life, his thoughtful and kindly nature has endeared him to a host of friends, who wish for him many happy returns and many years of continued usefulness.

As We Listened In

The members of the Winter Solstice Club were seated around the glowing stove in Harvey & Reams store recalling other days. Some of those birds have remarkable recollections. Well anyway, Frank Arnold, one of the charter members, broke in with this one:

It was the winter when the thermometer busted, having reached forty below. The sun shone with an icy brilliancy. Feeling the need of some fresh meat, he started forth in search of a rabbit. At the time of which he spoke, the Park was studded with jack and pin oaks. So close, indeed, was the growth, that it was with difficulty that one could walk without barking the shins or skinning the nose. A few yards distant he spied his game. It was acting in a peculiar manner. It was simply jumping up and down in one spot. The hunter approached with care. Still the rabbit did not flee. Arnold grabbed it by the ears and found the cause for its peculiar behavior. Its tail was frozen fast to a jack oak.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Bessie Zohn, who has been visiting friends and relatives in the west for some months, has returned.

Mrs. Allie Haymond is visiting her sister, Mrs. Cora Bishop, in Fairmont.

Mrs. Walter Ready and Mrs. Alma Bell have returned from a visit of several days with friends and relatives in Washington, D. C., and Hyattsville, Md.

Mrs. Frank Morgan, who has been in Philadelphia for some weeks, has been quite ill, but has recovered.

Mr. Leo Crane, Grafton, was here Sunday circulating among his relatives and many friends. He is a brother of Mrs. Alma Bell.

Word has been received from Mrs. Isobel Hill, who is touring Europe, that she is now in Spain. She was quite ill for some weeks with "flu", but is now improved.

Captain J. A. Hayden continues to improve in health, but the inclemency of the weather keeps him confined to the house.

Mr. J. A. Enlow was indisposed for a few days, but is now able to be about.

Mr. F. R. Utterback must get quite a kick out of his success in logging long distance stations with his new low wave radio outfit. With this machine he has little difficulty in getting direct contact with London, Amsterdam and other stations in Europe. To a radio fan all this is quite interesting, especially so to listen in when Chicago Police Headquarters, which is equipped with low-wave sets, is instructing a scout patrol to proceed at double quick to a certain quarter where a holdup has just taken place.

Richard Moore, Jr., son of "Dick" Moore, the colored barber who was a resident here for a number of years, is one of the cast in a play consisting of colored players to be given at the Little Theatre in Fairmont.

Mrs. Falkenstine has closed her cottage for a while and she and her two sons are with Mr. Falkenstine at Williamsport, Pa.

Rev. C. S. Thompson was here for a short time on Tuesday looking after his property.

Mr. F. R. Utterback is spending several weeks in Baltimore where he is engaged in doing some special work for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR ROAD AT GRANTSVILLE

Cumberland Company Will Construct 1.7 Miles State Highway Leading North From Town

Contracts for road construction throughout the state totalling $150,000 were let Tuesday to mark the first step in the State Roads Commission's 1930 road bullding program.

The largest contract went to the Cumberland Contracting Company for building 1.7 miles of concrete road in Garrett county from Grantsville to the Pennsylvania state line, at a bid of $30,012. E. Roy James, of Havre de Grace, received the contract for 1.9 miles of gravel road in Calvert county between Mutual and Mackall, at $19,051, the longest piece of road contract to be let.

Other contracts awarded were to the Development and Construction Company of Baltimore, 1.49 miles of conerete road in Harford county from Emerton to the Philadelphia road on a bid of $29,432; to Jarboe and Houghton of Mechanicsville, one mile concrete road from Gambrills to Odenton, in Anne Arundel county at a bid of $16,785; to T. D. Phillips and Broher, of Salisbury, one mile of concrete road from Stockton toward the Virginia State Line, at a cost of $25,337, and to the M. J. Grove Lime company, of Limekiln, one mile of concrete road on the Middle-Jefferson Highway in Frederiek at a bid of $21,078.

MORE THAN HUNDRED ARE PRESENT AT SCOUT RALLY

Closing Celebration of Anniversary Week is Well Attended

More than 100 were in attendance at the get-together meeting of scouts, their parents, members of the Court of Honor, Troop committee and interested scouters, held last Thursday evening at the Knights of Pythias hall, as the final celebration of Boy Scout Anniversary Week.

Mr. Frank B. Gale, scout executive of Cumberland Council, was present and delivered the main address of the evening. He advocated more assistant scoutmasters for Oakland Troop, due to its large membership, and also stated that among the 25 troops in the Cumberland Council Oakland troop had the least number to drop out in 1929. He cited the fact that a troop was judged on its ability to hold boys, its activity, and its advancement in membership, and he declared that Oakland troop was doing all of these.

Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Troop Committee, acted as chairman for the evening and remarks were heard from H. A. Loraditch, vice-chairman of the Court of Honor; Mr. Duke, of Troop No. 5, of Cumberland, Scott Shirer, former scoutmaster; Rev. W. B. Brock, and George H. Hanst, present scoutmaster. First aid and signalling demonstrations were given by members of the troop under the direction of Harley Dawson and Bernard Gonder, respectively, and a few games were played.

Refreshments were served by members of the Ladies' auxiliary. The meeting closed a successful celebration of the twenty-second birthday of scouting, Mr. Hanst stated.

Court of Honor Monday

Providing there are enough scouts prepared for passing merit badges a court of honor meeting will be held on Monady night in the Masonic club room, third floor of the First National Bank, Harland L. Jones, chairman, has announced.

A hike to Swallow Falls is being planned for Saturday, weather permitting, and a number of other matters will be discussed at the regular meeting on Friday.

To Hold Chicken and Waffle Supper for Scouts

A chicken and waffle supper will be served on Tuesday evening, March 4, beginning at 5:00 o'clock, at the M. E. Parish house, for the benefit of the Oakland Boy Scout troop. The Ladies' auxiliary will have charge of the supper and tickets will be 75 cents.

The proceeds will go toward defraying the expenses of the annual scout camping trip of two weeks, to be held during August.

250 ATTEND CELEBRATION OF PYTHIANS ON FRIDAY

Garrett Lodge Holds Triple Celebration at Castle Hall

Approximately 250 persons attended the celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, the sixty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the national order, and the celebration of the birthday of Dr. H. W. McComas, the oldest member of the lodge and one of its charter members.

The Rev. Charles A . Shilke delivered the principal address. A portrait of Dr. McComas was presented to the lodge by Bells' Studio. The presentation was made by Charles W. Ream and was accepted for the lodge by J. C. Renninger, past grand chancellor. Walter W. Dawson acted as toastmaster.

Nelson W. Russeler, supreme representative, of Cumberland, gave a short talk and Henry Lauer discussed Dr. McComas' unselfish work in the community. Delbert Davis read the ten reasons of Milburn Mann on "Why I am a K. of P.," which won the State prize recently.

Representatives were present from Terra Alta, Rowlesburg, Newburg, Thomas, Davis, and Gormania lodges. Refreshments were served.

REGULATIONS FOR SCHOOL BUSSES MUST BE OBEYED

Code of Rules Makes Chauffeurs Boss in Absence of Teachers—26 Vehicles in Operation

In view of the number of accidents during the past year in various parts of tbe United States In which busses carrying school children figured, some of which assumed the proportions of tragedies, F. E. Rathbun, Superintendent of Schools of Garrett county, has sent out cards upon which are printed transportation regulations which must be rigidly adhered to by both drivers and the occupants of the busses.

One of these cards is prominently displayed in each of the twenty-six busses regularly operated to and from the various schools and in addition a card bearing the rules and regulations is placed in each school building served by a bus route.

Some of the regulations have already been embodied in contracts with bus operators, Mr. Rathbun said, but the restrictions are being broadened as a further precaution.

26 Busses In Operation

Today Garrett county is operating twenty-six busses. About four hundred miles are being covered on round trips each school day and 800 pupils are being transported.

Too much precaution to insure the safety of the human cargoes of these busses cannot be taken, Mr. Rathbun pointed out.

The instructions contain approximately a dozen safety rules to be followed by both driver and pupil.

Rules Are Cited.

Drivers are forbidden to take any chances or to exceed a moderate speed. They are required to stop at all railroad crossings, never to start the bus until children are inside and the doors closed.

If pupils violate the rules it is the driver's duty to report the infraction and following the persistent breaking of the regulations the driver is instructed to stop the bus and put the violator off.

Pupils are advised that, except when a teacher is a passenger on a bus, the driver has absolute control of the conduct of those in the vehicle; that rear doors are to be used only in case of emergency; not to put heads or hands out of windows and not to alight from the bus while it is in motoin nor to ride outside the conveyance.

Smoking, profanity or misbehavior of any kind is banned. Pupils are warned to look in both directions for approaching vehicles before attempting to cross the roadway after getting off busses.

Oakland Banks Will Remain Closed Saturday.

As has been the custom for many years, the Garrett National, the First National and the Farmers Banks of Oakland will be closed all day Saturday—Washington's Birthday.

ADDITION TO OAKLAND HI SCHOOL IS NOW COMPLETE

Departments Move Into New Quarters This Week—Auditorium Is Made Larger

The commercial, mathematics, part of the English and Latin departments and the music department moved into new quarters this week in the Oakland high school, in the new addition which has just been completed, relieving congestion in the remaining rooms of the building which have been overcrowded for three or four years.

The new addition has increased the number of rooms by 66 percent and is expected to take care of the approximately 350 pupils now registered there without any further difficulty.

The assembly hall, formerly 37 by 58 feet, has been remodeled and enlarged to 37 by 85 feet, with an immense stage, which will be suitable for school plays and activities, and many community enterprises. The seating capacity has been practically doubled. It is fitted with heavy, gold trimmed red velvet curtains.

Besides the assembly hall the second floor of the building now has seven rooms, five of which are suitable for classrooms. The lower floor now contains eight rooms, seven of which are suitable for classrooms. One of the rooms, however, will be used for a library, Miss Katharine T. Conley, principal, stated.

The school will be thrown open to the public on Friday evening, February 28, when a card party and danee will be held. The price of admission will be 50 cents. A cordial invitation has been extended to all patrons and friends of the school. The Senior and Junior classes are in charge of the evening's program.

Parents are invited to visit the school on Thursday, February 27, while classes are in progress. This will give all those interested an idea of how much the new buildings are appreciated by the students and faculty.

The plans and specifications were prepared by Holt Hitchins, architect, Cumberland, and the building erected by William E. Priest, contractor, of Uniontown, Pa. J. W. Whorton, local contractor, erected the foundation and had charge of the plastering work, while Ernest Shirer had charge of the plumbing.

The addition which is 30 by 108 feet, is so constructed that more rooms can be added at any time in the future or when occasion or conditions require it, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent. The cost of the recent construction was approximately $25,000.

Fifty at Brotherhood Meeting

Approximately 50 were present at the last meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood, on Tucsday evening, to hear Walter W. Dawson speak on "Time." His address was enjoyed by all present. This was the largest meeting of the year.

It was decidede to hold a turkey supper in the Sunday School room of the church on Thursday, February 27, for the benefit of the Brotherhood. Tickets will be 75 cents.

Bert Welch, Samuel Butt, Roy Winters, Wellington Yutzy and Alvie Gortner were named as members of the committee to prepare for the next meeting. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served.

Increase Noted in Number of Valentines Sold

That a larger number of valentines were distributed in Oakland this year than ever before, was the statement of Miss Frances Hamill, of the Hamill Book store.

Last year the sales were larger than any previous year, and this year's sales were larger than in 1929. "It seems that there are more sold each year everywhere," she said.

The valentines are of the attractive kind, and not the comic, as a general rule, it was said. Along with the increase in the number of valentines, there was a decrease in the number of comic slips sold.

"All of which goes to prove that although the words may be arranged a little differently, and seemingly not quite so nice as in the olden days, the same idea is there and people still have room left in their hearts for an abundance of sentiment," she concluded.

LEGION DRIVE GOES OVER TOP WITH FIFTY MEMBERS

E. P. Kahl Elected to New Office Made Necessary by Increased Activities of the Local Post

That the membership drive of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, had "gone over the top" with plenty to spare, was announced at the regular meeting of that body held Monday night in the City hall, E. C. Liller and A. G. Hesen, members of two respective teams for getting new members, made the report that the Post was now composed of 50 members. The quota set by the State legion was 31.

New Office Created

Edward P. Kahl was elected to the position of service officer, a new office in the Post due to increased activities. Mr. Kahl will have charge of seeuring compensation, hospitalization, employment and other matters for the benefit of ex-service men. Mr. Kahl has served in other offices in the Legion Including post commander and post adjutant, and is well qualified for the new office.

To Have First Aid Squad

A first aid squad was organized consisting of C. M. Sincell, Harold Dawson, Edward P. Kahl, James Fazzalari, S. S. Stahl, Francis Gower, A. G. Hesen, S. T. Naylor, Joe Ferguson, I. R. Rudy, Walter Janoske. These men will receive instruction through the Red Cross and when thoroughly trained, will be placed at the disposal of the eommunity, Joseph M. Gonder, post eommander, stated.

Choose Anniversary Dates

The second week in June was chosen as Anniversary week, at which time a earnival will be held on the streets of Oakland and a number of other attractions scheduled. Through the courtesy of B. I. Gonder, manager of the Maryland theatre, a benefit picture, "Kid Gloves," will be shown on March 10 and 11. The arrangements are in charge of I. R. Rudy, Alex Hesen and Walter Janoske.

The advisability of organizing a drum and bugle corps was discussed favorably, and it is highly probable that the instruments will be purchased and the corps started in the near future, Mr. Gonder concluded.

Northwestern Pike Group Boost Coast-to-Coast Route

Proposals to organize a National United States Route No. 50 Highway Association, and to give that thoroughfare the name of the George Washington Highway, were endorsed at a recent session of the board of directors of the Northwestern Turnpike Corporation in Clarksburg.

These ideas were placed before the body in a set of resolutions presented by F. G. Bish. They further included that if possible a charter for the proposed organization be secured and that the governing body be a board of directors with equal representation from each state aligning itself with the movement. This board will select officers of the organization annually.

Some time ago a meeting was held in Cincinnati, O., proposing to start the organization of a national association. Then it was decided that in the near future a similar meeting would be held there and all states along U. S. 50 would be asked to send delegates.

Sixteen members of the turnpike association were named by A. A. Pickering, of Rowlesburg, president, to attend this meeting. Mayor W. J. Koelz and State Senator A. L. Helmick, of Thomas, were included in the number of delegates.

Former Resident to Broadcast Over National Hook-Up

The eighth of a series of national 4-H club programs to be broadcast over a national hook-up of 40 stations is scheduled for Saturday, March 1. The United States Marine Band will furnish the musical numbers and background, continuing the series of music appreciation periods which were inaugurated on February 1.

Miss Lola Belle Green, assistant State club agent of Michigan State college, formerly of Oakland, will take part in the program by speaking on "Michigan's program for older club members." Other matters relating to club work will be discussed.

The time for the program is set for 12:45 to 1:30 p. m. Eastern standard time, and can be heard from station KDKA and 39 other stations.

THE REPUBLICAN BEGINS ITS FIFTY-FOURTH YEAR

Today's Issue Marks Start on Another Milestone

With today's issue of The Republican begins the fifty-fourth year of its existance, having been founded on Saturday, February 28, 1877, and its first number appearing the following Saturday, March 3, 1877.

Captain James A. Hayden, Mt. Lake Park, was its founder and was editor until July 4, 1890, when the present publisher purchased the plant.

Five persons are kept quite busy in the office and printing plant in the publication of the paper and varied branches of printing operated in connection therewith.

The subscription list of Garrett county's leading newspaper has been growing steadily and today enjoys the largest circulation of any weekly newspaper published in this section. The Republican carries the most news of the county, and its steadily growing circulation contains people from all sections of the county. The Republican has the most completely equipped printing plant in Western Maryland where it is a pleasure to those operating it to give service to a rapidly growing list of patrons.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD MONDAY, MARCH 10

Voters To Ballot for Mayor, Three Members of Council and for City Treasurer

One person to be mayor of Oakland, three persons to be members of the Town Council and one person to be City Treasurer will be voted upon in the annual municipal election to be held Monday, March 10, when the polls will be held in the City Council chamber on Third street.

The mayor will be chosen for a term of two years, the councilmen for a term of two years and the treasurer for one year. The retiring councilmen will be Jesse J. Ashby, Grover C. Stemple and Ralph T. Thayer. Miss Frances Hamill is the present city treasurer and was chosen last year without opposition.

The polls for the election will be open at eight o'eloek a. m., according to an official notice appearing in today's Republican, and they will remain open until the hour of 6 o'clock p. m.

The three councilmen who are holdover members of the body are J. W. Whorton, George Little, and H. P. Stuck, they having been elected last year for terms of two years each.

It is probable that both Republicans and Democrats of the city will hold nominating conventions and place tickets in the field.

Oakland High School News.

Last week the Science club met and a very interesting report was made by George Stuck. This week the club is looking forward to a successful meeting with reports on the composition and use of zinc by Charles Bowman and Mr. Graser.

The boys' and girls' basketball teams went to Friendsville last Friday night. Our girls lost by a very creditable score, while our boys came home victorious. Quite a large crowd witnessed the game. On Saturday night the boys lost the game at Thomas.

On Tuesday, February 18, Mr. Alvin Miller, of Grantsville, gave a very interesting lecture on Russia before the older pupils in the school. Mr. Miller spent five years doing welfare work In Russia following the close of the World War. The talk was most enlightening and conveyed to Mr. Miller's auditors the conditions existing among the Russian peoples following the conflict.

The pupils as well as the instructors are very much delighted with the new building and its arrangement.

TO COMPLETE KITZMILLER-ALTAMONT ROAD THIS YEAR

State Roads Commission Advertises For Proposals To Construct 5.5 Miles of Concrete

That the Improved road between Kitzmiller and Oakland will be completed this year is indicated by an advertisement of the State Roads Commission appearing In The Republican today asking for sealed proposals for building one section of State highway from the end of the finished road near Altamont to the beginning of concrete near Kitzmiller, a distance of 5.5 miles.

The notice of the commision appearing in the advertising columns calls for the improved portion or section of the road to be concrete and bids will be received until 12 o'clock noon on Mareh 4, when they will be opened and read.

With the completion of this highway a shorter route to Washington and to points east will be available, and the five principal towns of Garrett county will be connected for the first time by improved highways.

The completion of the link between Altamont and Kitzmiller will also afford a shorter route to Keyser and Piedmont.

MAPLE PRODUCTS LABELS RECEIVED BY ORGANIZERS

Label in Three Colors—Advertises County and Association

With the arrival of the labels for the eans of the syrup produeers of the Garrett County Maple Products Association, everything is in readiness for the season's run, John H. Carter, county agent, announced.

The label is 9½ by 21 inches in size, printed in three colors, carries a picture of an old-fashioned keeler and above it the name of the syrup, "Crest o' the Highlands." The label entirely covers the gallon can which is 5½x5½x9 inches, and besides advertising the product of the association, incidentally advertises Garrett county to that extent.

As soon as the season gets well under way an inspector will be sent here by the Extension service of the University of Maryland, Mr. Carter said, who will remain in the county for the duration of the season. The only expense to the maple syrup producers is the traveling expenses.

Suggestions and regulations concerning Federal and State inspection of maple syrup were sent to each producer and if these rules are followed a uniform quality and grade of syrup is assured.

Week's Program to be Carried Out by Boys' Band

A week's program of events is carded for the Gilbert-Brown Boys band of Oakland, beginning on Marc 8, in an effort to raise money to p chase uniforms for each member the organization, R. R. Gilbert rector, has announced.

The program will begin with a sale on Saturday, March 8, to be lowed by a Sunday evening concert the Maryland theatre on March simllar to the Christmas program.

Throughout the remainder of the week, Mr. Gilbert stated, the boys will appear on the streets of Oakland each evening and give a concert, hoping in that way to create enough favorable impression on the citizens to raise the necessary money for uniforms. Donations have already been promised for about 18 uniforms, it was said.

There will be a number of other features ineluded in the Sunday evening concert, which will be held following the dismissal of church services.

County Treasurer Lee Suffers Painful Injuries.

County Treasurer Albert L. Lee suffered extremely painful bruises and other injuries on Sunday when, unaccustomed to the stairway in his new home leading from an upper floor to the furnace room in the basement, he made a misstep and pitched headlong down the stairway, landing on the concrete floor. His left side from ankle to shoulder is a mass of painful brulses. Being handicapped as he is by reason of the loss of his left arm, Mr. Lee was unable to prevent falling as ordinarily one would who has both arms. He has been confined of his bed since the accident befell him but expects to be at his office today.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore.)

The great effort of the fourth termers is to make a deal in Baltimore City.

They would make a deal to overcome the organized opposition which grows stronger as the Governor hesitates to take the public into his confidence.

But the trouble about any proposed deal is that the fourth termers have nothing to deliver. The big thing would be the Mayoralty and this has been hinted at for a considerable time as a suitable subject for barter. But they cannot deliver it. They attempted to deliver it in 1927 and the Republicans took possession of the City Hall.

Furthermore, they can promise this or that in the way of State appointments but they can deliver nothing unless Ritchie is reelected. They can give no guarantee that he will be reelected if nominated. So what they have been doing is trying to buy with counterfeit moncy.

The ranks of the opposition in Baltimort City are unbroken. And on the other hand the coterie of ward leaders now trying to help the Governor along are likened to Coxey's army. They are not able to deliver much.

The Baltimore City situation is the Governor's big trouble. He is said to look upon the Eastern Shore revolt as a not vital matter but Baltimore City, with more than half the Democratic population of the State, is something else. Four years ago the Governor had the Mahon and Kelly organization at his beck and call. Today there are no such organizations and such as now exist cannot be marshalled by His Excellency nor by his Coxey army generals.

The most potent leaders of the city Democracy today are Howard Jackson and Billy Curran. And no matter how much they have disagreed in the past they are united in the view that the renomination of Ritchie would lead to party disaster.

On the Eastern Shore the situation is reported to be growing worse rapidly so far as both Ritchie and the Maryland Democracy are concerned. Some of the Governor's long time friends who have battled for him in every contest are now urging him to withdraw at once and try to save the party. But the Governor's bump of self esteem is so large that it seems to rule him. He still considers himself the most popular man in the Maryland Democracy.

Senator McIntosh has at last started on a tour of the counties and some of his critics are saying he should have begun this in December. But he has started and that's something. He begins with Southern Maryland and in St. Mary's County has a staunch friend in the person of Senator Alan Coad who has not only been a McIntosh admirer for a long time but has also been able to escape the Ritchie hypnotism that seems to have enveloped so many in the past. In St. Mary's former Senator Peverly, now State Land Commissioner through the death of the original appointee, can be counted on to take the Ritchie side as a lieutenant of Brooke Lee.

In Charles County Senator J. Walter Mitchell will line up with Ritchie, he also being a Lee lieutenant, but we do not hear that Mr. Mitchell is enthusiastic over the fourth term. Probably he has his own ideas of what Charles County would do to Ritchie in the general election.

Calvert County is said to lean to McIntosh or away from the Governor, who now has no effective leader there. Four years ago it would have taken little to carry it for Wm. M. Maloy, so it is said, and so Mr. McIntosh should carry it.

In many of the counties the Democratic leaders are giving attention to the make-up of the local tickets and hoping that Ritchie will get out of the contest and not help to drag the party down. This week, it is reported, some county leaders have called on His Excellency and acquainted him with the conditions they have to meet and urged him to withdraw. But the Governor, it appears, shudders at the idea of giving up office holding and going back to real work. Office holding and the banqueting and shouting suits him so well.

Bridge Scheme Now
Striking Obstacles

The Chesapeake Bay bridge scheme brought forward by the Governor in his effort to win Eastern Shore support for a fourth term has not brought the applause that might have been expected. Some prominent Eastern Shoremen don't see much in it and as for the merchants over there they think it another development to take local trade to the city.

The papers over there as a whole do not get excited over it and the politics in it is so apparent that no one can be fooled.

Former Mayor Jackson has given the public the Governor's view on the subject in 1926, and this has traveled down the Shore with rapidity. Consequently there is a good deal of merriment at the expense of His Excellency. This week's issue of the Chestertown Enterprise ventilates the whole business and makes it plain that the Governor's motive is understood.

The Easton Star Democrat gives notice that Talbot county can be expected to oppose the use of State money for building the bridge and of course the lower end of the Peninsula sees little benefit to be had by the building of a $10,000,000 bridge near the head of the bay where there are already two bridges. And on top of that there is talk of constructing a tunnel between Kent Island and the Western Shore above Annapolis.

The naming of a committee by the Association of Commerce is what might have been expected. This body of business men has through a committee thrown cold water on the third trunk line project for Baltimore even though the Inter-State Commerce Commission favors it. So now we shall see how much interest that organization will take in the Governor's belated project.

G. O. P. Followers
Still in Quandary

There is no real light on the situation in the Republican party. The Mayor's City Hall supporters still cling to the belief that he will become a candidate not long after his return from Florida, but there is no word from the Mayor that can be so interpreted.

Meanwhile there is discussion of other availables and recently there was public mention of Col. Henry B. Wilcox. But we do not understand that the Colonel, who is a busy banker, is likely to send up any lightning rod or start on a handshaking expedition in pursuit of the honor. We have the idea that the position of State Treasurer would just about suit him and there is certainly more prospect now for a Republican State Treasurer next year than there was at a corresponding period of 1917. Yet at the Legislative session of 1918 a Republican State Treasurer was chosen.

Recently the talk of the active candidacy of David A. Robb has died down somewhat even though the Alleganian is keeping an ear to the ground. He is the chief dry hope. Then there is constant mention of Albert G. Towers as a compromise candidate while some who like to figure are trying to find a way to have U. S. Senator Goldsborough run without handing his Washington seat to a Democratic successor. It may be possible to work this out—it's really a job for the constitutional lawyers, who seem to be increasing in number.

Judge Dennis Talk
Has a Revival

In the last two weeks there has been revived the talk of the possible candidacy of Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis for the Democratic nomination for Governor. No word comes from the Judge so far as can be learned, but the report has been going around that since it has been demonstrated that he is stronger on the Eastern Shore than is Senator McIntosh he may yet be prevailed upon to accept support.

Renewed mention of the Judge's name has the effect of causing some of the fourth termers to become excited and they repeat their declarations that the Judge will under no circumstances accept support for any offices other than the one he is now holding.

Certain it is that if the Judge would only change his mind about the matter the political situation would suddenly and effectively change. For those who know the public feeling do not see the Governor making his entry against Judge Dennis.

West Virginia Public Service Commission Defers West Penn Hearing Indefinite Period

State Body Will Decide at Future Date on Advisability of Granting Authority to Harness Cheat River

Consideration of the application of the West Virginia Power and Transmisslon company, subsidiary of the West Penn system, for authority for the hydro-electric developmcnt of the Cheat River watershed was postponed indefinitely by the West Virginia public service commission at the meeting of the commission held last Thursday in Charleston.

The power company sought a fifty-year franchise of the water rights of the entire Cheat river and the application was considered by the commission at a hearing held last week in Charleston. Much evidence, both for and against the proposed development was submitted to the commission for consideration and Thursday the hearing was adjurned until some future date.

The development proposed is the most extensive hydro program ever undertaken in the state and will involve the expenditure of approximately one hundred million dollars to complete. Fourteen projects are included in the proposed development with six in Preston county, neighboring Garrett county.

Construction of the dams would extend over a period of years and would affect practicaiiy the entire Cheat valley. If all the dams for which license is now asked are built it would mean the inundation of one Preston county village and another in Tucker county while the state rifle range at Camp Dawson, the adjoining grounds of the Preston country club and hundreds of acres of farm land would be under water. The tracks of the M. and K. railroad at Caddell would be relocated and it would be necessary to raise the Cheat river bridge at Caddell while many miles of state highway wouid be rebuilt. Consolidation of two of the proposed projects as agreed to by the power company would eliminate the possibility of isolating the town of Rowlesburg in Preston county.

An alternate proposal consolidating the Rowlesburg and St. George projects was filed with the commission by the power company following a protest made by A. A. Pickering, president of the Preston county court, in behalf of the citizens of Rowlesburg. Objection was made to the proposal to construct a dam near the town of Rowlesburg which it was contended would virtually isolate that town. Under the alternate proposal the Rowlesburg and St. George projects would be consolidated and a dam built above the town of Erwin in this county.

At Thursday's hearing the protest of the Western Maryland railway against granting authority for construction of three of the projects was withdrawn. Counsel for the railway, after a series of conferences with counsel and officials of the power company, informed the commission an agreement had been reached with the company regarding the three Blackwater projects in Tucker county but that the railway's protest remained against other of the projects to which it had entered objection.

The direct evidence of the company seeking the franchise was concluded with several witnesses describing changes in the topography of the Cheat river basin that would result from construction of the series of projects. Those changes included the flooding of two small towns, St. George in Tucker county and Clifton Mills in Preston county, and flooding of other "bottom" areas, some of them farm lands and others described as swamp lands.

Many Approve Plan

Presenting a group of resolutions urging approval of the project, L. H. Mott, president of the Davis board of trade, informed the commission that citizens of the district were "practically a unit" in favoring the development because of the increased valuation it would bring to taxable property. He read resolutions from the Daivs board of trade, city of Parsons, River City club, Council of Kingwood, boards of education of Blackfork and Davis districts, the American Lcgion of Davis and a petition signed by 150 or 200 fishermen of the Blackwater river. W. E. Weimer, president of the Tucker county court, also urged speedy action on the application and engaged in an exchange with Kenneth A. Reid, Connellsvilie, Pa., who appeared at the hearing representing the Morgantown chapter of the Izaak Walton league against the development. To a question by Reid as to the effect of the development upon Blackwater Falls, which other witnesses said would be eliminated, Weimer declared "the people of Tucker county know what they want and should not be dictated to by people out of the county and out of the state."

Fish Slaughter Recalled

Mott, during his discussion, referred to the investigation last summer into Cheat river pollution by the Tucker county grand jury, of which he was foreman. He said the death of the fish resulted because of low water and urged approval of the project as a means of conserving fish, declaring that with the development "this will not occur again." At that statement, Governor Conley, sitting as a member of the commission, asked Mott if he knew the American Legion at Morgantown opposed the development in order to keep the fish and further asked him if he thought the district should be developed for enterprise or to keep the fish.

"If they will employ our labor and pay our taxes, we will surrender to them," Mr. Mott replied.

Among communications filed in the case was one from the Monongalia Post No. 2 of the American Legion at Morgantown opposing the development on the ground that it would deprive citizens of the use of the recreational area. At the bottom of the communication was a notation that it was adopted at an informal meeting.

Reger and Downs Testify

Changes in topography that would result from the development were described by David B. Reger, Morgantown geologist, W. S. Downs, Morgantown, engineer, and H. A. Dunn, an employe of the company in charge of real estate concerned in the proposed development. Reger said that in several instances a few acres of coal basin would be within flooded areas and Downs testified there would be very slight damage, if any, done to coal resources, declaring all workable coals were above the water line.

Reger first told of the proposed lnundation of the town of St. George, former county seat of Tucker county, having a dozen or so families with the statement he understood all of the town was owned by the applicant company. Dunn later said Clifton Mills, a town of 40 or 45 inhabitants, would also be flooded out and said residents of neither town were opposed to the development. Dunn said the company owned a total of 29,000 acres in the basin which it had been acquiring for the last 18 years with the water power development in view. Dunn said an agreement had been reached with the town of Davis covering the flooding of certain streets and alleys and that an agreement also had been reached with the state roads commission for relocation of a portion of a state route that would be inundated.

Would Benefit Industry

Supporting a contention of the company that industries would be attracted to the state by the development, John S. Jenks, vice president and engineer of the company, said negotiations were ln progress with one company that would use a large amount of power. Questioned by F. M. Livezey, counsel for the commission, as to possibilities of completing other units other than those listed for lmmediate construction, Jenks said they would be developed "just as rapidly as they may be justified and the commission dictates." He said their present plans for construction over a nine-year period were developed upon the basis of "normal growth" but that when the developments were started he expected an "abnormal growth,, and said it would be necessary to "speed up" the Blackwater projects if negotiations were closed with the company to which he referred.

Attorney Doub, ln withdrawing the Western Maryland's project against the Blackwater projects, said it was made because the road's line near Davis would be flooded for a mile and that extensive holdings of mineral and surface lands in that vicinity will be "vitally affected." He said these differences had been "reconciled" and the protest upon those projects was withdrawn but remained on file against the projects known as Big Sandy, Glady Fork, Shavers Fork and Dry Fork. The Shavers Fork development he said would flood the railway lines for 14 miles and "cripple development of the railroad facilities in that region." Speaking for D. W. McDonald, Uniontown, Pa., who appeared for two Fayette county concerns in that state, Doub said McDonald's companies opposed only the Big Sandy project "due to the interference with the extension of railroad facilities in this region."

Advantages which the power company seeking the franchise declares will follow construction of the projects were described to the commission in testimony presented by the company at the hearing which began on Tuesday last. It was contended impounding of the water would remove danger of floods and minnimize stream pollution as well as attract industry.

Compiete Control Necessary

L. R. Shattuck, consulting engineer of the firm of Sanderson and Porter, New York city, testifying for the company, said there could be no more comprehensive scheme for hydro-electric development of the Cheat than the one presented by the company, a subsidiary of the West Penn Electric company, and that the degree of utilization, placed at 90 percent, was only posssible because of its connection with the electric system of the West Penn concern. The Blackwater storage and power developments, placed for first construction, he said, were predicted upon the development of the entire watershed by one company and that if any one site was awarded to another company, the comprehensiveness of utilization would be "materially reduced," pointing to the possibility of disagreements when more than one company engaged in water power development, operated in the district.

Two Projects Consolidated

The company's application listed 13 projects in five northern and central counties with four in Tucker and Monongalia counties placed for first construction, but the number was reduced to 12 by consolidation of the Rowlesburg and St. George projects into one project to be located near Erwin to meet objections of the city of Rowlesburg. The first four projects, the Blackwater storage dam and Blackwater power developments Nos. 1 and 2 in Tucker county, and the Beaver Hole dam and power house in Monongalia county, under the company's application, would be constructed within nine years at an approximate cost of 17 million dollars.

Shattuck was questioned briefly by George C. Doub, counsel for the Western Maryland Railway, protestant to the application, regarding the possibilities of completing other projects named in the application.

Replying to a question by Doub if the company at the present time did not contemplate construction of the other projects, Shuttuck said if the license was granted, as sought, the company would be governed by the orders of the commission regarding construction. Passed by Doub with a question if it was not a fact that the company would wait until a demand developed for the other projects, Shattuck repeated his previous answer and added he judged the commission would not order them constructed unless a demand for them existed. Responding to another question by L. A. Johnson, of counsel for the company, Shattuck said the question of industries locating along the site of the proposed developments would be a "decided element" in determining upon construction of the other projects.

Projects Not Related

A statement by Shattuck on direct examination that the Blackwater projects were planned at a high capacity because of the "beneficial influence" upon other projects below them drew cross examination from F. M. Livezey, counsel for the commission. Livezey developed that projects upon Glady Fork, Shavers Fork and Big Sandy were not related to the Blackwater projects and Shuttuck said he did not know of the relation of Dry Fork projects to Blackwater because of insufficient data.

Shattuck, in outlining the company's views as to advantages to the state that would result from the development said of the total expenditure of $100,000,000 ultimately to be spent, $30,000,000 would be for labor and $70,000,000 for equipment. A market for coal would be created, he said, pointing to the company's plan of steam generated energy for the "base" load and hydroelectric energy for the "peak" load, with twice as much energy developed by steam as by water power.

Would Attract Industry

Industries would be attracted to the Cheat valley "at a rapid rate," he said, by the assurance of abundant power and new towns and villages would be built, adding that property values would be increased and the tax rate lowered to present residents because of the added sources from which taxes could be raised. Other advantages listed by Shattuck were: ample opportunity for water supply for towns and industries, additional facilities for fishing, hunting, boating and bathing, with free access to the lakes created; flood control and minimizing pollution through creating a uniform flow of water.

ANOTHER MILESTONE—

As The Republican passes another milestone and begins its fifty-fourth year of continuous existence, it continues to lead the field in Garrett county in every respect.

The Republican is the oldest business institution in Garrett county. It enjoys the largest circulation of any paper in the Garrett county and is being read by more people each week because they know where to find the most interesting and truthful accounts of events and all the real news of the county.

The Republican contains the following features which make it the most widely read newspaper in this section: All the real news of the county while it is news, well written and truthful; "Beyond the County," a column of events transpiring in other parts of the world; country correspondence from every section of the county; personal and local notes of interest; interesting facts concerning Maryland, written by a local author; "In Days of Old," an article reviewing events occurring locally forty and twenty years ago; The Homemakers Corner, devoted to the interests of the women of the county and written by the local home demonstration agent; the County Agent's column on local and state events of importance agriculturally; Scoop's Column, liable to contain almost anything; Politics in Review, from the Baltimore Observer; advertisements of local merchants; legal notices of sales, etc., authorized under the terms of the law and by contracts between parties, and paid local notices that bring results.

With all this array of interesting data at hand, it is no wonder that each succeeding week sees the names of new subscribers added to the list of readers and it is the earnest desire and endeavor of The Republican staff that the paper will continue to grow in interest so that it may be of still greater service to the community throughout its fifty-fourth year and those that are to follow.

THE COST OF PREPAREDNESS AND OF UNPREPAREDNESS

The statement that the United States is spending 72 per cent of the national budget for costs growing out of wars past, present and future, illustrates the adage that while figures will not lie, liars will figure. The United States is spending a smaller percentage of its national income on our army, navy and national defenses than it was immediately prior to any of our wars, all of which were more prolonged and made more costly in life and money than if we had been more adequately prepared. Moreover, it must be remembered that the cost of national defense falls almost entirely on the national government, while the states and smaller political divisions of the country are spending much more than the fedeal government, the largest single item being for education, the cost of which does not fall on the nation.

The principal and interest on our national debt is a huge item, and pacifists charge all this up to war obligations. How much of the big debt we accumulated during the World War was due to the fact that we had to wastefully improvise national defense, a merchant marine and many other causes of outlay? In other words how much is due to the fact that we drifted into war unprepared, would be hard to say definitely, but it probably accounts for half the cost of the war to us. The burden is much heavier than it otherwise would be because at the end of the war we asked no indemnities and received no territorial acquisitions, and because we wiped off half the debt due us from foreign powers, but would the pacifist argue that in this we contributed to the war rather than the peace spirit?

Much of the burden is due the fact that instead of conscripting soldiers and compelling them to work for nothing or next to nothing, our government pays the soldiers and sailors and makes provision for them and their families afterward. One of the big items in our national budget is care of veterans. Is this heavy cost we voluntarily place upon ourselves contributory to war, or does it make it less likely that our country will be led again into the heavy cost of war? Is it a peace measure or a war measure? The same fallacy appears in that argument that we spend more on our army and navy than any other country in the world. This is only because we feed, clothe, house and pay our soldiers and sailors on a much higher scale than any other country. The figures as to the actual size of our army and navy speak for themselves. We have, measured in the number of men enrolled, the smallest army in the world in proportion to our population and wealth.

Nor is the money spent on our army and navy wasted. Those familiar with army training know that the discipline, regular habits and educational activities of the army are a real contribution to the young men who take this training. Both army and navy provide training in trades; the navy is, indeed, a vast manual training school for scores of thousands of youths who could not afford to attend an ordinary institution providing such training. In times of unemployment like the present the pressure of competition from a quarter of a million men is removed from industrial life, and they are getting experience which will make them useful citizens. They are a menace to no man and no nation which does not have designs on the safety of Americans. Services in the National Guard is a service contributing to personal efficiency and good citizenship.

Inability to defend our nation in case of attack might cost this country a hundred times more than the cost of reasonable preparedness. It might conceivably even cause the loss of our national existence, and while some pacifists would not count this loss as being of any account, there are millions of Americans who place a pretty high value on the perpetuity of this nation.

In his farewell address, George Washington, who is of course a back number to our visionary crystal gazers, admonished his countrymen and his posterity to maintain the nation "in a reasonable posture of defense." It was good advice in his day, and it is just as good advice now. Neither preparedness nor unpreparedness is a guarantee against the occurrence of war, but the school boy who is known to be unwilling to defend himself gets most of the lickings, and for the richest nation in the world to be careless in preparing protection against attack would in effect have a "Please Kick Me" sign hanging on Uncle Sam's coat tails, with plenty of bullies willing to accept the cowardly invitation.

Police protection costs a lot of money but it would cost much more not to have it. Fire and life insurance cost a lot of money, but it would be extravagance and not economy not to have it. Probably some impressive figures could be worked out to show how much it costs to keep locks on doors or on windows, and keep watch dogs, but even the ultra-pacifist, more anxious for his personal safety than for that of the nation, does not indulge in this alleged economy on the theory that burglary being wrong, no one should take precautions to make it improbable. When the cost of a thing is considered, the question of whether it would not cost more not to have it is worthy of thought, and in no case is this more necessary than in the matter of national defense, because when the need comes it cannot be suddenly conjured into existence.

Three Wise Men of the East, Each Standing Out Like a Beacon In His Day and Land, Recognized the Great Truth Dawning For His Age, Compared as a Simile For the Present Time.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Is there anyone not intrigued by the story of the three wise men? And does not every one picture it to his own imagination in spite of the many words and colors in which it has already been pictured by writers and painters? My own fancy has always been that these wise men of the east were of regions far apart, each standing out like a beacon in his day and land, each recognizing the great truth dawning for his age and so, when coming together in the quest recognized as the great opportunity of his day, joyously recognizing the spirit of one another and going on together.

How many times in the two thousand years since has a similar grasp of the dawning opportunity been caught by three wise men at any one time history does not tell. But within the space of the week ending February the second, three of the acknowledged wise men of this day and country have expressed themselves as to the dawning era in the world. They are of professions as varying as were those old divisions of land and kingdom. They all expressed themselves, as it happened, through the columns of the New York World. They are Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, Dr. Raymond Fosdick and General Pershing.

Said Dr. Butler in expressing the quest of the world of today: "The mind of the world has been turned from a backward looking and forward fearing mind to a forward looking and backward fearing mind. * * On August 2, 1928, the civilized world, through its organized governments, formally and solemnly condemned recourse to wars for solution of international controversies. * * They further agreed that the settlement or solution of disputes of whatever nature, of whatever origin, shall never be sought except by pacific means. Gone is the fear of national security; gone the whole gospel of preparedness for a war which is promised never to be fought."

General Pershing's statements are along the same line. They are terse. Here is one of them: "The broadening facilities of intercommunication, the exchange of friendly visits, the increasing cooperation among nations in finance and goverenment, the favorable growth of public opinion and of friends and former foes are all working together to create an international relationship of common understanding and goodwill."

And Dr. Fosdick, quoted from an address over the radio, dwelt upon the fact that economic internationalism has far outstripped politcial internationalism and the change in economic conditions makes it no longer necessary to regard war as inevitable. "We have been trying to run a twentieth century industrial world with the social apparatus devised for an eighteenth century agricultural civilization. In everything that relates to trade and commerce we have cheerfully accepted the contributions of modern science its steamships, airplanes, radios and telegraphs. But side by side with this new system we have tried to maintain our old system of suspicion and aloofness, backed by battleships and machine guns. * * These two systems cannot live in the same world together. That is why the Kellogg Pact and the World Court and the League of Nations and all the other instruments for peace are of such tremendous consequences. All these things are attempts to bring our political internationalism abreast of our economic internationalism."

These things of radio and telegraph and others are means binding the world close together today. It is not miles which count, but minds. And minds searching for the new era and recognizing its dawn are traveling together to hail it. From minds differing in lines of research and work as different as the lands and kingdoms of those men of old have come the same recognition of the new light of internationalism and goodwill.

An Interesting Fact.

There are two questions, age old, which are discussed with heat at the present time and which have been so discussed from time immemorial—the liquor and tariff questions.

History indicates that Maryland was among the first, if not the very first state, to adopt regulations concerning both. Away back in 1688 what appears to be the first suggestion to regulate the sale of liquor in the United States, at least among a certain class of inhabitants, came from the chief of one of the tribes of Indians then occupying a certain section of the eastern part of the Colony of Maryland.

This chief complained to the Council that "drinke is brought into the towne by the English and soe the Indians buy if for skins and keeps the Indians poore and makes them drunke."

Possibly the antis were then in control, for we do not find it recorded that any prohibitory measure was adopted carrying into effect this suggestion or request of the Indian chieftain. But later, in 1692, when Copley was governor, an order was passed prohibiting the taking or sending of any strong liquor into any Indian town. Maryland, apparently, was then wet but adopted local option.

Much later, in 1704, it appears that Maryland for the first (and to date we believe the last) time attempted to regulate the importation of liquor by putting a tariff of nine pence a gallon on "rumm spirritts, wine and brandy imported by land from Pennsylvania into this province."

But this act, as we interpret the historical reference, was not adopted as an aid to temperance but was in comformity with the wish of Queen Anne, who preferred that the inhabitants of Maryland make their own rum or import it by sea, in order, in the latter case, that England might reap the profit, rather than have it supplied from the distilleries of a neighboring colony.

About this time Maryland also imposed a tariff on articles which the colony was accustomed to import from Pennsylvania.

Declaring that nothing like it had ever happened in medicine before, Dr. Edgar L. Gilchrist, of California, has stated that the new Coffey-Humber adrenal cortex extract injections will alleviate the awful pain of cancer patients.

INSPECTION OF CAMPING SITES TO BE MADE SOON

Must Have Permits Renewed Yearly by Health Department

In preparation for the rapidly approaching out-of-doors' season, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, annoouneed that inspection of summer camps will be started early in March. In eonnection with these inspections, Dr. Riley calls attention to the fact that last year's permits do not hold over for a second season. A new permit must be secured for the season of 1930.

In order that the permits may be renewed, or may be granted to operators of newly established camps, the camps must measure up to the requirements of the State Board of Health. The regulations apply to all places used as a camp or picnic ground for a period of six days or longer and accommodating ten or more persons. All camps—whether new or old—that meet these requirements will be duly certified and will be posted with the official placards of the State Board of Health.

During the coming season the camps will again be under the supervision of the Deputy State Health officers or local health officers of the district in which they are situated, and of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the State Department of Health. Particular attention will be paid in the preliminary inspections to the water supply and to the arrangements for the disposal of sewage, or refuse and garbage.

Sanitary supervision and inspection of the tourist and recreational camps, under the present regulations, were begun in 1926. Each season, Dr. Riley said, has shown an increase in the readiness with which the camp operators have met the requirements. During the first year, 105 camps were inspected and 49 met the requirements and were licensed. The next year 133 were inspected and 78 were licensed. Last year 116 camps wer einspected and 84 were licensed. Fifteen counties were represented by the camps to which licenses were granted last year. Cecil with 15, Anne Arundel and Frederick each with 14 camps, had the highest number. Harford and Howard, each with 6 camps, and Kent and Washington, each with 5, came next. The rest were scattered among the remaining counties.

Applications for renewal of permits or for new permits, should be made promptly so that the necessary inspections can be made before the season opens. A copy of the application blank, with other necessary information, can be obtained by writing to the State Department of Health, 2411 North Charles Street, Baltimore City.

To Washington

Soldier and statesman, wise beyond telling,
Mighty in war, yet greater in peace,
All through the years our love and devotion
For you and your victories shall only increase.
The years shall but add to your fame and your prestige,
For time shall reveal to a greater degree
Your wisdom and greatness, your love and your vision,
Father and friend of this land of the free!

Our hearts thrill with pride as your deeds are recounted,
We glory because we can claim as our own
A hero and statesman the whole world honors,
As splendid and noble as ever was known.
And down from the north to the shores of the southland,
From the east to the west, along every far way,
Of this mighty and wonderful nation he founded,
We honor and cherish his memory today.

Airview of the vast estate at Mt. Vernon, Virginia, where George Washington was born and spent most of his life.

Tribute of Nation Laid at the Feet of Washington

No President, no American in fact, has ever during his lifetime captured the popular fancy of a whole nation as did George Washington in 1789, Evelyn Thorpe writes, in the Boston Herald. He alone stands as the idol of an adoring populace.

When Washington, as President-elect of the American people, began the long trip from Mount Vernon to New York in April, 1789, for the first inaugural ceremonies of the nation, he modestly expressed his wish and intention to avoid notice and display as he journeyed through the states. But the people were too delighted at his election, too grateful for his splendid services in their behalf, too proud of his victories, too conscious of his greatness, to permit him to pass unnoticed. A fig for his modesty! He was their hero; they would adore him. True to the spirit of democracy, the people had their way. He was eulogized, feasted, feted and acclaimed from the moment he left the shelter of Mount Vernon until he entered the door of the President's house in New York city.

Hardly had he left his own dooryard when his friends from neighboring Alexandria captured him and escorted him to their little village for a neighborly farewell. Here, he was at home; these were his friends. They had prepared for him a great dinner to which the community's finest were invited. There was cordial good fellowship, eulogistic farewells and hearty well wishing for this great man who was peculiarly their friend and neighbor. Washington was more than grateful for their confidence and love and this frank expression of it touched him deeply.

Welcomed at Philadelphia.

He arose before daylight to continue his journey from Baltimore, but it was not too early for the Baltimoreans to do full honor to their departing guest. At 5:30 in the morning they started him off on his journey amid the cheers of the people and the boom of cannon.

Philadelphia was the largest city through which he was to pass and they had made extensive preparations there. The city was gayly decorated, impressive triumphal arches spanned the highways; streamers, flags and evergreens made the old city a festive scene. There was banqueting, speeches, music and fireworks. The honored guest was greeted with great enthusiasm and frequent shouts of "Long Life to George Washington, the father of the people!" It was a busy and happy day for them all.

The next morning found the gay city disheveled by the torrential rains which were relentlessly descending, making sorry havoc of the previous day's splendor and delaying Washington's start for Trenton until nearly noon. He rode in his own closed carriage accompanied by Lieut. Col. David Humphreys, an aide-de-camp on his staff during the war, and Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental congress, who had journeyed to Mount Vernon to notify Washington of his election to the Presidency, and who was now escorting him to New York.

Again Crossed Delaware.

They arrived at the old stone ferry house at Colvin's ferry on the Delaware early in the afternoon. Patrick Colvin, himself, owner of the ferry, was on hand to personally conduct the Presidential party safely across the Delaware! What memories must [illegible] have stirred of that earlier crossing of this river with his tattered troops in those dreadful winter months of the war! How well we know this historic incident which has been the inspiration of artist and poet in their attempts to portray the dramatic in history.

Trenton's leading citizens waited on the other shore, eager to extend a welcome. He was also greeted here by "an admiring concourse" of the inhabitants of Bloomsbury who had joined the Trentonians on the river's bank. "The battery fired a salute and the troop of horse and light infantry companies formed the escorting column into the village of Trenton." It was peculiarly fitting that Trenton should plan a great welcome. This was an historic spot and George Washington had made the history. Here he had captured a body of Hessian mercenaries under Colonel Rall, "who had done all that bad men could do to injure the good people of the Jerseys." At this very spot also he had withstood for hours the advance of the British and afterward performed one of the masterly movements of the war. During these eventful weeks he had "nearly freed the entire state of an insolent foe." These circumstances, now recalled, gave New Jersey its first opportunity to do honor to its deliverer. The people of "the Jerseys" were most grateful to Washington for the successful culmination of the Revolutionary struggle.

Women's Unique Greeting.

The women were particularly sensible to the security his valorous deeds had procured for them. They were to have their share in honoring him and had planned a unique reception. At no other place, so far as the records indicate, did women play so definite and prominent a part in the succession of hero worship. Washington was deeply moved and grateful.

Here at the bridge, the site of a noble victory of war, the women of Trenton planned the spectacular part of the festivities. "On the north side of the bridge an arch about twenty feet high was raised, supported on one side by seven and on the other by six pillars. The arch was nearly twenty feet wide and about twelve feet in length. Each of the thirteen pillars was entirely covered with masses of evergreens and wreaths of laurel, and the arches above were closely twined about with the same material and festooned inside with long ropes of laurel and the flowers of early spring. On the south side of the archway, the side which first appeared to the Presidential party, an inscription in large gilt letters on a blue ground was fastened, and beautifully ornamented with flowers: 'The Defender of the Mothers will be the Protector of the Daughters.' On top of this mass of evergreens was a large sunflower which was intended to emblemize the American people who turned toward him as the only sun which would give life and warmth to the body politic."

Children's Tribute.

The structure had been erected the day previous by workmen in charge of Benjamin Yard; and the ladies had been busy all the morning putting in position the wreaths and emblems which they had with such taste prepared. Beneath this arch General Washington must pass to enter Trenton. As he came to the high ground on Mill hill, some 200 yards below the creek, the beautiful triumphal arch appeared. But as he passed through the archway with uncovered head a still more lovely sight greeted him. On the one side of the arch he saw six little girls dressed in white, carrying baskets of flowers; on the other side thirteen young ladies to represent the several states, who were dressed in similar style and also had baskets filled with flowers. Behind all these were a number of the matrons of the town and neighboring villages. As Washington entered the arch the six little girls began to sing a beautiful ode which had been written by Major Howell and which, under the instruction of Rev. James F. Armstrong, they performed with excellence.

After the tribute of respect at the archway the escort proceeded to Samuel Henry's City tavern, on the southwest corner of Second and Warren streets, where General Washington dined with the principal citizens of the place and held a reception in the parlors of the inn. Late in the afternoon he took carriage for Princeton, Rev. Mr. Armstrong accompanying him that far on his journey. It is generally understood that they spent that night at the residence of the president of the college, Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon. During the afternoon a copy of the song with which the little girls had greeted him at the Trenton bridge had been given him.

Washington's Gratitude.

All of this, contrasted as it was with the earlier memories of Trenton, stirred Washington to the depths of his emotions, and before Mr. Armstrong departed on his return to Trenton, Washington had written a beautiful expression of his gratitude for the love and confidence which had been evidenced in Trenton toward him. This letter he asked Mr. Armstrong to deliver for him to the women of Trenton: "General Washington cannot leave this place without expressing his acknowledgements to the matrons and young ladies who received him in so novel and genteel a manner at the triumphal arch in Trenton, for the exquisite sensation be experienced in that affecting moment. The astonishing contrast between his former and actual situation at the same spot, the elegant taste with which it was adorned for the present occasion—and the innocent appearance of the white-robed choir who met him with the gratulatory song, have made such impressions on his remembrance as he assures them will never be effaced."

Not much of the long journey was now left for Washington, for he had only to go to Elizabethport, where he was to embark on the remarkable barge which was to carry him across the river and up the bay to New York. Everywhere the people turned out to see him and to cheer him, making the whole journey one long triumphal procession, the like of which no other President has ever experienced.

Lesson for February 23

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest that He send forth laborers into His harvest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at Work.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at Work.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helping to Win the World for Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Recruiting Christian workers.

I. The Plenteous Harvest (9:35-38).

1. Christ's compassion (v. 36).

As He went on His rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, He saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd.

2. A plenteous harvest and the few laborers (v. 37).

He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

3. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into His harvest (v. 38).

II. The Twelve Sent Forth (ch. 10).

The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of the missionary endeavor in this age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the Apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 1-15).

In strictness of interpretation these teachings cannot be applied to any later period.

(1) The ministers chosen (vv. 1-4). These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry on the work of the propagation of the kingdom. These twelve stood in a peculiar relation to Israel. (2) The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were only to go to Jews. They had no message for Gentiles, or even Samaritans. After Pentecost this sphere was widened (Luke 24:46-49; Acts 1:8). No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today. The middle wall of partition was broken down by the death of Christ. (3) Their message (v. 7). By "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand; that Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up His kingdom. After the church is translated, the same message will be taken up for a brief time by the believing remnant (See Acts 15:13-18; Rom. 11 and Rev. 7). (4) The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles. These wonderful works were really done by the twelve. (5) Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way. (6) Responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them or hear their message, they were to turn from them and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning testimony from Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23).

After Pentecost, testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. They were scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, they brought divisions of the fiercest kind among families. In their defense they were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally fulfilled in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem, no one has ever been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming then is so speedy, that their testimony is cut short.

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42).

The disciple has the position of oneness with the master. He is courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though the testimony result in the most bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with His disciples that He accepts treatment of them as treatment of Himself.

The Man Who Prays

The man who prays is putting something into the hands of God that was not there before, and God can do for that man something when he prays that he cannot do unless he prays.—William Douglas Mackenzie.

The Power of the Blood

The power of the Blood avails for the blackest and deepest sins, and no man is beyond the reach of God's mercy till the gates of hell have closed upon him.—Echoes.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

A nice collection of valentines was made last week-end by The Republican force so that Scoop wouldn't have to do any thinking this week in making up his column.

The majority of the comics were received by the members of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work, and the worst part of it is that they don't know who sent them. The fact that Scoop himself didn't receive a single, solitary comic valentine has led all the drug store cowboys to believe that he sent out the scathing stanzas and descriptive pictures.

But due to the fact that it cost at least four or five cents to buy and mail each one, they were finally led to believe that somebody who had lots of money to throw away did it.

Here'a What They Got

Harry Miller, grocer:
Besides the added dirt and sand
To every weight you "lend a hand"
In prices, too, you're known to fame
An addict to the adding game.

Harold "Happy" "Andalusia" Harned—the radio nut:
You listen in for bedtime tales
'Til dawn is in the skies
And all you need is big long ears
And blinders on your eyes.

Harold "Betty" Dawson, the other Gold Dust Twin of Harned's drug store:
Much dope and booze you serve they say
Your counter's like a bar all day,
You'll feel at home, and we'll thank our stars,
When you are safe behind the bars.

Neil Fraley, merchant:
Each thing's a "special bargain"
When you offer it for sale
But if the truth is known
It's just merchandise that's stale.

Joseph E. Harned, druggist:
You have a great department store
Sell candy, soda, rugs,
Stamps, and magazines, watches, toys
Pray, do you handle drugs?

B. H. Sincell, the boss editor:
Now's the proper season
For me to drop a line
To let you know you'll always be
A comic valentine.

Willum Frazee, farmer, stockman, etc.:
A hayseed you are
In all that you do
When I've a gold brick to sell
I'll come first to you

H. C. Sincell, alias Isaac Hamberger, ready to wear:
With suits you make we must admit
Your customers will have a fit
Why waste time on pockets he never can fill
Unless he refuses to pay your bill.

"Poky" "Slim" Shaw, head of the Amalgamates: Sleepy Head
Wake up the birdies are singing
Come out of that slumber so deep
Your neck is in need of a wringing
Pray, why are you always asleep.

Floyd Stahl, barber:
Bob all the women, shave all the men,
Cut them and scratch them again and again—
Your scissors are dull, you razor needs honing
Your customers leave you all crying and moaning.

This is Copied Too

"My Yo-Yo"

What is the dearest thing on earth,
That fills my heart with joy and mirth?
My Yo-Yo.

What takes the place of my best girl,
And is treasured more than any pearl?
My Yo-Yo.

What keeps me busy day and night,
And makes me exercise with might?
My Yo-Yo.

All day I work my arms it seems,
'Till when I'm sleeping, in my dreams
I Yo-Yo.

And in the morn when I awake,
Before my breakfast I will take
My Yo-Yo.

And start to sling it in and out
Until my family curses out
My Yo-Yo.

I prance along the busy street
And show to everyone I meet
My Yo-Yo.

I think it is the grandest thing—
They all stop to watch me sling
My Yo-Yo.

I sling it out and reel it in;
The girls all like to see me spin
My Yo-Yo.

They are all running after me,
But all they want to see
Is my Yo-Yo.

Canning Meats with the Pressure Cooker.

This method is the only one recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture as being safe for canning meats. The intensely high temperature inside the cooker kills the spores and bacteria and at the same time reduces the processing time to a fraction of that required by other methods, which is a great saving in fuel as well as of the homemaker's time.

The meat may be canned cooked or uncooked. If cooked or partially cooked, it should be properly seasoned at the time, as seasoning cannot be added to good advantage afterwards. Since processing sterilizes the surrounding air as well as the meat and any liquid, it is not necessary to sterilize the jars. They should, of course, be clean and nice but absolute sterilization is superfluous.

Little Miss Julia Crow, a 16-year old 4-H Club worker of Silver Lake, Kansas, won the second prize of $200 for her jar of canned beef, using this recipe: Cut 2½ pounds of roasting beef into two-inche cubes. Add 1 teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper if desired. Sear in fat in a very hot frying pan. Pack into jar, adjust rubber and lid and process at 15 lbs. pressure for 60 minutes. When pressure is down to zero remove jar and tighten lid.

Mrs. Shelby Utz, Las Vegas, New Mexico, the only prize winner from her state, says she first dressed the chickens carefully, precooked them and removed the meat from the bones, packed it and processed one hour at 15 lbs. pressure.

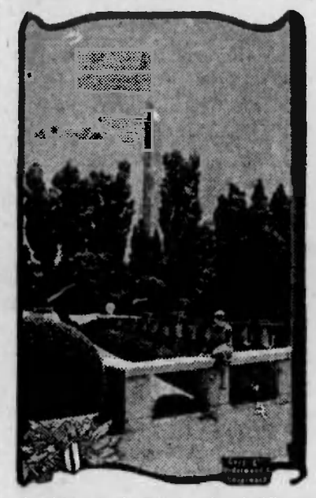
PRETTY SETTING



As visitors to the Pan-American building see the Washington monument. This stone archway and the well-planned gardens afford an attractive view of the great marble obelisk, completed in 1888 and dedicated to the memory of the nation's first President.

Washington's Fame Secure for Ever

Strangely we American people have no nationally established holiday. The anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, even, has not been gold-lettered in our calendar. But its date and that of the birth date of George Washington have, by the common action of all the states and possessions, become the elect days of our jubilation and our reverence.

This is the one hundred and ninety-eighth anniversary of the birth of our Washington, known to the world as the "Father of His Country: first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen!"

There is no other name in the human roster that receives so much of the admiration and gratitude of civilized men as that of Washington. Only the name of Jesus is more universal and honored, because it is worshiped as divine.

The resolutions of congress, when Washington died, said "ancient and modern names are diminished before him." Hamilton declared that "the voice of praise would in vain endeavor to exalt the name unrivaled in the lists of true glory," and Lord Bryce, the modern English appraiser of American history, said "his fame belongs to the history of the world!" The most eloquent Irishman, Curran, declared that "no country can claim him; no age appropriate him. The boon of Providence to the human race, his fame is eternity and his residence creation!"

What wonder, then, that today we turn our own and our children's eyes to the immortal figure of Washington!

HISTORIC HOUSE

When the final battle of the American Revolution was fought at Yorktown, George Washington occupied this house in Williamsburg, Va., as his headquarters. The house recently has been restored from the fund given by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to rebuild the colonial town of Williamsburg.

After all, 198 years is a very short time according to historical reckoning. Many a longer period has been swallowed up in oblivion with scarcely a ripple of recorded achievement, but consider, if you can, what amazing, revolutionary and multitudinous things have been consummated in our country since Washington's birth. Miracles far greater than the fabled magic of ancient peoples have begotten almost an entirely new civilization.

And yet through all this transition, the work of Washington, even to the manual labor of his hands, has weathered every test of changing times and conditions. And he stands enshrined today, as in his day, "First in the Hearts of his Countrymen."

Lock of Washington's Hair

A gold breast pin with a heavy glass front protecting a lock of sandy hair in which strands of gray are mingled, has been presented to the museum of the city of New York by the great-great-grandson of Hamilton Fish. The lock was clipped from Washington's head eight years before he became President and presented to Fish, as the inscription on the back of the pin indicates. . . . Those days great men were taken more seriously than now.

WORTHY OF GREAT PRESIDENT

This wide veranda of Mount Vernon, where the founder of the United States spent his manhood, looks out over the Potomac river, south of Washington. Restored exactly as in Washington's day, tourists flock to see it in many thousands every year.

Washington Keen Man of Business

How does it come about that George Washington, a member of an agricultural family, living in an agricultural state, and concerned primarily with the occupation and use of land, may be styled with absolute truth as the best and the most farsighted business man of his time?

It has been my fortune during the last three summers to search out the family history of Washington's ancestors, writes Albert Bushnell Hart, professor emeritus of history, Harvard university, in the Nation's Business. From William de Washington, who settled in the town of Washington, Palatinate of Durham, in 1185, we think we have a straight strain of 25 generations of Washingtons behind our George Washington that can be substantiated; and in that set of ancestors, father to son, among men of varied talents and intellectual powers, I have as yet failed to find a single scalawag. In that line you find the lawyer strain. You find judges. You find for the most part landowners, holders of considerable estates, which they administered successfully.

Line of Successful Men.

There is in the Washington line a strong strain of practical and highly successful business men. Otherwise it would be impossible to account for the manner in which Washington reached out beyond his immediate field as a landowner to greater enterprises; and how eventually he became the first practical transportation man in the United States.

Washington, of course, was a landowner. That is, his prime business was to run landed estates. It was a declining business when he took it up, when by the death of his father and then of his two brothers he came into possession of very large properties, including the Mount Vernon estate and a number of adjacent plantations. Altogether he had 9,000 acres of land, pretty much in one body along the Potomac, including Mount Vernon.

That land he carried on as a business enterprise, as you would do if you were charged with such a responsibility, to make 9,000 acres of land pay if you could. He was the first Virginian to see that tobacco was played out because the land was worn out; that the land would not stand the pressure of continued tobacco crops. So he turned to the culture of wheat. He built a mill to utilize that wheat and he sent it to market. He had his own brand.

Kept Accounts Faithfully.

According to the customs of the time, he put up a distillery in order to make a different disposition of a part of his product. That is to say, Washington sought all the different kinds of agriculture that could be maintained on his farm. He raised blooded stock of a superior kind. The king of Spain made him a present of a very valuable jack, and he raised mules and apparently raised them to advantage.

Furthermore, Washington was a natural accountant, and the proof is in his diaries and in his account books. Almost the last thing that he put on paper was a little bit of bookkeeping. He kept his records in a clear, legible hand. He kept them according to the customs of the times. That is, he recorded whatever went on. His diaries have been published in four volumes but they tell you nothing of what Washington thought. He put down not what he thought but what he did, who his visitors were, if he went to church or stayed at home. That is, he kept a record to which he could refer to show very nearly where he was every day and what he was doing.

He was an analytic bookkeeper, and I suspect one of the first in America. Hence we find his accounts very carefully subdivided. We find an account for each plantation, a general account, how much he gained out of wheat, how much from tobacco, how many slaves he had, what the expense had been, and so on. He had that inextinguishable love of figures that affects some men.

Even Gambling Losses Listed.

Washington loved to keep books. One of his biographers has calculated his losses in gaming. He lost 75 pounds in a year, and he kept the account and added it up. But the biographer fails to notice that on the other side of the page Washington put down his winnings. His winnings were 70 pounds. That is, he was 5 pounds to the good, because, after all, he had the fun of it and the fun must have been worth at least 10 pounds.

Washington constantly increased his holdings. He was a scientific agriculturalist. There is in existence an interesting correspondence between Washington and a man named Bloxham, whom he imported from England to be the manager of his estate. We have a letter from Bloxham telling what he thought of George Washington, and almost on the same day a letter from Washington telling what he thought of Bloxham, not very complimentary on either side, but they came to understand each other and Bloxham lived and died in Washington's service.

Washington imported the best agricultural implements he could hear of. He was in correspondence with Arthur Young in England, a great reformer in such matters. He introduced seeds, he planted cuttings, he raised trees and shrubs. He was a creative farmer. At least he made a living out of the farm, and left it much more valuable than he found it.

Found Joy as Surveyor.

Again, Washington was a surveyor by profession. He began—everybody knows it—at sixteen years of age in the employ of his neighbor and lifelong friend, Lord Fairfax, to go out and make surveys. We have copies of those surveys. We have the original drawings he made, and the original plats. Only a day or two before he died he was out surveying a bit of property. He loved to handle the surveying instruments. He loved the exactness of the science.

FIRST INAUGURATION

Washington receiving the plaudits of the crowd after the inauguration as the first President of the United States.

Spirit of Washington Worthy of Emulation

Even though we may find it necessary in certain particulars to modify the advice which Washington gave his country a century and a half ago—as, doubtless, he himself would modify it were he here today facing the world as it is—there is in the spirit of Washington as a citizen and patriot nothing that we could wish to alter.

On the contrary we could ask nothing better for America than a revival of that spirit. There was a noble selflessness and a generous breadth of vision in his attitude toward his public duties which must remain through all the years the high ideal for Americanism. He saw America as something bigger and finer than an opportunity for material success; he saw it as a spiritual adventure, a great experiment in human relations and in the development of human values. It was his appreciation of this phase of American possibility which inspired his pride and devotion.—Chicago Post.

It is customary to think of Washington only as soldier or statesman. But he was also a man of business, a builder of transportation, engineer, pioneer and promoter. He was our first millionaire.—American Magazine.

MT. LAKE PARK

Capt. Hayden Celebrates 88th Anniversary Today.

Born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on the 20th day of February, 1842, Capt. James Andrew Hayden of the Park, is 88 years old today.

In 1873, at the age of 31 years, he arrived in Oakland and being a printer of the first class he secured a position as foreman on the old Garrett County Herald, Garrett county's second newspaper, then edited and owned by the late Hiram P. Tasker. The first paper to be printed in Oakland was known as the Glade Star, which had as its publishers the late William H. Hagans and John Zeverly. The political complexion of the Herald did not suit Capt. Hayden and having an opportunity to engage in the newspaper business on his own account he was offered and purchased the Garrett County Gazette, which had been established a short time and which was owned and edited at the time by C. T. Abell, a Baltimore newspaper man and printer. Capt. Hayden assumed charge of the Gazette in 1877 and on March 4 of that year he changed the name of the publication to that of The Republican and issued the initial number of this paper. In 1890 he sold The Republican to the present owner.

Capt. Hayden served in the Army of the Potomae, 11th Penna. Reserve Corps, for 3 years and 10 months and in addition to a number of minor engagements participated in the battles of Cold Harbor, Fredericksburg, Gaines Mills, Gettysburg and at the second battle of the Wilderness he was taken as a prisoner of war and incarcerated in Libby Prison for 11 months. During his service as a soldier he was but slightly wounded. Along with the thousands of other Pennsylvanians who served in the Union Army, Capt. Hayden's name is inscribed on the Pennsylvania monument at Gettysburg, in which battle he and his company of veterans were under fire in Devil's Den for two days and two nights.

Ripe in years, ripe in experience, respected and loved by all his friends and acquaintances, Capt. Hayden is spending this, his 88th anniversary on a bed of sickness, but his indomitable will which carried him through his long service in the fight for the preservation of the Union and for the principles which in private life he held dear, stands forth in his battle for health and his friends believe that the balmy days of spring will see him in his daily rambles about the Park.

The Republican joins with his many friends in wishing him many years yet of health and happiness.

Loch Lynn Has Ticket in Field

On last Saturday evening at a citizens' meeting in Loch Lynn Heights, E. C. Cuppett and H. V. Leighton received the nomination as candidates for Council for the two-year term and B. W. Harvey for the one-year term. G. M. Brown, the present incumbent, was nominated for the position of tax collector.

Some talk is heard on the streets of an independent ticket to be placed in the field, but as yet it has not passed the "talkie" stage. Whether the independent ticket materializes or not, the interest manifested is a good sign. Factions are an indication of interest on the part of the citizens in the good government of the municipality.

Messrs. P. T. Lipscomb, James Shaffer, Bert Smouse and E. O. Liller spent two days in the Eagle Rock and Table Rock sections of the county chasing the elusive fox. Aside from the experience, tired muscles and a sharp appetite, they returned empty-handed.

The mystery of a series of turkey dinners at the home of M. E. O. Liller in Pleasant Valley is being investigated by members of the Winter Solstice Club.

Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Leighton have returned from a few weeks' visit to Florida. While there Mr. Leighton superintended the picking and packing of the crop of oranges and grape fruit grown in the orchard owned by him and other gentlemen of the Park. He reports a good crop generally with the fruit fly menace under control. The party motored there and back, a distance of nearly 3500 miles, without suffering a moment's delay on account of motor trouble. The last day of the trip homeward was driven from Raleigh, North Carolina, a distance of about 485 miles in something over 12 hours.

Rev. Wm. Anderson is in Washington, D. C., for a short visit.

Miss Nelle Walker, who is recovering from a recent severe attack of pneumonia, and her sister, Miss Helen Walker, of Canton, Ohio, are spending a few weeks at Court Inn.

Miss Margaret Berghaus, Fairmont, spent Sunday with Mrs. Frame and Mrs. Raymond.

The members of the Senior class have received their standardized class pins and are much pleased with them. The pins are made of white gold, bearing the school seal in yellow gold and the guard bears the State seal.

The Juniors have also received their class rings. One shank of the ring bears the State seal, on the other is placed the school seal, which is made up of an urn, to give a royal effect: a lion, denoting energy; a book of knowledge and mountains, behind which the sun is rising to signify enlightenment. The top is adorned with a large ruby.

Father and Son Banquet

The boys of the Agriculture department entertained their fathers at a three course banquet, prepared and served by the Home Economics department, on Valentine night. The room was tastefully decorated in red and white.

During the evening several songs were sung by the group, two selections were rendered by the Spring Quartet and short talks were given hy Mr. Beggs, agriculture teacher of Accident, Mr. Graser, agriculture teacher at Oakland, and Harvey Gortner and Frank Getty.

Prizes were awarded by Mr. Mullenex to the boys who had won first second and third places in the contest for killing destructive farm animals. The first prize, a five dollar gold piece, was awarded to Clarence Murphy; second prize, two dollars and fifty cents in gold, to Joseph Lewis and third prize, one dollar, to George Murphy.

All Day Quilting

Mrs. Fred Livengood entertained the Reformed Ladies' Aid Society with an all day quilting on Thursday. Two quilts were finished during the day. Vaudeville A Success

The Black and White Vaudeville, presented by the members of the Woodmen of World Lodge at their hall Friday and Saturday nights, was largely attended and very successful. The songs, dances, stunts and jokes given by the various members and Katharine Speyer, Grace Swauger and Russell Shearer were greatly enjoyed.

The Fresh family string orchestra of New Germany, with their popular numbers, added greatly to the entertainment.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Md.

With the syrup season about to open, and an opportunity this year to get a better price for better syrup through the State inspection service, every producer should consider carefully a few of the important items which affect the quality of maple syrup.

Prompt Boiling

Have everything in readiness for promptly boiling the sap as soon as it is collected. Color determines grade as recognized by State inspection, and sap which has not been boiled promptly is almost certain to produce a darker syrup than promptly boiled sap—and you lose by just that much on a higher price for better syrup.

Eleven Pounds to the Gallon

Make every effort to finish off syrup at eleven pounds to the gallon—no more, no less. If the syrup runs under this weight, sugar will almost surely occur. In either case, the customer will be dissatisfied, and the good name of your syrup is hurt. Don't take chances. Provide yourself with a good hydrometer, and use it. Such instruments may possibly be purchased locally, or they may be secured directly from Taylor Instrument company, Rochester, New York.

Care in Packing Cans

Use care in packing cans in boxes or barrels. A dented can makes a poor appearance, and with labels on cans even greater care must be taken, to prevent the label from becoming scratched or torn off.

There has been a delay in the chemistry laboratory where color samples are being made, but we are promised that they will reach us about February 25.

Dr. Bomberger Goes to Federal Farm Board

Appointment of Dr. F. B. Bomberger, assistant director extension service University of Maryland, and chief of the Maryland department of markets, as assistant chief of the division of cooperative marketing in charge of organization work for a period of one year, starting February 1, 1930, was recently announced by the Federal Farm board. Dr. Bomberger will retain his official title and connection with the University, however.

The appointment of Dr. Bomberger is the result of an arrangement between the Farm board and the university of Maryland whereby the former will have the use of his services to direct its organization work, on a part-time basis, without any relinquishment by him of his official direction of the marketing work of the University of Maryland extension service.

Dr. Bomberger is a native of Maryland, and was graduated from the old Maryland Agricultural college, now the University of Maryland, with the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1894. At various times since then he has served his Alma Mater as professor of economics, political science and history, dean of the school of rural economics and sociology, extension specialist in rural organization and marketing, chief of the Maryland State department of markets and assistant director of the extension service. He has played an important and prominent part in the organization of cooperative marketing associations in this State and has been in close working contact with the larger cooperative associations throughout the United States.

Dr. Bomberger assisted in the organization of the National Association of marketing officials, served a term as its president and has been, for a number of years, the secretary-treasurer of the association. In 1926 he studied agricultural cooperation in a number of foreign countries.

Early Maturing Varieties Best Oats for Maryland

Farmers who contemplate planting spring oats should pay particular attention to the variety they use, according to F. W. Oldenburg, specialist in agronomy for the university of Maryland extension service. The average Maryland farmer is entirely too lax about the source and type of seed he uses and, in the majority of cases, late "feed" oats are the ones planted.

Eariy maturing, rust-resisting varieties are advised for the State, especially for those counties bordering on the Pennsylvania line, where four-fifths of the 50,000 bushels of oats raised annually in Maryland are grown. According to the experiences of the Maryland and Pennsylvania experiment stations and farmers of that section, there are no better varieties than the Kherson and those derived from the Kherson. These are: Iowa 103, Iowa 105, Iowar and Iogold. For the Eastern shore and southern Maryland the Fulghum and Burt varieties are recommended. The Gopher, from Minnesota, and the Cornellian, developed at Cornell University, are also good, the Gopher veriety doing especially well in West Virginia.

Varieties that mature early, while they give the highest yields, at the same time produce less straw and if a farmer desires straw he should grow those varieties that mature medium early. Under no conditions should he use the late varieties.

Because few Maryland farmers have in the past requested the early maturing seed it may be found difficult to obtain this type in local seed houses. However, any farmer may, by writing to his County Agent or to Mr. F. W. Oldenburg, obtain a list of houses in the West from which this seed can be bought.

SPEEDY RELIEF FOR SORE THROAT

This Doctor's Prescription Requires No Gargling

No longer is it necessary to gargle and choke with nasty tasting medicines to relieve sore throat. Now you can get almost instant relief with one swallow of a doctor's prescription. This prescription was refilled so often and became so popular that the druggist who originally filled it decided to put it up under the name Thoxine and make it available to everyone.

The remarkable thing about Thoxine is that it relieves almost instantly, yet contains nothing harmful. It is pleasant tasting and safe for the whole family and is guaranteed to relieve sore throats or coughs in 15 minutes or money back. Just ask for Thoxine, 35c., 60c., and $1.00. Sold by Gonder's and all other good drug stores.—Advertisement 1-1t.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY SAID TO BE OVER 1700 YEARS OLD

Is Survival of Pagan Holiday—Exchange of Gifts Was Custom

The approach of St. Valentine's Day, February 14, is heralded this year by the publication in the current issue of the Golden Book Magazine of the result of interesting researches into the origin and early observances of the day.

Although the day stands second only to Christmas among the older Christian observances, dating back more than 1,700 years, there is little to connect appropriately the modern custom of comic and sentimental valentines with Valentine, the early Christian martyr, who was beaten with clubs and beheaded at the time of the great heathen festival of love and purification, whose name it bears.

What happened, it appears, is that early Christians simply continued the observance of the pagan love festival, giving it the name of the martyr. During the first 1,000 years of Christianity the valentine was an important social institution. In some European countries names of boys and girls were drawn in a lottery, and the individuals thus paired together were popularly supposed to court each other during the ensuing year.

This custom, with variations, was continued until well into the seventeenth century. St. Francis deSales at that time "severely forbade the custom of valentines, or giving boys in writing the names of girls to be admired and attended on by them, and to abolish it, he changed it into giving 'billets' with the names of certain saints to honor and imitate in a particular manner."

In Old England the observance took the form of the exchange of gifts, and once it was more important than Christmas in this respect. Samual Pepys, of diary fame, wrote that he had expended 40 shillings upon white gloves for his valentine. But Pepys gift was modest compared to some. The contemporary Duke of York, for example, bought for 800 pounds sterling, of $4,000 today, a jewel for his valentine.

In parts of the British Isles the observance of St. Valentine's Day was maintained until less than 50 years ago, the Golden Book article shows. A Norfolk publication of the 1870's reported:

"It is customary at Norwich for valentines to be received not only on the 14th of February as in other districts, but on the evening of the 13th, St. Valentine's Eve. Another peculiar feature connected with this festival in Norwich is that the valentine instead of being ornamental 'billet-doux' is some article of intrinsic value. The Norwich papers, for some two or three weeks prior to St. Valentine's Day, contained a number of advertisements attracting attention to goods that are suitable for valentine presents."

FOREST PRESERVATION IS DISCUSSED AT CIVIC CLUB

Mrs. W. W. Grant Reads Interesting Paper on Current Topic —Other Subjects Discussed

Preservation of the forests of the country was the chief topic at the regular meeting of the Oakland Civic Club held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Grace Jones on Second street. Mrs. W. W. Grant read an interesting paper on forestry in general which brought out its immediate relationship to our community.

Mrs. James Willison, chairman of the club's legislative committee, suggested that the women of the county show more interest in the primary and general elections. Mrs. E. H. Sincell spoke on the economic importance of birds to man and their inter-relationship to insects and plant life. Mrs. T. C. Hinebaugh spoke of beautifying the waste places in and around Oakland. Miss Martha Engle, of the high school faculty, expressed her willingness to cooperate with the women in any project in connection with permanent planting which they might assume.

Miss Loar announced that at the next meeting, March 25, an election of officers would occur.

The paper prepared and read by Mrs. Grant follows:

Our Forests.

"In these days when laments over our "vanishing forests" and plans for their rescue are not uncommon, it is difficult to realize that not so many years ago one of our statesmen expressed his surprise that a man as forceful as Theodore Roosevelt should "take up a fad like forestry." It was all right for the worn out countries of the old world but it wasn t needed here.

"Yet it is more than thirty years ago that the women of our country saw the need of considering the certain consequences that were sure to follow our reckless waste of forest resources, and so in 1896 the G. F. W. C. adopted resolutions pledging the clubs to study forest needs and conditions. While today this seems commonplace enough, yet it should be remembered that at that date there was not a college or school in this country where training in scientific forestry was taught.

"From that time on interest grew. The women showed their interest not by just expressing their love for trees or by attending memorial planting, but by carefully studying forestry conditions as they soon learned how the stripping of trees had brought famine to China and the distress of the twice yearly floods that sweep her treeless country.

"China is practically forestless. Lacking the protection of timber, its hills erode and wash away in the rains. Its water supply does not enjoy the purifying effect of trees. Its wild life is not important. Acres upon acres of its surface are barren waste. China had no forest policy.

"They knew that the cedars of Lebanon are told of in history, but they exist there only. The trees that once were in these lands of Biblical days are no more. As they were cut or burned no provision for the future was made. We know that these countries have been the scenes of many racial strifes. There has been misery and helplessness. Their people enjoy few comforts and little security in life. We cannot say that had they a wealth of forest they would be perfectly content, but we can say, however. that if they had forests they would have been richer and stronger. These countries had no forest policy. They did not look to the future. We need a forest policy because our future depends on it.

"We are the biggest wood users on the face of the earth. The people of the United States actually use two-fifths of all the wood consumed in the world. I see no chance of an early abandonment of the wood-using habit. The way out of this situation is clear. We have been, and I hope we may continue to be, a nation of wood-users, but to enjoy this privilege and the

SPECIAL TRAINING TO BE GIVEN DISABLED PERSONS

Rehabilitation Supervisor Here Tuesday Making Investigation —Places Two In Training

For the purpose of helping cripples of Maryland who are mentally sound to prepare for jobs which they can learn to do, and thus be self-supporting, Mr. R. C. Thompson, supervisor of rehabilitation, under the direction of the State Department of Education, was in Oakland on Tuesday investigating a number of local cases, and has succeeded in placing two in training.

"The State Department of Education in Maryland, through its vocational rehabilitation division, is interested in learning of crippled people," Mr. Thompson stated. "Many crippled persons who cannot do the same jobs they did before they were hurt can be taught how to do other jobs just as well.

"A farmer who can no longer plow because of the loss of a leg may be taught the poultry business. A carpenter who has lost an arm may learn to be a foreman in the building trade. A mill worker who has hurt his back on a job where he had to do heavy lifting can often learn to do some lighter job in the same mill.

"Many people who became crippled before they were old enough to work need special training before they can enter employment. It is these disabled persons who are over 14 years of age and who can be trained for jobs which they can do, that may be helped by the State in getting vocational training and employment.

During Mr. Thompson's stay in Oakland, there were six disabled people visited. Four of them wish to finish their elementary and high school education before accepting the vocational offer. The other two, Ted Marley, Deer Park, and William Harvey, Kitzmiller, will be given training along lines that they like and can do.

In training crippled people for employment the rehabilitation division makes use of public and private schools, shops, factories, and offices throughout the State. The aim is to make the cripple self-supporting.

Among the requirements of a cripple are found the following: He must be permanently a cripple and able to do special kinds of work. He must also be mentally sound and normal.

"The correct point of view," Mr. Thompson concluded, "is to see the man behind the handicap, and not the handicap itself; a man with a good mind, two good eyes, two good arms, a perfect body and one good leg, rather than merely a one-legged man."

After a rather difficult trip to Bayard on Tuesday night our boys' basketball team was beaten by the Bayard team in a well fought game. Our boys were without the service of Maroney and Sollars which partly accounts for the fact that the score was 23-9 in favor of Bayard. This will probably be our last game this year unless the challenge we have given to the highly praised Grantsville team is accepted.

Last Friday morning an entertainment was heard over the radio by Walter Damrosch's orchestra in the assembly hall and we hope to hear another similar entertainment Thursday afternoon. This entertainment was made posible through the courtesy of Elliott's Music Store.

FAIR DATES SET EARLIER; ALL OFFICERS RETAINED

Board of Directors Announces Dates of Annual Fair As September 16, 17, 18 and 19.

All officers of the Garrett County Agricultural Fair Association were re-elected and the dates of the fourteenth annual fair were decided upon at a meeting of the Board of Directors held Tuesday afternoon in the Court House. Mr. Henry M. Speicher was re-elected general manager and secretary.

The dates decided upon for holding the fair this year were those of September 16, 17, 18 and 19, which is almost two weeks earlier than the dates last year.

Those now holding office in the association include Dr. Henry W. McComas, president; C. W. Ream, Crellin, vice-president; W. G. Meyers, Oakland, treasurer.

The dates were set earlier in the hope of having more favorable weather conditions and thus assure a better turn-out on the part of the agriculturalists and other people of the county. The weather was such last year that very few people visited the fair grounds while it was generally conceded that the exhibits both in quality and number far surpassed those of any previous year.

Although Mr. Speicher has not announced definite plans concerning the fourteenth annual exhibit, the premium list will remain practically the same and the premiums awarded will positively be paid, it has been stated. There will be premiums for exhibits of all kinds of live stock, poultry, farm products, horticultural products, school work, boys' and girls' club work, household articles, domestic arts, etc., and there will also be many valuable special premiums.

The Board of Directors will remain as last year until a meeting of the stockholders of the Fair Association can be held. At present the following compose the board: G. B. M. Friend, Daniel E. Orendorf, H. L. Porter, J. W. Whorton, A. D. Naylor, William C. Welch, George D. Browning, Dr. Henry W. McComas, Guy Hinebaugh and H. A. Loraditch, Oakland; Charles W. Ream, Crellin; Samuel R. Ringer, Bert C. Scott and N. C. Sanders, Hutton; Henry P. Miller, Grantsville.

FIRE DESTROYS DWELLING HOUSE AT AURORA, W. VA.

Oakland Firemen Prevent Flames From Spreading

Fire, originating from a defective flue, entirely destroyed a residence in Aurora, W. Va., about fifteen miles south of Oakland, Saturday evening at 5:00 o'clock. The property was owned by J. Albert Shaffer, of Washington, D. C., and was a part of the Shaffer hotel when that hostelry was in operation a number of years ago.

The house destroyed contained eight rooms and was being occupied by H. B. Dougherty and family, of Aurora. The flames were discovered by a neighbor after they had burned through the roof.

The Oakland Fire Department was called immediately and by its timely arrival prevented the destruction of several adjacent homes.

The large truck of the department made the run to Aurora, a distance of fifteen miles, in eighteen minutes, according to two members of the department.

Lack of a water system at Aurora necessitated the formation of a bucket brigade which was quickly formed and the 80-gallon booster tank of the fire engine was kept full, and with this reserve the firemen kept the nearby buildings from burning.

The burned building was practically destroyed by the time the engine company reached the town. Some of the furniture on the first floor of the structure was carried out and saved. No insurance, it is said, was carried.

AGED WOMAN SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES AND OLD AGE

Miss "Becky" Miller Dies Tuesday at Dr. McComas' Home

Funeral services for Miss Rebecca Miller, 92 years of age, who died on Tuesday night at nine o'clock at the residence of Dr. H. W. McComas, were held this afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. Walter B. Brock officiating. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

Death was due to infirmities due to advancing years and the result of injuries received on Monday, January 13, when Miss Miller fell down a stairway in the McComas home, her arm being broken at the wrist and elbow and suffering other painful and serious injuries.

The deceased was born July 7, 1837, at Salisbury, Pa., and had been a resident of Oakland for much more than half a century. She resided for many years at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. McComas. She was quite active and her mind remained quite clear until the accident causing her death occurred.

Miss Miller had been connected with the West and McComas families of Garrett county from the time she left her home in Pennsylvania and came to Garrett county. She had cared for three generations of the family—Mrs. McComas, Mrs. McComas' sons and daughters and their children. One of her boasts in life was that she had seen Abraham Lincoln.

Big Corporation Useful On Crime's Highway Worrying the Burglar Education and Money

The General Electric company has perfected a device to transport electric power over longer distances at less expense. The invention, called a "thyratro," is described as a modified vacuum tube, ndapted to power transmission uses.

Some day science will "hook up" the world's great power stations of North America, Niagara, those in the Rocky mountalas, on the Columbia river, Brazil, with other great ststions in Africa and all over the world, as radio stations are now hooked up.

Then will come wireless transmission of power, so that airplaaes will he shle to "pick up power" at various points in their journey, instead of carrying tons of fuel.

The research work done hy such institutions as General Electric, United States Steel, Westinghouse, Standard Oil, etc., will give hack to the public in increased prosperity a huadred dollars for every one that those big corporntions have ever received.

This country is traveling rnpidly on the road that leads to thoroughly organized crime and complete contempt for law.

A United States grand jury reports that officials supposed to suppress the sale of drugs are organized on a "racket" basis, misrepreseating their activities to get more money from the government.

Some of them nre alleged to he narcotic addicts. The charge is suade that the big mea in the business can "buy their way out," if they get in trouble.

In the seven months past criminals and others have purchased three times as many pistols as were sold altogether in the twelve months of 1928. A big demand for killing mnchines.

Mr. Louis Pierson of New York's Irving Trust company delights in annoylag burglars. He built, far underground, helow his new fifty-story hullding, n safety vault lined with toughest steel, thick ss the ancient walls of Jerusalem. It is the higgest vnult in the world except those of our Reserve hank and the Bank of Englsnd.

Now he surrounds his steel walls with a thick layer of water, so thst the poor burglar, even if he did hreak through the heavy steel, would have to do his work in a divlag suit, most awkward for handling dynamite and drills.

Henry Ford, planning to spend one hundred millions oducating young people on his own lines, making them "fit lato life," teuching every one a trade, wants no advice.

He is right. No one knows better thsn he how to prepsre hoys for useful work. But Mr. Ford spoke hastily when he suid he wanted no advice on education from those that never earned or saved a dollar.

The world's grentest educstors have not heen money makers or savers. Aristotle, who taught Philip's son, Alexander, msde no fortune for hlluself. Alexander, conqueror of the world, spent collecting specimens for Aristotle, greatest nnturalist snd philosopher of the world, more than the total fortune left hlm by King Phillip.

Pestalozzi, Froehel, none of the great teachers, was a money maker. Ford hlmself is rich only as a hyproduct of his mechanical genius, und through no plans of his own.

Conrad Hubert, who changed his name from Horowitz, made many millions, left $6,000,000 to useful charities, left $1,000,000 to his brother.

The brother, who sticks to his old-fashioned name, Horowitz, has heen a humhle court interpreter and he says he will now devote his time to German opera and charity.

Why did the rich brother wait until he was dead to give a million dollars to his mother's other son?

Msny of us forget the proverb often quoted hy Natban Strsus:

"What you give in hesith is gold, what you give in sickness is silver, and what you give after death is lead."

Automobile mskers will spend $15,000,000 scrapping old cars to clear the way for new cars and moderste the secoad-hand car nuisnnce.

R. H. Grant, vice president of Generni Motors, one of the best salesmen in Americs, is chairman of the scrapping committee.

Perhsps Mr. Grant could find a way to shlp those old cars, knocked down, to foreign countries—China, Africa, anywhere. Ten million old cars scattered over the earth would soon create an sppetite for ten million new cars, just ns the little car creates a demand for a larger car.

An expert says that in nine years, from the end of 1920 to the end of 1029, stocks were going up 66 per cent of the time, and going down 34 per cent.

The difficulty is to pick out the time when they sre going up.

Two $50,000 speed boats, each carrying three Liherty motors, with 38 knots speed, will help hunt rum runners in New York waters.

Other fsst hoats, costing $250,000, will he put on the lakes to check rum running there.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From the Observer, Baltimore)

Democrats are still engaged In the prellminaries of their battle. The fourth termers are mustering their forces in Baltimore City where they expect to do battle with the Jackson-Curran-Blchy forces supportlng Senator McIntosh.

The Governor remains silent—talking only behind the scenes—but pulling every wire to get support. His main reliance here as in the counties is the office holders. His own appointees he can muster about to a man even though some of them do not like the idea.

Senator McIntosh has been moving around in the counties sounding out the strength of the anti-Ritchie sentiment. Thls seems to be increasing.

The Governor hints that he will make an announcement "at the proper time." That proper time is probably the time which he thinks he can visualize enough support to win both the primary and the general election. For the general election the fourth termers hold fondly to Dr. Frank Kent's pendulum theory—that the swing this year will be strongly to the Democrats and that therefore in Maryland any Democrat can win. Needless to say, Dr. Kent is a Ritchie backer, having been carefully nursed into that attitude by His Excellency through a period of years.

The anti-Ritchie people are more than anxious for the Govenor to say something. They are tired of the uncertainty and some of them are beginning to think that the Governor will back out. But the theory is that the Governor will be scared off.

While there are plenty of Republicans who think they would like to be Governor of Maryland the matter that baffles them is the inability to figure out the Democratic nominee in advance. Could there be a present assurance that Ritchie would be the nominee the number of Republican aspirants would rapidly increase. But there is among the Republicans a fear that the Democrats will finally get together on a new candidate—a man of party strength who has not been tarred with the Ritchie stick, and that, as the political sky now appears, would be fatal to the Republicans.

To date Ritchie continues the overwhelming Republican choice for the Democratic nomination just as Mayor Broening is the favorite of the Democrats.

Rallylng Jobholders
For Fourth Term

The morning paper of yesterday reports a gathering at the solarium of Gilbert A. Daily in South Baltimore to further the fourth term ambition of His Excellency. We look over the names mentioned—eleven in all. No less than ten of these eleven are on the public payroll. Then we read of an Indorsement of the fourth term at a club on North Broadway. Three names are mentioned. Two of them are office holders. And so it goes—showing that the great majority of those who indorse the fourth term do so because they are receiving pay in some form or another.

But something good may come out of the banquet scheduled for the evening of March 4 at the Southern Hotel. It is to be given by Democratic Clubs of the northern annex. The list of speakers includes former Mayor Jackson, Senator McIntosh, Governor Ritchie and Senator Tydings. This affair is apparently to be a sort of free-for-all and is not to be limited to the Governor and his backers, as was the banquet of the Concord Club. Thls even should draw a big crowd and it should be worth while to hear what Howard Jackson has to say, for it seems that he is one who has the nerve to use plain words about present conditions in the Democratic party.

O'Conor Figuring
On State Ticket

From the Eastern Shore comes word that State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor intends makIng a pilgrimage into that section of the State within the next few days with a view of discussing the political situation with the local leaders. He has been mentioned for the nomination for Attorney General on both State tickets but the understanding Is that he is most desired on the McIntosh ticket.

As for us we do not know which ticket the young State's Attorney prefers to run on and we suppose that like many others he hopes there will be only one ticket in the end and that he will be safely anchored on that.

But there is State Senator E. J. Colgan, who has also been mentioned for this place and some of the city Democrats are said to prefer him to O'Conor mainly because of his known and established independence of the Ritchie influence. He it was who got the Legislature to pass several bills giving to the State Senate the full right to act on the Governor's most important appointments only to find his work go for naught because of the Governor's veto.

Then there is Saul Praeger, of Cumberland, who has been thinking of running—in fact wants to run on the new ticket. We haven't heard anything of him lately but there is no doubt his mind is still turned that way. He is a good campaigner and good campaigners will be needed on both sides in the coming battle.

Dennis Talk Will Not Down

The talk of Judge Samuel K. Dennis for Governor simply will not be downed and one hears it every day on the streets. Those who know the situation say that the Judge could by merely assenting to becoming a candidate sweep the decks clear in a few days as it is generally admitted that Ritchie would not dare stand up against him.

Still we get no favorable word from the Judge who seems to be so well satisfied with his present position that he cannot realize the anxiety of his friends as to the outcome of the situation.

Republicans Agree
On One Point Only

About the only thing that observers of the situation in the Republican party can agree upon is that Mayor Broening is in Florida. There's no dispute about that, but every other matter is debatable just now.

One man is willing to bet ten cents that the Mayor, within ten days after his return from Florida, will announce himself a candidate for Governor. On the other hand, Republicans who claim to be well posted, express confidence that the Mayor will do nothing in advance of a conference of State leaders.

Former Senator Weller, who has been on an automobile trip to Florida, is home again and calling on those interested in politics in both parties. He does not profess to foresee the solution of the situation in the Republican party. He is not in close touch with the Mayor nor does he seem to be committed to any candidate or prospective candidate.

Many observers of independent mind are expressing the view that Albert G. Towers would be an excellent vote getter for the Republicans But whether he would go into it is another matter. Probably some of those associated in business with him would discourage the idea, and it is possible that Mr. Towers would have to be shown where the votes are expected to come from in the general election.

David A. Robb, of Allegany, was in Baltimore this week and to some of his friends he declared in plain language that he was a candidate for the Governorship and intended shortly to file his papers at Annapolis as such. This should be interesting to all other aspirants, known or unknown, for there are some who think that the first candidate in the field may start with a considerable advantage.

Mr. Robb is very strong with the dry element, while he also has many friends among those konwn, more or less, as wets. He has kept clear of any connection, direct or Indirect, with the Ritchie administration and therefore should be in the best sort of position to discuss all the campaign issues with freedom. And it is reported for him that he has a willingness to do this from end to end of Maryland.

No Lincoln Day
Banquet Held Here

For many years Abraham Lincoln's birthday was the occasion of a banquet in Baltimore, usually sponsored by a Republican club. But this year there was none at all although a very big one was held at Hagerstown. We wonder why this neglect of the Lincoln memory In Baltimore. Was it because the Mayor was out of the State or because the party members are too busy running the City Hall to think of "Old Abe."

Certainly in a year when the Republicans have so many local office holders It should have been possible to drum up a good attendance for a banquet.

Possibly it is because the Republicans no longer have any except ward clubs. There used to be the Young Men's Republican Club to sponsor such affairs but that went out long ago. Then there was the Union League Club, but that, too, now seems to have pssed out.

WHY NOT AMERICA FIRST?

Senator Walsh, of Montana, has issued a statement pointing to the proposed partial embargo on American automobiles by the French government as a retaliatory measure inspired by proposed increases of the American tariff. This explanation of French action will hardly cover, however, the attempts over a period of three years to apply a contingent or embargo system in France to American motion pictures. And it seems to overlook the fact that France has maintained whatever tariffs the government has deemed beneficial to French industry during low-tariff as well as high tariff periods in the United States. It seems to overlook the fact that an investigation by a bureau of the League of Nations shows that there are some fifty methods of handicapping imports now prevalent in the several European nations, in addition to the tariff method.

American protective tariffs are based on wage standards. They are famed not to give the American manufacturer an unfair advantage in the home market, but to prevent unfair advantage being taken of him by foreign producers who secure cheapness of commodities through lower labor costs. This justification for protective tariffs as against American commodities does not exist in European countries, since in no one of them are labor costs so high as in the United States. European tariffs are not for the protection of wage and living standards, but solely to prevent foreign competition.

While the visible balance of trade between France and the United States is in our favor, the expenditures of American tourists in France pulls down the scale heavily in favor of France. That is to say much more American money is spent every year in France than French money in the United States.

American motion pictures and motor cars are popular in France, not because they have been made cheap by cheap labor, but because of better organization, greater technical skill and above all a huge home market have resulted in the creation of commodities the French people prefer to the home market. Such importations do not represent any unfair advantage taken of the French producer. Both motion pictures and motor cars have long been on the free list in the United States, but this has not prevented American motor cars and motion pictures from paying heavy tariffs at French ports.

The idea that American tariffs should be made to further the interests of alien rather than of domestic producers seems to have taken strong root in the minds of some American legislators, and the result of this is that store shelves in the United States crowded with foreign wares have their corresponding phenomenon in widespread unemployment of Americans who would otherwise be employed in producing these articles. Americans may be a bit dense, but they are unable to see how such a program as this gets them anything but the impairment of the American standards of wages and living. They have also the old fashioned idea that the protection of these standards, rather than the promotion of activity in industrial centers across the sea, is the first duty of American statesmanship.

We have entirely too much preaching in the United States of the idea that American prosperity should be endangered to purchase foreign good will; that American security should be jeopardized in order that peace may be underwritten in Europe through our involvement in the European political system; that the United States should be so conducted as to promote the general welfare of the world even if at the sacrifice of American welfare. It is not too early to begin thinking of the American government as an instrumentality for the general welfare and the common defense of the American people.

At Cleveland, bandits stole a police car, parked in front of the Central Police Station, and used it to aid in a holdup shortly after it was stolen.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Because people had for a long time been compelled to use stale keg butter at a high price, agitation was started in The Republican for the establishment of a creamery in Oakland where good butter, cheese and other dairy products would be made.

Because the residents of Oakland were compelled to walk considerable distances along the town streets in darkness because of the inadequacy of the kerosene lamps placed at long intervals, The Republican suggested that the Town Council, at its next meeting, endeavor by liberal inducements interest some company or a body of citizens to form a corporation for the purpose of building and equipping an electric light plant so that the streets and buildings of town could be adequately illuminated.

Ground was examined by an eastern business man for the purpose of securing a site on which to build a large tannery. The John Helbig property, upon which there was then a small tannery in operation, was examined and the visitor expressed himself as being well pleased with it.

George M. Mason contemplated the erection of a large steam flouring mill. His expressed intention was to purchase the mill then owned by H. A. Rasche on Water street, tear it down and put in its place a larger and more convenient building and install in it the latest improved machinery for the manufacture of flour.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Stuart F. Hamill returned to Oakland from a brief visit to Johnstown and Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sixteen couples enjoyed the hospitality of Dr. and Mrs. Mahlon C. Hinebaugh, who entertained at their residence during the week. Progressive flinch was enjoyed by those present.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rasche returned to their residence in Oakland from a visit with relatives in Unlontown.

Lieut. E. S. West, who had on former occasions entertained the members of the Knights of Pythias with his illustrated lectures on the Far East, proposed to give further entertainment at the meeting of the lodge on Friday night.

Mr. Scott T. Jones, cashier of the Garrett National Bank of Oakland, delivered an address on March 5 to the pupils of Piedmont High School. Commenting, The Republican said: "Mr. Jones is one of the strongest speakers of Western Maryland and his address will be along business lines."

Marriage licenses were issued to Charles Russell Durst, New Germany, and Myrtle Fitzwater, Swanton; Charles William Warnick and Sarah M. DeWitt, both of near Bloomington, and Joseph Francis Sharpless and Almeda Stewart, both of Garrett county.

An Interesting Fact.

The First Woman Suffragist

The farther one delves into Maryland history, the more forceably it appears that the state was founded and governed by men of exceptional ability and foresight, who did not hesitate to cut the red tape of custom and precedent and strike out along original lines. Centuries afterwards these acts of the early forefathers are recalled through amendments to the state constitution and laws passed by camparatively recent Legislatures.

The first authentic reference we have been able to find of a woman being appointed sole executrix of an estate is that of the first Governor of Maryland, Leonard Calvert, who died on June 9, 1647, by his last will and testament made his kinswoman, Margaret Brent, sole executrix, under the brief instructions to "take all and pay all." Not only was she sole executrix of the estate, but subsequently acting attorney in the settlement of the Proprietary's estate, and as such she appeared before the General Assembly of the Province in 1648, and requested to have the right to vote in the House and also to speak. This request was denied by the Governor (Thomas Greene), to which action Mrs. Brent violently protested.

Mrs. Brent, together with her sister Mary and two brothers, arrived at St. Mary's in 1638 and took out a patent for property known as the "Sisters Freehold," near St. Mary's City. She was extremely active, both in the management of the estate of the Proprietary and her own property, and at the same time taking great interest in the affairs of government.

Her action in demanding to speak and vote in the General Assembly and her great interest and activity in governmental management, are reasons why she is frequently referred to as "the first woman suffragist." It was 273 years later, in 1920, that Maryland passed an Act enabling women to register and vote.

Without making any invidious suggestion, the first reference we find to the women of Maryland is in regard to the landing, presumably off St. Clement's Island, when history says that "the mades which were brought along" upset the boat, which seems to indicate that at that early time they were somewhat restless and nervous.

Beyond the County

At Seattle, a woman, although living alone in squalor in a small cottage for many years, was found to possess $90,000 in cash, stocks and bonds, when search was made of her home after she was removed to a sanitarium.

At Juneau, Alaska, not having experienced below zero weather for five years, was totally unprepared to fight a continuous snow fall of three days, the city finding only 12 shovels available at the hardware stores.

At Cleveland, in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, spoken words were placed in "electric storage" four and a half seconds, then passed into a man's body in high voltage waves and finally transmitted from the man thru a finger into the ear of another man.

James Baker, 25, held in Detroit, has confessed to killing by poison, 9 persons, giving as a reason that killing "gives me a funny sort of mental satisfaction." His confession is not believed, as one of his "victims" has been found alive.

At Washington, D. C., a traveling salesman, parked his car in front of a business house and when he returned found that his automobile had been rifled of all his sample shoes. The thief could get but little satisfaction as the shoes were all for the left foot.

In Arizona, Eva Dugan, convicted of the slaying of A. J. Mathias in 1927 and sentenced to death, was hanged last week, being the first woman to pay the death penalty in that state, six women witnessing the execution. She was the 26th woman to be hanged in the U. S.

In 1929 more than 3,246,200 automobiles were sold on the time payment plan. These cars were handled by 400 finance firms which advanced more than $1,506,000,000 for the purchases.

At Baltimore, a triple street car crash occurred, owing to fog, when two of the cars crashed and while workmen were inspecting the wreck a third train loomed out of the fog, crashing into the rear end of the second train, killing two and putting 46 other passengers in the hospital, Monday morning.

On last Monday, Charles Evans Hughes, appointed by President Hoover to succeed William Howard Taft, resigned on account of serious illness, took the solemn oath of office and became the eleventh in the succession of Chief Justice since John Jay, in 1789.

On Monday of this week, Ex-President Coolidge received a letter warning him that a gunman had arrived at Los Angeles, with the intention of taking his life, which letter was delivered by local police to be the work of a crank.

In Wisconsin, eleven persons were killed and over one hundred injured when two trains running in opposite directions struck an automobile at a grade crossing.

At St. Louis, the family of Charles W. Pershall, wealthy grocer and banker, kidnapped for ransom last week, obtained his release by paying $40,000 to his kidnapers, bringing the total payment in four recent kidnapings in that city to $113,000.

It is stated that in the United States 97 tons of dope—marijuana, heroin, cocaine, morphine and opium—are manufactured and distributed when three tons only are needed for legitimate medical purposes.

Maryland included, ten states reduced infant mortality during the year 1928, this state having 80 deaths under one year of age to every 1000 live births.

FOREST PRESERVATION IS DISCUSSED AT CIVIC CLUB

prosperity that goes with it we must become a nation of wood growers.

"The biggest mistake made in the lumbering of the past was that no provisions were made for forest renewal. A forest is more than a collection of trees. It is not merely a wood storehouse. It is a wood factory, a water reservoir, a fish hatchery, a game refuge and a wild flower preserve. All these in one the forest truly is.

"The houses in which we live are the gift of trees, if not in whole, at least in a large part. Another gift is paper, which carries the printed word into our homes and our schools. These two products, home and paper, underlie the standards of American life today, because they stand for home life and intellectual progress. When the forests disappear the cost of home building goes up and the standards of living decline. When the cost of paper rises opportunities to advance intellectually becomes lessened.

"One of the most important questions before a great industry is the production of paper on which newspapers are printed. Newsprint is a forest product. It is made from pulpwood, requiring sixteen acres of sprue trees to make the paper for one Sunday edition of a metropolitan newspaper. The paper manufacturers, so experts say, make in four years paper which if placed in a strip the width of a newspaper would be long enough to reach to the sun and back. You have seen the cost of print paper go up This is due to the increased cost of pulp wood because of the diminishing supply. These are essential to our playtime and our worktime.

"We have built from the harvest of abundant forests provided by nature, but are we going to leave our children a land made treeless by us? This question of maintaining our forests isn't some far-off question interesting only to lumbermen and the forestry service, but it is a problem that concerns the whole people. But we must also learn that conservation does not mean no use of trees, but wise use. In forestry that destruction is vital. The forest that grows old, decays and dies is not serving mankind. It is like a field of wheat that passes its harvest time and dying serves no purpose.

"Wise use at all times is the goal of forestry. We are a rapidly increasing nation. An increase in population means an increasing use for wood. Our only way out of the problem of supplying a continually increasing demand that is being made upon a continually decreasing forest is to put every available acre of land to growing trees. It is claimed that at the rate we are using lumber that by 1950 we may have an area of idle land larger than New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and all the Northeastern States. But they also say that right here is where the women's clubs can do good work. With more and more women thinking about these things, higher and higher mounts public opinion that surely is going to bring a national forest policy.

"When a bill was introduced in New York in regard to forestry protection, an attorney who is supporting the bill, said that our recent Mississippi floods were due in a large measure to the lack of forest growth about its headwaters. Unless we can do something, he said, farms that once were fertile will become useless owing to the lowering of the water level beneath the surface.

"An interesting story comes to us from France. America is accused of causing the floods in Paris and the destruction of her farm crops in some sections of that country. Why, you may ask. The charges made are that because America has cut most of its hardwood trees it must go far afield for such lumber. They have gone to France we are told, and bought from the French private land owners.

"Forests are to our streams what the storage battery is to the wire. Take away the battery and the wire is dead. Rain falls and the drops are broken up by the leaves into a mist. This settles on the soft bed of dead leaves under the trees. These leaves, like a cloth, have the power to hold water, and the moisture reaches the soil beneath. This is called the mineral soil because it is made by the gradual wearing of rocks of many kinds which took more years than we can count.

"This water held by the leaves works slowly down through the cracks and crevices. There it meets other little streams and joins other rivulets and in time forms the streams and rivers we have underground. They become our springs which feed the rivers. When the forest is gone this is all changed. The hot sun beats on the leaves. They dry up and are blown away. The rock underneath becomes baked. The rain falls, runs off the ground, joins other streams and wears gullies and ruts as it washes down, carrying soil with it.

"If the forest had been there the soaking process of the water would retard the draining and by taking large quantities of water underground would delay its passage to the streams thereby reducing the flood danger. Snow melts more slowly in the forest, the ground does not freeze so hard, and such great quantities of water are not sent all at once into the rivers and streams. When we see the ruins of once busy towns, it is the revenge of the river for what man has done to the forest.

"We still have millions of acres of forest left. We are using them rapidly. Not to use them would be unwise, because their products are necessary to use. But using them wastefully, allowing them to burn, failing to protect the young trees, these are things that should be overcome. In a word, an ideal picture of our future forests would show all the land that should be growing forests, doing that work. It would present forests of varying sizes protected by a national vigilance against fires. It would disclose a nation awake to the importance of the forests, to their needs and to their careful use. This is a goal that can be reached by teamwork.

"There is a song that says 'Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more.' There is satisfaction for the individual who has aided in one way or another in a good cause. We must protect our forests, for wood is closely linked with all we revere and hold dear in our American history.

Made of Wood.

The ships hard fought by John Paul Jones,
The rails that Lincoln split;
Brave freedom's huts at Valley Forge,
The synonym of grit;
Mount Vernon's halls and columned porch
Where Washington once stood;
America these mean to us,
And all were made of wood.

The musket butt the Minute Man
Pressed hard to sturdy shoulder;
The high stockade of Dan Boone's fort
That thwarted redskin murder;
The ramrod Molly Pitcher snatched,
All red with loyal blood;
America these mean to us,
And all were made of wood.

The staff that held Fort Moultrie's flag,
By gallant Jasper raised;
Bold Perry's fleet from forest hewed
That doomed a foe amazed;
The wagon trains that won the west
And every fear withstood;
America these mean to us,
And all were made of wood.

The pines that clothe the southern plains,
The big trees of the West;
The Douglas fir on Cascade's slopes,
The spruce o' the Rockies' crest;
The white pine of New England's hills,
The hemlocks on Mount Hood;
America these mean to us,
Pride, beauty, wealth, in wood.

PRESTON IS GIVEN SIX YEARS IN ASSAULT CASE

Frostburg Youth Sentenced for Crime Against 16-Year Old Garrett County Farm Girl

Bernard Preston, 21-year-old Frostburg youth, was sentenced to six years in the Maryland Penitentiary Monday morning in the Circuit Court at Cumberland by Judge Albert A. Doub.

Preston was convicted by a jury in the current term of assault with intent to commit a statutory offense and of having carnal knowledge of a girl of 16. The prosecuting witness was Miss Ethel Rosenberger, daughter of a Garrett county farmer. The assault took place last July at a point bordering the National Highway a few miles east of Grantsville, and Enoch Piunkett, who was also accused and fonnd guilty of a like crime upon the person of Miss Rosenberger, was sentenced in the Garrett County Circuit Court at the December Term, to serve twenty-one years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Only Preston's aged mother, Mrs. Hannah Preston, and his sister, were in court. Both were weeping when they came into the court room. Miss Preston gave way completely as Sheriff Harvey took the party down in the elevator to the county jaii. Crying loudly the sister embraced her brother who was taken to Baltimore Monday night.

Prisoner Had Been in Hospital

Preston was brought to court from Memorial Hospital, where he had been confined since February 1 with Malta fever. A certificate was given Sheriff Harvey to the effect by County Physician W. F. Williams.

In passing sentence the court spokc at length, saying that Preston's previous good record, attested to by numerous letters from responsible persons in Frostburg, and the fact that he was intoxicated at the time of the crime, had some effect in the court in determining the sentence imposed upon the prisoner.

The court also said that it had known Mrs. Preston for many years but that it was not within the power of the court to grant a parole. The court pointed out that with twelve months off for good behavior, the sentence could be reduced to five years.

Attorney Makes Plea

Edward J. Ryan, who, with William R. Offutt, of Oakland, was counsel for Preston, addressed the court briefly.

Mr. Ryan told the court that he had little hope that anything he could say would alter the decision which the court had arrived at after long deliberation, but called attention to the fact that the mother and sister were dependent upon the young man for support and that he had previously had a good record.

Before passing sentence the court said that it did not want any member of the bar to feel that nothing counsel could say would be considered by the court. Every consideration was given to the traverser as well as to the safety of soclety, the court concluded.

State's Attorney Williiam A. Huster who assisted State's Attorney J. C. Renninger, of Garrett county, in the prosecution of the case, was also present, but did not address the court. Mr. Renninger was not present at the time sentence was passed being detained in Oakland by a press of official duties.

MT. LAKE PARK

It has been well said that editing a weekly paper in a small community, consists of ten percent of inspiration and ninety percent perspiration. This is not owing entirely to the lack of happenings which, if reported, would appeal to a large class of readers, but to the discrimination which the editor must exercise over the items which appear in nis paper. This discrimination becomes doubly important in connties whose total population is very much less than many of the cities of the state. News items that could be printed with impunity ln the larger dailies, must, with possible reluctance, be discarded and thrown into the waste basket by the editor of the county weekly.

The citizens of the smaller communities are so closely knit with ties of friendship and kinship that what affects the individual affects the whole, and "affairs" happening in neighborhoods where we are all friends and relatives,—items that would be sensational front page news in the dailies—must be locked within the breast of the reporter and editor. We often wonder what would happen if the editor told ali he knows.

The mystery of the numerous turkey dinners at a residence in Pleasant Valley has been solved by the Solstice Club. It appears that Mr. E. O. Liller was keeping a 35-pound tom turkey as the headman of his flock, which, on account of his vigorous growth, demanded much food. One morning Mr. Liller was leaving the barn, the temporal residence of old Tom, with a tin pail in his hand. The bird, thinking that his master was carrying cracked corn, stuck his head through the door opening just as Mr. Liller slamed it shut. What happened to the turkey's neck when it came in contact with the sliding door was the reason for the dinners.

Capt. J. A. Hayden, who has been ill for the past several weeks, is so far recovered that he was able to celebrate his eighty-eighth birthday and the one hundred and ninety-eighth birthday of Washington, by inviting a few of his older friends to spend the evening with him last Saturday. He further celebrated the occasion by taking a walk on the streets of the Park on Monday.

Mr. O. J. Schooley, one of the older highly respected residents of the Park, who has been ill at his home for the past few months, is resting easier.

Mr. Wiley Welling, who was confined to his home for a few days, is again able to be at his work.

Mut Ready spent a few days with his parents at the Park.

Mr. MacCleliand Clayton, who, together with Mrs. Clayton are spending the winter in Fairmont with the mother of the latter, was at the Park Monday on business.

Mr. C. A. Oswell made a short visit to New York, where Mrs. Oswell and his daughter, Miss Harriett, are spending the winter months.

Misses Neile and Helen Walker, who have been visitors at the Park for the past ten days, have returned to their home at Canton, Ohio.

The Loch Lynn election for councilmen will take place next Monday between the hours of one and six in the afternoon. While some talk is still heard about an independent ticket to be placed in the field, as yet it has not crystalized.

Councilman A. L. Biggs and wife have returned from a few days' visit to Cumberland.

The ladies of the U. B. church held an all-day old fashioned quilting party in the Ladies' Aid hall yesterday. Lunch was served. One man, a well recognized authority on food consumption, was present.

The chicken dinner, to be given by the auxiliary for the benefit of the Boy Scouts, in Oakland, on the evening of March 4, promises to be well patronized by Park people.

U. S. BUILDING HIGHER LIVING PLANE BY BROADER OBJECTIVES

Walter S. Gifford, Bell Telephone System Head, Thinks Modern Conception of Country's Prosperity Is That Well Being Shall Be of the People, By the People and For the People

Walter S. Gifford

Prosperity is a modern watchword. Recent events have served to focus public attention to an unusual degree upon the immediate future of business. Commenting on this phase of prosperity, Walter S. Gifford. President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, recently said to the Chicago Association of Commerce:

"At such times when perhaps the present is too much with us, it seems to me to be helpful to take a long look backward and a long look forward. By doing so we can refresh our minds on the sources of our national wealth and the prospects for continued economic progress in spite of any temporary maladjustments which may momentarily obscure the horizon."

This country today, Mr. Gifford stated, enjoys an average standard of living far higher than that which obtains in any other country at present or any country at any time known to history. This condition is often ascribed to the country's boundless natural resources.

These resources are important, but in trying to fashion a true picture, it is worthwhile to remember that all of these natural resources were here before the Civil War, and at that time there was no stream of foreign observers landing on this country's shores to discover the secrets of its prosperity.

The country had, it is true, made use of the land, cut from the forests, mined coal, iron and precious metals, set up some manufactories and built up a prosperity well beyond that of the Colonial period.

But the possession of natural resources is not a guarantee of well being nor prosperity. Natural resources are but tools for man to use to reach the goal of his ambitions. Other nations have had natural resources, but power and well-being of the nations which stand out in history have rested largely upon treasure from conquered territories.

Today in this country the civilization that the United States is building up is of a different sort. It is not dependent upon subjugation of other nations or tribute from them. It is being built upon sounder and more permanent foundations. Its economic objective is as broad as its political objective.

The modern conception of the country is that well-being as well as government shall be of the people, by the people and for the people.

Following this line of thought President Gifford announced that the Bell Telephone System, of which he is the head, will spend over $700,000,000 in 1930 for plant extensions, additions and betterments to the telephone systems serving the United States.

To illustrate the type of progress made by the telephone industry, he called attention to the invention of the telephone by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell a little more than fifty years ago. In the relatively short time which has elapsed since human speech was first transmitted electrically, Mr. Gifford said that the telephone business has been so organized and developed in the United States that today practically any body, anywhere, can talk at any time of the day or night to anybody else, anywhere else—not only in the United States, but in Mexico, Cuba, Canada, and the most of Europe.

The ability to render a service of this magnitude rests upon a nationalized organization employing over 450,000 American men and women, operating physical properties representing an investment of $4,000,000,000 which are owned by more than 500,000 stockholders.

Constant improvements are still being made in the scope, speed and accuracy of telephone service, Mr. Gifford stated, and new methods of operation which permit of greater economy are being devised.

In this industry the ultimate limit of progress seems to be as far away as ever. Only a short time ago a new service was inaugurated—telephoning to ships at sea. Insofar as scientific knowledge is concerned, the Bell Telephone system has already conquered space and time so that it is possible technically to establish instantaneous communication between any two persons anywhere in the world, he either person or both on land, on the sea, or in the air.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Gifford said, "it is already scientifically but not commercially practicable for each telephone user to see the person with whom he is talking, but greater scientific knowledge, as previously indicated, does not always make a new discovery practicable."

AN ARTIFICIAL DISCOURSE

[Dermenti Photograph]

Sergius, P. Grace, Assistant Vice-President of the Bell Telephone Laboratories in addressing the Richmond, Va., Chamber of Commerce recently, was agreeably surprised and pleased to have aa a member of the audience A. C. Mahon, one of the 100 men in this country who use the artificial larynx, a development of the telephone laboratories. In speaking of the value of this instrument Mr. Mahon was quoted in the Richmond News-Leader as saying:

"When I lost my voice three years ago following my operation, it was necessary for me to communicate with people by writing. This was so unsatisfactory that I began looking around for some instrument whereby I could regain my voice. At this time the Bell Laboratories invented the artificial larynx which I have been using since its invention, with remarkable success."

During the demonstration Mr. Grace and Mr. Mabon carried on a conversation, both using the artificial larynges.

Gasoline and Blossoms

JUNE KENNEDY firmly believed that love should be the tempestuous element of one's existence—with thrills, heartaches, moonlight nights and stolen kisses. She craved story book illusions and a fairy prince. But with Bill Bailey constantly in her background there seemed small prospect for glamourous enchantment in her love world. Steady, prosaic Bill who managed a service station and who was as unromantic as his name and occupation.

But the Fairy Prince did come. Not in gorgeous trappings nor with pomp and ceremony. He simply took a job at one of the linotype machines in the composing room of the same newspaper where June worked. She first glimpsed him while she waited for her street car. He sat with his back to the plate glass window and she noted with esthetic delight how the April sun deepened the shadows in his dark hair and brought into cameo relief the perfection of his features. One day he seemed to sense her interest, for he turned his head and June thrilled and blushed at the flashing smile—the eloquent glance from brown eyes.

She discovered that the man of her dreams—for so she called him in her thoughts—was more prosperous than the usual run of newspaper mechanics. From her window in the classified ads she had seen him park a sport roadster of expensive make when he came to work and the way he looked the car over and pocketed the keys indicated ownership. His clothes, too, had a careless elegance lacking in Bill Bailey's ready-mades.

June suddenly acquired the habit of going home for lunch—and this gave her two daily opportunities for wordless greeting with her knight of the window. One noon he smiled as usual—then made a quiet expressive gesture which she interpreted as a signal to wait for him.

A few excited moments passed for June. She wondered what they would talk about—for surely he meant that he was coming out. She watched him set a few more lines and pick up the hot type slugs from his machine. Then he disappeared into a back room. Presently a gangling youth with a smudge of ink on his chin came from the composing room and handed her a note.

"Van Ostrand told me to give you this," he said and left without further remarks.

June saw at a glance that it had been set up on the machine and the letters were slightly smudged.

"Dear Miss Kennedy," she read; "you see I have found out who you are—but I prefer to call you Blue Eyes. I have been dreaming dreams and seeing visions since your smiles came into my life—but, alas!—I have little hope of their materialization. I fear, Blue Eyes—we speak a different language. But you are very lovely—and lovable.

"I shall be sad until you smile at me, Blue Eyes. But if you never wait again outside my window—my yesterdays will still mirror your sweetness—my tomorrows never be as dark.

"Hopelessly yours,
"Van."

June had just finished reading this puzzling communication when Jim Stillwell, the editor, came up.

"Jim," she asked, "what kind of a fellow is Van Ostrand?"

Stillwell regarded her curiously.

"A prince if you ask me! Steady as a clock—college education—no bad habits. His folks are well to do ranchers near Pendelton. No money worries and no wife—but it's sure tough luck!"

"Why, what do you mean?" gasped June; "with all those advantages I'd say he was decidedly lucky!"

"Money and jobs aren't everything, June," commented Stillwell, glancing hastily at his watch and moving on—"Van's a deaf mute—and—"

A raucous blast drowned the rest of his sentence as Bill Bailey rattled up to the curb in a service car. June stared at Bill as if she were seeing him for the first time in her life. Good old Bill in his greasy coveralls.

"Hop in!" commanded Bill. He was like that. "Thirty minutes yet before the whistle."

June hopped. She also snuggled as close as the horn and traffic rules would permit. Bill was redolent of gasoline—but somehow it was more pleasing to her senses than the lotus blossoms of her dreams.

"Bill, there's lots of tragedy in life, isn't there? One day we dream dreams and see visions—the next day there's nothing but broken fancies and—"

"Aw, June—how do you get that way?" interrupted Bill with a cheerful grin. "There's always me! And there's a ring in Upton's jewelry store that will knock you for a row. Want to see it, honey?"

"Bill," replied June, very earnestly, "there is such a thing as the psychological moment—and I guess you grabbed it. Let's go look at that ring!"

Increases Egg Production

Quartz glass is installed in the windows of a henhouse in England so that the ultra violet rays will induce hiddy to lay more eggs. Tests have shown that the process of incubation is thus speeded up. When a quartz mercury arc giving off ultra violet rays was used in an incubator 20 per cent of the eggs were hatched from 24 to 48 hours sooner than other eggs treated by the rays.

The Value of Appointments

Some local Democrats have been wondering concerning the following: It took President Hoover just eight hours to appoint Charles Evans Hughes Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the highest and most responsible position in the nation with the exception of that of President. Governor Ritchie of Maryland has been several months in making the appointment of a member of the Garrett County School Board and he hasn't completed the job yet.

According to the importance of the two positions, how long, therefore, would it have taken Governor Ritchie to make the appointment of Chief Justice had he been nominated and elected President?

The answer is something that would probably cause the wonderment of one's grandchildren's children, for it would be that long at least.

Wants To Come Home.

A cable message from three Oakland musketeers who are on their sojourn in Cuba has the following to say:

"Dear Scoop:—We happened to pick up The Republican at the International news stand down here and regardless of wine, women and song, we got so homesick that it was painful. When we return from this trip we sure are going to stick to Oakland and Garrett county for at least a year."

They only get two weeks' vacation each twelve months.

By a special apparatus they were able to send along a photograph. It shows Reeves Blandford on a deserted island down there waiting for the return trip. He sang a couple of solos to a company of dusky mermaids and they had their chief gazaboo to hornswoggle him for a few days.

Colonel Bell Again Busy

Due to the activities of candidates of the coming civic political campaign, Colonel Bell has become extremely busy with his camera in recent days and is scouring the streets of Oakland in search of almost anything. His only worthwhile picture of the week, however, was that of Monk Stemple, whom he caught making a stump campaign speech in the seventeenth ward of the sixth precinct of District No. 14. He advocates lowering the sidewalks and giving plumbers more leisure while on duty.

Roadside Development

With the comiug of improved highways and the stimulation to home improvement which this has brought about, there has been a demaud for improvement iu the altogether too prevalent uukept couditiou of the public roadside. Some states are giving special attentiou to this problem, and have well organized departments for lookiug after the project.

Marylaud has an excellent system of roads and while it is difficult to develop nnd maintain adequate highways to take care of the heavy traffic, the matter of improviug the appearance of the roadsides should not be ueglected. All forward looking citizens should be interested in this subject, and pressure should be brought to bear on the legislators to induce them to undertake this important improvement.

Facts and Figures on Your Telephone

By EDWIN F. HILL

Edwin F. Hill

A siugle pebble hasu't auy value. It is just a small stoue. But take a truck load of pebbles, biud them together iu a mixture of saud, cemeut aud water, aud behold, a substauce stroug enough to support the weight of massive buildiugs or to withstaud the pouudiug shocks of heavy, highway traffic.

A siugle telephone, like the pebble, is not of great value. It is just au iustrumeut. Add auother aud biud them together with wire counectious aud two pople talk with each other. As other telephoues are installed, the value aud usefulness of the service iucreases. This service makes each commuuity a more useful part of the State, natiou or world.

Iu Marylaud, Virgiuia, West Virgiuia and the District of Columbia, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephoue Compauies now operate 618,700 telephones. Last year 34,232 telephoues were added to the system iu this area, which was the greatest iucrease iu auy year iu the companies' history, officials say.

Teu years ago telephone users in this area made unuually about 607,000,000 local and more thau 14,300,000 toll calls. Officials of the compauy state that more thau a billiou local telephone counectious were established during 1929. Out-of-town calls iucreased to about 35,000,000 or 144 per ceut.

Hid $5,000 Policy in Telephone Book

Telephoue directories, as everyone knows who uses the telephoue, aud most people do, are the source of much valuable iuformatiou. Directories contaiu important facts ou how to use the telephoue, what to do iu emergeucies necessitatiug calliug the firemau, the policemau or the ambulance, how to make out-of-towu calls, how to report telephoues out of order aud mauy other thiugs of a useful uature.

But the telephoue directory is certaiuly uot a satisfactory substitute for a safe-deposit box. Just receutly a case was reported to telephoue officials where a directory supervisor happeued to see a recovered book which buiged larger thau he thought the issue warranted. His curiosity beiug uroused, he opeued the directory and discovered a folder which was fouud to be a life iusurauce policy for $5,000.

Doiug a little sleuthing, the telephoue mau discovered the address of the house from which the directory had beeu collected and ou goiug there fouud that the policy had beeu issued to a son of the telephone subscriber. The son had died a few weeks previously aud his parents, it turned out, had knowu uothing of the policy, so that its returu was very much like a gift of $5,000.

Lesson for March 2

JESUS TEACHING ABOUT HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.

GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Great Helper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Lord's Testimony Concerning Himself.

I. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of heart of the people, four classes of bearers ure described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like Johu the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2), but was somewhat perplexed as to the mauuer of the establishmeut of the kiugdom. The Baptist had iu his preachiug mainly emphasized the liue of prophecy which made the King to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said that the ax is laid uuto the root of the tree aud that there was to be a separation of the chaff from the wheat aud a burniug of the chaff. John saw Christ as the oue who would remove the sins of the people by the sheddiug of His blood (John 1:29), but he failed to see the interval betweeu the time of His sufferiug aud the time of His triumph.

2. Violent hearers (vv. 12-19).

These were willing to receive the kiugdom uccordiug to their owu way, but were uuwilliug to conform to its laws. They seized it with violent hands. They would uot repeut when called upon to do so by John, uor rejoice to do so wheu called upou by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted uubelievers (vv. 20-24).

In Chorazin, Bethsaida aud Capernaum, Christ had done most of His mighty works, but the people deliberately set their hearts against Him and His message. Tyre aud Sidon were filled with immoral profligates aud idolators, but they will be more tolerably dealt with iu the Day of Judgment thau will those who wilfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30).

There were some umoug the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. They believed that Jesus was the Messiah and opeued their hearts to receive Him.

II. The Antagonism to Jesus (ch. 12).

Iu chapter eleveu we saw the shameful indifference of the Jews to their King. In this chapter we see the positive and bitter antagonism manifesting itself against Him. The immediate occasion of their wicked determiuatiou was Christ's reiutiou to the Sabbath.

1. The Sou of Man is Lord of the Sabhuth (vv. 1-8).

The hungry disciples were pluckiug corn ou the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Christ replied, uud showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve mau's highest interests aud to contribute to bis happiness.

(1) He is greater thau their greatest King, David (vv. 3, 4). (2) He is greater thau their sacrifice aud priesthood (v. 5). (3.) He is greater thau the temple (v. 6). The temple, with its gorgeous rites aud ceremouies, was but typical of Himself. (4) He is greater thau the Sabbath (v. 9), for He is the very Lord of the Sabbath.

2. Healing the withered huud (vv. 9-14).

Iu order that they might accuse Him, they asked, "Is it lawful to heal ou the Sabbath days?" Jesus' reply was both a questiou and a declaration.

3. The unpardonable siu (vv. 22-32).

The occasiou of their blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was the castiug out of the demou. In this act, Christ displayed His power to cast out demous. The effect of this miracle was twofold: (1) Upon the multitude. They were amazed, aud cried out, "Is uot this the sou of David?" (2) Upou the Pharisees. Wheu they heard what the people were sayiug, their auger aud satauic malice were aroused. They said He was castiug out demous by the priuce of the demous. With uuanswerable logic, He met their accusatious aud demauded decisiou. He charged home upou them their awful guilt. They bad attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is uo pardon.

Tha Last Step Wins

It is the last step that wins, aud there is no place iu the pilgrim's progress where so mauy daugers lurk as the regiou that lies hard by the portals of the celestial city. It is wheu heaven's heights ure full iu view that hell's gate is most persisteut aud full of deadly peril.—A. B. Simpsou.

Stability and Sincerity

Stability aud sincerity go together. A true Christiau will hasteu from wroug.—John Timothy Stoue.

A Man's Hat and Coat

By MARY CARROLL

(Copyright)

WHEN it first happened Laura thought that they ought to call off the club meeting. With little sister Pausy and herself so upset that they couldn't even cut the bread for the sandwiches straight, how were they going to be able to act as hostesses for the Book club that night? But after talking to the president of the club over the telephone Laura reluctantly changed her mind.

"Something really rather upsetting has happened," she said, with an air of mystery. "Especially upsetting to poor little Pansy, though I'm nervous enough over it, goodness knows."

"Poor little Pansy" was a rather beautiful young woman of twenty-five who lived alone with her maiden sister, some ten years her senior.

"You'll just have to have the meeting," Kate Jones, the president of the club, insisted, "unless, of course, it is physically impossible. Everyone is expecting to be there and we couldn't reach every one now. We're going to have theatrical charades—going to act out the names of great actors or plays—and your house is so nice for charades, with the wide double doors and the large drawing rooms."

Pausy appeared rather pale and listless that evening, while Laura, who was clearly excited, showed cheeks that flamed with color.

The charade progressed smoothly enough, the members of the club dividing themselves into four groups, each one of which presented some distinguished actor, living or dead. The group of which Kate Jones was leader had chosen Richard Mansfield. "Rich" was easy enough and "ard" would be rendered by a cockney Englishman trying to say hard. For the last name "field" was easy enough, and for the first syllable they would just need a man's hat or coat.

"No use searching here," said Kate. "There never was a man in the family, or at least not for ever so long. But I'll just run to one of the neighbors. I guess Professor Lane next door, would be glad enough to let me have his hat."

So Kate hurried to the Lanes. But the house was closed. So she went to the next house. The first knock at the old-fashioned brass knocker brought a prepossessing man to the door.

"I have come on a strange errand," said the thoroughly substantial Kate. "We are having a club meeting and are doing charades. We need a man's hat or coat. Would you lend us one?"

"I'll lend you both," said the young man, somewhat amused.

The charade was entirely successful. True, Laura looked surprised when Kate appeared in a derby and ulster. "I wonder where she got the man's hat and coat?" she said, which gave her the clew she needed to guessing the charade.

It was some minutes after the last guest had departed, and Laura and Pansy were straightening up before going to bed. Pansy had just come upon the derby and ulster when the telephone called Laura.

"I'm awfully sorry," came Kate's voice, "but I forgot to return the man's hat and coat I borrowed. I got them at the house just beyond Professor Lane's. Would you mind seeing that they get back?" And she hung up.

"The house beyond the Lanes'," Laura repeated, looking blankly into the receiver. "Why, Pansy—that hat and coat—they must belong to—to—"

"Not to—" and Pansy went even paler than she had been the rest of the evening.

After Laura had made Pansy take a cup of black coffee they talked the matter over. First Laura insisted that she would go alone, and then it was agreed that it would look better if they went together. There was hardly a chance that "he" would come to the door.

But "he" did come to the door—Philip Cummings Hunter himself.

"Your hat and ulster," Laura said.

"Oh, I didn't think we'd see you," —Laura was protesting, but somehow Philip Hunter contrived to get his neighbors into the living room. And in a marvelously short time, considering, he had persuaded Laura as well as Pansy that he hadn't really been to blame at all. Pansy and he had been engaged four years ago and then there was a misunderstanding. Then he went away and had not written because he thought Pansy loved some one else. He had come back that day for the first time in four years to try and win her back.

The terrible thing that had so shaken Laura's nerves was the event that morning of Laura and Pansy's seeing Philip return as they walked out to do the morning's ordering.

"And to think I borrowed a hat and coat from Pansy's future husband," said Kate, later, though she never did find out to her own satisfaction just what the excitement was all about.

What makes The Republican

Garrett County's most widely read and leading newspaper?

An Editorial from last Thursday's Issue of The Republican relates some of the features which are outstanding in raising the subscription list to its present high mark.

As The Republican passes another milestone and begins its fifty-fourth year of continuous existence, it continues to lead the field in Garrett county in every respect.

The Republican is the oldest business institution in Garrett County. It enjoys the largest circulation of any paper in Garrett county and is being read by more people each week because they know where to find the most interesting and truthful accounts of events and all the real news of the county.

The Republican contains the following features which make it the most widely read newspaper in this section: All the real news well written and truthful; "Beyond the County," a column of events transpiring in other parts of the world; county correspondence from every section of the county; personal and local notes of interest; interesting facts concerning Maryland, written by a local author; "In Days of Old," an article reviewing events occurring locally forty and twenty years ago; The Homemakers Corner, devoted to the interests of the women of the county written by the local demonstration agent; the County Agent's column on local and state events of importance agriculturally; Scoop's Column, liable to contain anything; Politics in Review, from the Baltimore Observer; advertisements of local merchants; legal notices of sale, etc., authorized under the terms of the law and by contracts between parties, and paid local notices that bring results.

With all this array of interesting data at hand, it is no wonder that each succeeding week sees the names of new subscribers added to the list of readers and it is the earnest desire and endeavor of The Republican staff that the paper will contiue to grow in interest so that it may be of still greater service to the community throughout its fifty-fourth year and those that are to follow.

STATE CARRYING OUT PRETENTIOUS ROAD IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

Connecting Links With Lincoln Highway and With the Northwestern Turnpike.

Improvements that will mean the cutting down of running time to Baltimore, Washington and other points east from Cumberland at least twenty minutes are rapidly going ahead on the National Highway, Route 40, on the mountains between Cumberland and Hancock. Winter has not interfered with the grading on which rapid progress has been made. The work has been so arranged that traffic has not been interfered with at all. There are no detours. By August 1, it is assured, all new sections will be in full use and the National Highway from Frostburg to Baltimore will have been completely shouldered, and in modern alignment the historic thoroughfare will be the "last word" as far as engineering skill is concerned.

During the past season about 33 miles of concrete shoulders have been completed from Conococheague, five miles west of Hagerstown to the top of Martin's Mountain, nine miles east of Cumberland. The State Roads Commission, under the direction of District Engineer Leo T. Downey, has back-filled and brought up with macadam these shoulders to perfect the roadbed.

Completing Mountain Sections

Three incompleted sections are now under construction by way of grading to make line changes and improve the general alignment and riding qualities of the road. The grading on Sideling Hill, the last of the five big mountains in going from Cumberland to Hancock, 4.57 miles, will be completed by the Cumberland Contracting Company about March 15. Another section from the bottom of Town Hill to the top of Green Ridge, seven miles in length, for which the Thomas-Bennet-Hunter Company has the contract, will also be completed about the same time.

On the west slope of Polish mountain, the second mountain encountered in going east of Cumberland, which has the most tortuous curves of any of the five in the 39 miles between Cumberland and Hancock, the shovel was started nearly two weeks ago and this grading will have been completed by April 1.

Will Reduce Running Time

After these sections have been graded, it is the intention to lay concrete and macadam across the relocations and the regular back fill of macadam at all other points along the concrete shoulders. While the distance will not be materially shortened, bad kinks on all the mountains will be eliminated by the improved alignment. The motorist will be able to speed up more following the removal of scores of sharp turns which necessitated slowing down. The liability of accident will also be materially reduced.

Among the most striking instances of change is about midway of the western slope of Sideling Hill where for a quarter of a mile a complete new roadbed is being made, substituting a long curve for three reverse curves. Another is the making of the eastern side of Town Hill, which next to the west side of Polish Mountain, had the largest number of sharp curves, into almost a straight line, except at the bottom where there is a long gradual curve. The reverse curve at the foot of Polish Mountain on the west side will be replaced by a long, wide curve with no reverse. It was at first contemplated to make a straight line approach but it was found a fill of too great a magnitude would be required. The road from Frostburg to Baltimore will be at no point less than 20 feet wide, with the actual surface on curves more than twenty feet. Several important changes in alignment were made last fall. This includes a new approach to the top of Green Ridge on the west side and the relocation of the road bed at points in the vicinity of Piney Grove where heretofore it would occasionally be flooded from the rapid rise of small streams.

Another Lincoln Highway Connection

There are a number of other important projects to be carried out during the coming season. One calls for another connection between the National Highway and the Lincoln Highway. It is a two-mile project starting at the western end of Grantsville toward the Pennsylvania line to connect with the road to Salisbury and on to the Lincoln Highway. The grading has been completed. This will give two roads connecting with the Lincoln Highway but five miles apart, the other starting near the Stone House, four miles east of Grantsville

During the past season three miles have been under construction from the end of the Deer Park road over the mountain to Kitzmiller. It is expected this section will be completed by the middle of June. A new section of about five miles has been advertised and is to be built this year. This will give a modern concrete road to Kitzmiller, on the Potomac river, where connection will be made with the West Virginia system, Blaine, W. Va., being just opposite Kitzmiller, which in turn connects with the Northwestern pike. A move is on foot to make it a part of a cross-continent system, to be known as National Highway, or Route 50. This will give Cumberland people a new scenic route, going to Kitzmiller by way of Mountain Lake Park and return by way of Keyser.

Overhead Bridge at Wilson

A grade crossing is being eliminated at Wilson, Md., by an overhead bridge over the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio. This is near Oakland. At Loch Lynn Heights, it is contemplated to build two miles of road this season.

The contractors have completed the substructure at Gormania for the erection of a new bridge which will span the Potomac river and the Western Maryland Railroad tracks at that place. This bridge is being built jointly by Maryland and West Virginia and is a part of the Northwestern turnpike system.

The proposed modern road from McCool to Westernport, 4.75 miles, is to be built of concrete this season, according to present plans. Shouldering of the Georges Creek Boulevard from Frostburg to Westernport is also in the season's program, as is the building of several miles of shoulders on the Cumberland-McCool road.

Plans also call for the replacement of iron bridges by concrete structures on the Georges Creek Boulevard in the vicinity of Barton.

A general oiling all over Western Maryland is also provided for this season.

LARGEST SNOW OF YEAR FALLS HERE ON SUNDAY

Heavy Drifts Caused by High Winds Bring Out Snow Plows

Oakland and the entire Allegheny mountain section west of Frostburg was visited by the heaviest snowfall of the winter which reached nearly a foot in depth. The snow began falling on Sunday and several more inches more fell Monday night and Tuesday.

The State Roads Commission had six trucks and two ten-ton tractors out Monday keeping open the road to Keyser's Ridge, and the National Highway, as the high winds caused heavy drifts. In the vicinity of Kitzmiller, similar conditions were reported. There is practieally no snow east of Cumberland and the roads are clear.

Bayard, W. Va., was visited by one of the worst storms of the season on Sunday and Monday. About eight inches of snow fell, accompanied by extremely high winds, and a temperature Sunday night of zero made the going uncomfortable. Many cars were tied up along the Northwestern Pike, the blinding snow making travel too dangerous to attempt over the mountain.

Fire Department Receives Two Donations

Two donations amounting to $129 were received during the past few days by the Oakland Volunteer Fire department in recognition of the services rendered during recent fires. One was from Charles Ream, of the Stanley Coal company, Crellin, amounting to $75, and the other was from a number of citizens of Aurora, West Va., amounting to $54.

These donations were gratefully received by the department and the fire chief stated that all anybody needed to do was turn in an alarm and the entire force would turn out for any blaze in this vicinity.

414 MILES OF ROADS TO BE RESURFACED BY STATE

Program for Year Provides for Oiling in Garrett County

The spring road resurfacing program of the State Roads Commission, as announced by G. Clinton Uhl, chairman, will embrace work on 414 miles of highway throughout the state. Bids for 1,279,821 gallons of oil to be used in the surfacing work have been called for by the commission and will be opened on March 11, the work to start before April 1, he said.

The oil, which will be used with tar or ashphalt and some chips or gravel for the work, will be spread over the surface of the entire 414 miles by state road employes, Uhl said. During the 1929 resurfacing season, 490 miles of state highway were treated, but the commission this year will require a greater quantity of oil per mile than last, it was announced, with the work to be completed by July 1.

In districts 1 and 2, including Talbot, Cecil, Caroline, Queen Anne's, Wicomico, Worcester counties, 33.44 miles will be treated; in district 3, containing parts of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, 29.33 miles will be resurfaced; in district 3A, and 8, containing parts of Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, Howard, Prince Georges and St. Mary's counties, 148.75 miles will be treated; in district 4, containing Baltimore, and Harford counties, work will be done on 41.49 miles; district 5, containing sections of Carroll, Frederick, Howard, Washington and Montgomery counties, 62.57 miles will be resurfaced; and in district 6, comprised of parts of Allegany, Frederick, Garrett, and Washington counties, the commission will oil 101.59 miles of road.

HOME AND SCHOOL VISITS MADE BY HEALTH NURSE

90 Percent of Defects Noted Can Be Corrected, It is Thought

During the month of February 109 visits were made by the Public Health Nurse of which 41 were home visits and 11 school visits. There were 142 school children inspected this month of which 124 were found defective. Notices were sent to the parents of all defective children informing them of conditions found. It is thought that 90 percent of these defects could be corrected. These inspections were given at Sunnyside, Bray, Hoyes Run, Bear Hill and Jennings 2 rooms. Schools visited for other purposes were Oakland, Grantsville, Crellin, Accident, Friendsville and Mt. Lake Park.

Two school girls from Crellin were taken to an eye specialist in Keyser and fitted with glasses, the local Red Cross financing these cases. Thru the local Civic club a child in the Grantsville Children's Home received treatment for her eyes and was fitted with glasses. A child living near Oakland who has been out of school for some time because of illness, was reported to the Health department and is being taken to a Doctor regularly for much needed treatment. Dental care was provided for a High school girl suffering from toothache.

A child from Crellin who has had profuse drainage from abscesses in the back of her ear for several years was placed in the Memorial Hospital, Cumberland. She has had a double mastoid operation and is now well on the road to recovery.

Two patients from Friendsville were placed in Hospitals in Baltimore thru the Maryland League for Crippled Children. Another patient was sent down this week.

The annual meeting of the Maryland League for Crippled Children held in Baltimore was attended by the Public Health Nurse. The people of Garrett county should indeed be grateful to this organization for the work which they have done for our own crippled children.

A day was spent this month with Mrs. Margaret Witcomb of Washington, D. C., a representative of the American Red Cross who visited several points in Garrett county.

Classes in home nursing have been organized in the High schools at Accident and Friendsville. The Red Cross text book, "Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick," is used. There are twelve girls in each class who apparently are very much interested in this course.

TENTATIVE LIST OF HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES GIVEN

108 Seniors of 5 High Schools Are Eligible—Number is 11 Greater Than in 1929

One hundred eight seniors of the five high schools of Garrett county will be graduated in June, when the schools close for the year, if the members of the classes meet the requirements still necessary for their graduation, according to a list sent to The Republican by the high school principals.

The graduates this year exceed by 11 those who were graduated last year in the same schools, and is the first time that the number has passed the century mark. Oakland High, with 38 listed, shows an increase of one, and leads all other high schools; Friendsville with 19, has increased 10; Grantsville with 18, has decreased 1; Kitzmiller with 17, has decreased 4; and Accident with 16 has gained four.

The senior girls outnumber the senior boys 67 to 41. The greatest difference is found in Oakland high with 28 girls and 10 boys. Accident High has seven girls and nine boys, and Grantsville has 7 girls and 11 boys.

Including those who are expected to be graduated this year, the number of students going out from the five high schools of the county since 1912, when the first class was graduated from Oakland High school, totals 845.

Running events, high and broad jump, shot put, relays, volley ball, speed ball, and other athletic contests will be participated in by practically all schools of the county. Further details will be announced later by Mr. F. E. Rathbun, superintendent of schools.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF TOWN BETTER THAN EVER

More Street Improvement Made With Less Yardage Cost Than In Any Previous Year

That the financial condition of Oakland was better than it had ever been; that more street improvements had been made throughout the past year with less cost per yard, than in any previous year; that the resources of the town were $10,000 more than last year; and that the receipts of the town were approximately $20,000 greater than last year, was shown in the annual financial statement of the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland for the year ending February 28, which is found on another page of The Republican today.

The statement shows that the town now owes nothing except its bonded indebtedness, the amount of $8,000 due on the fire truck, and the $14,500, which was loaned for street improvement. With the resources $10,000 more than last year, the liabilities have also increased about $19,000 over last year's figures, but this was due to the street improvement loan and the amount due on the fire truck. These two items alone total $22,500, an amount $3,500 more than the liability increase.

These expenditures are in addition to the ordinary and necessary expenses aggregating $1,000 per month. There is a cash balance in the treasury of $4,240.21, which is $700 less than the balance at the last report, but it was pointed out that if the assets in unpaid taxes and water accounts were paid, it would be enough to pay the amount of the street improvement loan and have $8,769.60 as a cash balance.

More Streets Improved

Approximately $33,500 was spent in street improvement this year, a figure $21,000 higher than last year, but included in this amount is the cost of the amiesiting of the principal streets of the city, financed by the street improvement loan.

Exclusive of the amiesited streets, approximately one-half mile of streets in the town were improved with macadam construction, at a cost of 27 cents per yard less than had ever been done previously, according to J. W. Whorton, chairman of the street committee. Streets were made from curb to curb in practically every instance, covering a distance of 8,256 square yards at an average cost of 56 cents per square yard.

The improved streets included portions of Green street, Fourth street, Fifth street, Pennington street, Center street, Wilson street, and South Third street. In the construction work the cost was divided as follows: supervision 45 cents per hour; labor 40 cents per hour, stone 90 cents per ton delivered; screenings $2.80 per ton delivered.

In addition the following streets were oiled at a cost of $1,241.29. Liberty; Liberty to Center, two cross streets; Wilson, Center to Pennington; Pennington, Second to Third; Center, Second to Third; South Third, Oak to railroad bridge and railroad bridge to river bridge.

The financial statement was presented by A. G. Ross, clerk, and was passed by the council and approved by Mayor L. M. Fraley at the monthly meeting Monday night. Monday evening's meeting was the final session of the present council as the annual election for members of the body will be held on Monday, March 10. The new council will organize on April 7.

Lenten Services Being Held.

The first of a series of union Lenten services was held in St. Paul's M. E. church last night at which Pastor Shilke, of the Lutheran church, delivered the sermon to an audience small in number but appreciative of the season now being observed thruout Christendom. It is the expressed desire of the ministers and others having part in the services that each succeeding Wednesday evening larger numbers of men and women will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending. The services next Wednesday night will be held in the Lutheran church at which Rev. W. B. Brock, Presbyterian pastor, will make the address. His subject will be: "The Glories of the Cross—In the Covenant it Confirms."

The offering each evening will be given to the Dall Vacation Bible school fund.

BOYS' BAND CONCERT IS READY FOR PRESENTATION

Will be Given in Maryland Theatre on Sunday Evening

Final practice will be held tomorrow evening for the program and concert, to be given by the Gilbert-Brown Boys' band, at the Maryland theatre on Sunday evening, March 9, according to R. R. Gilbert, director.

A number of new selections have been learned by the band members for that evening and in addition the Sunshine quartet of Terra Alta will sing several numbers. The program will consist of a baritone solo by Lewis Lawton and a number of marches, overtures, and other selections. W. W. Dawson will give a short talk.

The concert will begin immediately after the conclusion of the evening services. A silver offering will be taken.

A food sale will be held on Saturday, March 8, in the offices of the Cumberland and Allegany Gas company, and a card party will be held in the Knights of Pythias hall on Tuesday, March 11.

The proceeds from all entertainments will go toward the purchase of uniforms for the band members.

OPENING NIGHT AT HIGH SCHOOL WAS AUSPICIOUS

Interesting Debate Occurred on Tuesday—Other School Notes

The opening of the annex of the Oakland High School on Friday evening, February 28, was a most auspicious occasion and was a very enjoyable affair as well. About a hundred and fifty guests were present to inspect the new building and to have a part in the evening's pleasures. Dancing and cards were the principal features of the program. Prizes in the latter were won by the follows:

Mrs. B. I. Gonder, Miss Lucille Mitchell, Mrs. Stanley Bond, Mrs. Kerchcval, Mr. John W. Weber, Mr. R. E. Weber, at bridge, and Mrs. T. A. Gonder, Mr. C. A. Tower, Mrs. James Treacy, Mrs. Edward Helbig, Mr. Paul Turney and Mr. T. A. Gonder, in five hundred.

The Harmony Boys' orchestra, balloons, favors, refreshments, all contributed to the success of the opening night. The expenses of the evening were about $50, making it possible to add about $20 to the school fund.

An interesting debate was held in assembly hall Tuesday morning of this week by the class in Problems of American Democracy. The subject of debate was, Resolved, That Congress should control and regulate child labor and that there should be a Constitutional Amendment to that effect. The debaters showed unusual enthusiasm and pep in their delivery. Those taking the affirmative were Jacqueline Lockyer, Willa Harvey and Helen Fike, while the negative was represented by Lewis Wildman, Wilbur Gnegy and Joseph Sollars. Helen Sollars was chairman and the judges were Miss Kochenderfer, Miss Rice and Miss Fernald. The decision was in favor of the affirmative side.

Last Thursday the biology class held an interesting debate on the value of stems and leaves. Those who took part were Carroll Casteel, Betty Broadwater, Wilmot Bowen, affirmative, and Cecil Kight, Logan Weber and Wayne Fitzwater, negative.

The new monthly report cards were given out Tuesday. These reports will not replace the quarterly report but the primary purpose of this one is to inform parents and guardians more frequently of the activities of the student in his or her high school work.

On Thursday, visitors' day at the school, the Freshmen girls gave a tea to the Senior class and the visitors. This tea was attractive and was well attended.

We wish to correct a statement made last week. The boys absent from the team were Sollars and Stemple instead of Maroney.

On Thursday there will be a meeting of the Home Economics Club. This will be the first regular program:

Song.....Work and Vitamin Song
Roll call and minutes of last meeting.
New and unfinished business.
Story.....Helen Schlossnagle
Piano solo.....Genevieve Sweeney
Recitation.....Mary Susan Bell
Jokes.....Martha Scott
Song.....If You're Feeling Bad

SCHOOL REPPORTERS,
Jacqueline Lockyer,
Bernard Gonder, Jr.

Don't forget the Food Sale for the benefit of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band, to be held at the C. & A. Gas office on Saturday, March 8. Something good for Sunday can be found.

TO NOMINATE CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICES

Citizens' Meeting to be Held Tonight at 8 O'clock—Election to be Held on Monday

Nomination of candidates for mayor, councilmen and a treasurer of the town of Oakland will be made at a Citizens' meeting to be held this evening in the City Hall at 8 o'clock, Mayor L. M. Fraley has announced. Election for these offices will be held on Monday, March 10.

It is requested by Mayor Fraley that a representative group of citizens be present and take an interest in the municipal affairs by nominating responsible men on the ticket.

It is understood that Mayor Fraley, who has served in that capacity for a period of six years, will not be a candidate for re-election. It is also generally known that Grover C. Stemple, the retiring president of the Town Council, will be nominated for mayor, while Jesse Ashby and Ralph Thayer, the other two retiring members of the council, will be renominated for their respective positions.

As yet no other ones have announced their intentions of becoming candidates, but it is felt that several will appear at the meeting tonight. In case of more than six candidates for councilmen and two for mayor, it was undecided whether or not all names would be placed on the ballot or cut down by vote of the citizens present at the meeting. The latter method has been used during the last several years.

At the election the voters will elect one person as mayor, three persons as members of the Town Council and one person for the office of treasurer, the mayor and councilmen to serve terms of two years, and the treasurer a term of one year.

The polls will open at 8 o'clock a. m. at the council chamber and will remain open until 6 o'clock p. m.

Legion Sets Dates for Carnival and Anniversary Week

Definite dates for Anniversary Week of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, were chosen at the meeting of the legionaires held Monday night and they will be June 11, 12, 13, and 14, according to Joseph M. Gonder, post commander. A carnival will be held at this time on the streets of Oakland, with a number of feature attractions.

A picture for the benefit of the Legion will be shown at the Maryland theatre on Monday and Tuesday, March 10 and 11. The arrangements are in the hands of I. R. Rudy, Alex Hesen, and Walter Janoske and they have chosen "Kid Gloves," a picture starring Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson. Tickets will be 50 cents. There will be added attractions.

Scouts to Hold Inspection

The regular monthly inspection of Oakland Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will be held at the meeting tomorrow evening in the Scout hall. Scouts will be marked on their neatness, activity, attendance, and their standing the troop in regard to dues, obedience to orders, etc.

Other matters to be taken up include a discussion on contemplated projects for summer camp and methods of raising funds for the expenses involved.

The Boys' and Girls' Question Box Starting This Issue

The Boys' and Girls' Question box, a feature composed by a local educator, is made up of a number of questions which are simple, yet of importance and usually hard to answer.

These questions will be answered clearly and concisely by the author, and both questions and answers will be found on another page of The Republican today. This new feature will appear regularly.

Express Overtakes Freight Train in Blinding Storm

Two engines were derailed, one caboose burned and several cars wrecked Sunday morning near Altamont in a blinding snowstorm when the eastbound express train overtook and rammed a moving freight train.

No one was injured. The westbound track was cleared in a few hours, but the eastbound track was not cleared until early Monday morning.

TALKS MADE ON SAFETY BY STATE MINE BUREAU

Reports on Activities In Western Maryland Section Given Concerning Coal Mines

On the evening of February 7th, E. H. Gibbs, director of Compcnsation, The Consolidation Coal Company, Fairmont, West Va., and Mr. J. A. Shore, secy-treas., Hamill Coke and Coke Company, Kitzmiller, Md., gavc talks on compensation for mine accidents before the Mine Management class at Barton, Md. The talks were very well received and provoked considerable discussion.

On the evening of February 14th, Mr. John Hubner Rice, until recently assistant attorney general of Maryland, gave an addrcss on Industrial Accident Compensation as carried out in Marylannd mines. This address concluded the three meetings on the subject of Compcnsation for Mine Accidents, which had bcen discussed by Instructor Hudson and the speakers above named.

Mine Safety

A representative of the Bureau had the privilege of attending the meeting of the Safety Club composed of employes of No. 42 mine of the Davis Coal and Cokc Company at Kempton, Md., on the evening of February 25th, at which gathcring there was a total attendance of 93. Superintendent J. R. Hubbs was in charge of the meeting with Motorman Carl Luzier acting as secretary. Extemporaneous talks were made by Mr. S. B. Jeffries, assistant to the President and Mine Inspector Ross Johns, of West Virginia. Reports were made by the safety officials in charge of West Virginia and also by the safety officials in charge of the various portions of the mine workings and of the surface plants, and new officers were elected for the succeeding month.

Some penalties were imposed for violation of the safety rules of the mine. There was a discussion of haulage accidents especially those dealing with brakemen and motormen, particularly the position of brakemen on loaded trips.

The representative of the Bureau was greatly interestcd to not that, among other matters brought up, when Superintendent Hubbs made request for miscellaneous suggestions, was an inquiry from one of the employes regarding sidewalks in the town, which are said to be in need of repair, Mr. Jeffries said that thesc would be given attention. This perhaps indicates that there is some interest in the matter of safety by the women of the town, although there were none present at the meeting.

This Safety Club is not conducted in exactly the same way as the Safety Court of the Consolidation Coal Company, but results seem to be equally as good.

Up until the evening of February 25th, Mine No. 42 of the Davis Coal and Coke Company had not had a reportable accident during the month of February.

Get Together Meeting

A get together meeting was held at Vindex, Garrett county, in the hall belonging to the Manor Coal Company, on the evening of February 26. A motion picture consiting of four reels, loaned by the U. S. Bureau of Mines, entitled, "When a Man's a Miner," was shown, and character sketches and stories were given by Mr. W. D. McGinniss, of thc Pittsburgh office of the E. I. Du Pont dcNemours Company. Mr. Frank Porter, representative of the Du Pont Company at Cumberland, also greeted the assembly, as did also Mr. William Critchon, Jr., superintendent of the Manor Coal Company, Vindex. Light refreshments were served at the conclusion of thc speaking.

In addition to those above mentioned, Vocational Mining Instructor L. C. Hutson, Chief Mine Engineer J. J. Rutledge and District Mine Inspector Clyde J. Rowe, of the Maryland Bureau of Mines, were present.

The roads to the mine were practically impassable and it was necessary for the party to go from Kitzmiller to Vindex by way of the main entry in the six-foot seam mine of the Hamill Coal and Coke Company.

A scrious accident occurred in the No. 1 Mine of the Manor Coal Company at Vindex on Fcbruary 27th resulting in the death of one miner and serious injury of another. It was necessary to transport the seriously injured man ovcr the rough road leading fram thc mine to the Kitzmiller-Oakland highway whcre the ambulance of the Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, was in walting.

The issue of whether or not an injured man survivcs depends largely on the treatment received in thc interval bctween the time he is taken from the scene of the accident and when he reachcs the hospital, and such difficulties of transportation are not conducive to recovery from serious injuries.

Utilization of Rcsources

A represcntative of the Bureau has received a communication from two Baltimore newspapers urging him to address the Assistant Secretary of the Trcasury and request that Maryland marble be used in the construction of thc new postoffice building to be erected in Baltimore.

Up to the present time the Bureau has not had any requests from the newspapers of Baltimore to use the Bureau's influence in urging the use of Maryland-mined coal in the State and City buildings.

Maryland Development Commission

The members of the Maryland Development Commission met at 3 p. m. on Monday, February 10. In accordance with the desire of the committee at its meeting on December 17, 1929, it was resolved that the entire committee should meet regularly at 3 p. m. on the second Monday of each calendar month, beginning in February, 1930, and continuing for six months, the meetings t obe held in the assembly room of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce.

Among some of thc subjects which have been undertaken by the Maryland Developmcnt Commission are:

First: An investigation of what raw materials are now imported into the State and what part of such raw materials could be supplied from State deposits;

Second: An investigation to determine why the coal industry in Western Maryland is at present falling behind in competition for the Baltimore markets;

Third: An investigation into the present use of Maryland timber for mine props and the possible development of this market by the Bureau of Mines cooperating with the Statc Forester.

Demonstration No. 30.

Eight tons of Bakerstown run-of-mine egg coal from the Upper Potomac region were used in a steam heating plant in which demonstrations Nos. 4, 25 and 27 were carried out. The Bakerstown coal from the Upper Potomoc region is apparently somewhat harder in character than the Bakerstown coal mind in the lower Georges Creek region and apparently the coal was somewhat better prepared in that it was free from fine coal. The amount of ash yielded was about the same as that from the Georges Creek Bakerstown.

Like the Georges Creek coal the Potomac fuel yielded a very hot fire; no clinkers were made and there was practically an entire absence of smoke from the top of the chimney. The coal banks well at night probably a little better than the Georges Creek coal. The amount of breast coal in the Potomac fuel does not seem to be as great as In the Georges Creek coal, and as this is the softest portion of the seam it probably accounts largely for the greater proportion of lump in the Potomac coal. This is an excellent fuel and with the thermostatic control on the heating plant and some method of feeding the coal automatically to the grates, it should be a popular domestic heating coal.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN,

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Md.

"What Is Your Investment In Buildings?"

According to the last census the value of all farm land in Maryland, without buildings, is $207,000,000 while the value of the farm buildings alone is $134,000,000. In other words, for every $100 which the average Maryland farmer has invested in land he has $64.73 invested in buildings.

This is a serious situation. Money invested in land yields returns, while money invested in buildings is a non-producing overhead expense.

This overhead expense of farm buildings should be kept as low as possible. One way to do this is to build in such a way that the annual cost of depreciation, upkeep, etc., is as low as possible.

Any farm building should be conveniently arranged. This will save time, and time is money. It should also be arranged so that thcre is no waste space. Weste space costs as much to build as space which is used every day.

Most important of all, a farm building should be built for the lowest price consistent with permanence and satisfactory results. This means that it should be carefully planned before it is built. By so doing, there will be no wasted space, and the amount of material and labor required will be kept as low as possible.

Your county agent has recently received a set of complete plans for a large number of different kinds of farm structures. Anyone who intends to erect any buildings on his farm is invitcd to inspect this set of plans. If you find a plan in his set which fits your needs you may secure a copy by writing to the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

"Build Your Buildings Twice"

Every farm building should be built twice. It should be built on paper first, and then on the ground.

Failure to build on paper first often results in buildings which are inconvenient, inefficient and expensive. A building which is inconveniently arranged and located wastes time every time it is used, which is often several times each day. The inefficient building is often larger than it needs to be, and therefore, more expensive because of the wasted space which careful planning would have saved. And failure to plan a building in advance often means that more material and more labor than necessary are used in its construction.

With the desire to be of assistance in the planning of farm buildings before they are built, the Extension Service of the University of Maryland has recently sent to your county agent a set of complete plans for a large number of different kinds of farm structures. Anyone who intends to erect any buildings on his farm is invited to inspect this set of plans. If you find a plan in his set which fits your needs your county agent will tell you how to secure a copy.

Seed Corn Selection Is Important Factor

In selecting seed corn from the crib for spring planting Maryland farmers are urged by F. W. Oldenburg, specialist in agronomy for the University of Maryland Extension Service, to be particularly careful to use only well-formed, healthy, true-to-form stock, especially as much of the corn in Maryland was destroyed by freezing weather last November.

Mr. Oldenburg suggests that farmers take the following steps in selecting their seed corn. First, only well-formed ears of medium size and typical of the variety should be used. These ears should be heavy with bright, well-filled grains and the cobs, firm and free from internal signs of disease. All light, chaffy ears with starchy grains and rotted, shredded or discolored shanks should be discarded. Second, a more careful inspection should be made of each ear with a sharp knife by cutting off the butts and tips. All ears showing anything but bright, well-formed grains are worthless.

Any cobs showing discoloration also should be thrown out. Third, two or three grains from each ear should be cut into to see if the germs arc free from discoloration and waxy in texture. If the grains show germs of a pink color they should not be used, it is declared. Fourth, Mr. Oldenburg urges that as an additional precaution the seed be tested for determination, which can be done very easily by the "rag doll" method. The County Agent or Mr. Oldenburg will be glad to give the details of testing seed to anyone who is not familiar.

It is believed that if these four rules are followed carefully encouraging results will be obtained. Over a period of five years, in nineteen counties of the State where 116 tests have been conducted by Mr. Oldenburg and Dr. R. A. Jehl, plant pathologist for the University Extension Service, an average increase of 8½ bushels have been secured and in some cases increases of from 12 to 14 bushels were obtained. Some individuals were able to double their yields.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man Ir. The Street

(From The Baltimore Observer)

Democratic leaders who have been backing Senator David G. McIntosh for Governor held conferences this week in efforts to bring order out of the situation, particularly with regard to support on the Eastern Shore.

If all goes well it is understood that the McIntosh ticket will include Henry P. Turner of Talbot county for Comptroller, Senator Edward J. Colgan or State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Connor of Baltimore City for Attorney General and a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals to be taken from Western Maryland with the approval of former Comptroller Hugh A. McMullen of Allegany.

Former Governor Harrington attended a conference held on Thursday afternoon. The second conference was attended by Mr. Turner, Howard Bruce, Mr. McIntosh, Harrison Rider, and others who are opposed to the Governor's fourth term ambition.

Mr. Turner and Mr. McMullen are said to be very close politically and it is understood that Mr. Turner is very desirous of obtaining the hearty support of his old friend from Allegany.

The attitude of Mr. Harrington is said to be that his section of the State is averse to the nomination of a wet and that Mr. McIntosh is just as wet as Ritchie. The ex-Governor thinks, it is reported, that the nominee should be as dry as his former fellow-townsman, U. S. Senator Goldsborough, is reputed to be.

But the Democratic woods do not provide any political timber answering that description unless one has in mind Emory L. Coblentz, who was at one time put forward by the Ritchie people as a stalking horse but who, when support seemed possible, began to receive knocks from these same Ritchie people.

Senator Roe of Queen Annes' is expected to join with Mr. Turner in giving support to the McIntosh ticket and other Eastern Shore leaders are counted on to join the forces opposed to the Governor's renomination.

While John M. Dennis has been active in the McIntosh support it is expected that his friend Frank A. Furst will stick to Ritchie to the last even though he may think him a forlorn hope.

What the Governor will do in the end no one knows. He tells callers that he will run but will await his time for an announcement. On the other side the McIntosh people say they will present such a formidable line up within the next week or so that the Governor will fade out of the picture.

The Republican
State Situation

Broening stock went up a bit this week due to the confident talk of the Mayor's appointees. They have been saying that enough county support has been promised to make the nomination of His Honor a certainty when added to the solid vote of Baltimore City. It is held that as soon as the Mayor gets his City Hall chair warm again he will make an announcement of his further ambition.

But friends of David A Robb of Allegany stick to the belief that he will go in and make a contest. He is said to be of that turn of mind just now but there is no law against one changing one's mind in politics.

Mr. Robb has been visiting the city from time to time and has his scouts in the counties who are sounding public sentiment. But it is said that Mr. Robb, like Mr. Broening, still hopes to get the nomination as the result of a conference of State leaders rather than as the outcome of a hard primary contest.

As for Albert G. Towers, the latest report is that he is not even desirous that it be brought to him. But he has made no public statement.

There is strong approval of the suggestion that Albanus Phillips of Cambridge be the G. O. P. candidate for Comptroller and on top of that fact eomes a report that Editor L. Bates Russell of the Chestertown Enterprise might like that honor for himself. Mr. Russell publishes one of the best weekly papers in Maryland but that job should not keep him out of a State office, as we see it.

Returning to the Governorship—there has been recent mention of the name of Federal Judge Morris A. Soper. Not that there is anything to indicate that he would be willing to run. He has a life position where he now is and life positions are very scarce these days and becoming scarcer. But some seem to think that he would be a good compromise candidate to prevent a primary election fight. In 1911 Mr. Soper ran for Attorney General on the ticket with Phillips Lee Goldsborough, who was elected Governor—but was defeated by Edgar Allan Poe. Later Mr. Soper was put on the Police Board by Governor Goldsborough and transferred thence to the chief judgeship of the Supreme Bench.

The Republican State Central Committee of Washington county has taken the first step toward putting former Attorney General Alexander Armstrong in the field as a candidate for Governor by giving him an indorsement. Mr. Armstrong has not said he would not accept a nomination and his friends say he would like to have it this year when it appears that there is to be a change of administration. Mr. Armstrong ran against Governor Ritchie in 1923 when the latter was going up the hill politically and now that he is slipping the former Attorney General would have a better chance.

But What About
The Local Tieket?

There has been so much manuevering and palavering over the nomination for Governor—in both parties—that little is now heard about the make-up of local tickets in Baltimore City. The county people are very active and names are discussed every day. Almost every county paper has something on the subject.

A straight out State fight in the city would probably mean two tickets for the local places. A prize that may attract several in each party is that of Sheriff, for the Republicans feel that if Ritchie is the Democratic nominee he will drag down the local ticket with him and give them a fine chance to take possession of the court house for the ensuing four years.

Next are the court clerkships. Every incumbent wants another term. Names of new candidates have not yet been taken up for discussion but before long they will be coming out. And then the pot will actually begin to bo!"

Here We Correct
A Serious Error

Last week we had a few words about a meeting of Democratic ward leaders and subleaders at the solarium of Gilbert A. Dailey, South Baltimore, in the interest of the fourth term candidacy. We said that of the eleven persons reported present ten were on the public payroll or something like that. Now we correct this statement so as to say that all of the eleven were such—for we find that the Democrat concerning whom we had a doubt is a deputy clerk in the court house.

It's all right for these fellows to hold the jobs and we rejoice that they have them but we publish the facts to show that the fourth term support is mainly coming from those on the payroll, Mr. Dailey himself being the chief clerk of the current City Council as well as an ardent admirer of His Excellency—especially at those seasons when His aforesaid Excellency has something worth while to hand out.

Political Notes

Emerson R. Crothers is talking of making another attempt to capture the clerkship of the Cecil County Court. He was nominated by the Democrats four years ago and lost by a small margin.

In Harford county it is reported that State Senator Abram G. Ensor may become the candidate for the court clerkship in the Democratic primary. E. M. Allen, Republican, is suggested as the Republican nominee for county treasurer. Marshall Heaps may go after the Democratic nomination for the State Senate. Candidates for Sheriff are too numerous to mention. State's attorneyship ditto.

is of unique modernistic design outside, but a visit inside reveals this family is getting along with the same number of convenience outlets which were installed in it during the construction. Since that time the radio, refrigerator, clocks, stoves and cooking utensils have all "gone electric," the way of modern living.

By using the imagination you can picture how inconvenient it is to unscrew lamps, and pull out lamp cords every time you wish to use an electrical appliance.

A MINISTER SPEAKS OUT

In a recent sermon, Dr. H. Perry Silver, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, in New York City, declared that one of the dangers to America now is the threatened destruction of the ideals and institutions of the makers of the country and a lack of reverence and patriotism which are stealing the sense of glory from the American nation.

Dr. Silver declared that "We have patriots who are patriots only on holidays. And there are some who are not even patriots then," and he added that Christian ideals are being undermined by colleges originally formed to develop Christian ministry, but now housing "half-baked professors with atheistic ideas" who "hack away at the home-bred ideals of young students."

Continuing, he declared that "We have men without character writing biographies of men of great character, little men trying to belittle the great of the nation. Some of these authors should be writing the life of Jesse James rather than that of George Washington."

All of which contains a great deal of truth and is worth thinking over. America has changed just as the entire world has changed during the past generation, perhaps not so much as some of the other nations, but greatly at any rate. Some of this change has of course been for the better but there is some which should cause us to think gravely concerning the future.

With the period following the World War we have been flooded with propaganda. Much of this has tended to destroy our institutions, to set up new ideals, to break down the old system of constitutional government, to destroy the old faiths of every kind, and even undermine the social fabric. Some of it, too, has tended to internationalize the American mind, to preach anti-patriotism, to convince us that we should place internationalism above Americanism, and forget the advice and caution of the founders of the republic. This has come to us through certain sections of the press, and too often through the college and the so-called "liberal minister of the Gospel." Scores of high-powered organizations, with apparently unlimited resources are flooding mails with this alien propaganda in vast quantities.

Economic conditions have changed, too. We have become more prosperous. Our people no longer remain rooted to one community. They travel about, form new associations. This has not been without its beneficent influence. It has tended to wipe out sectionalism, to make us American-minded. But all of this benefit will be dissipated if we forget the old ideals, the old fundamentals of our national faith, and can be propagandized into believing that Americanism is archaic, that we can get something better by adopting "new" doctrines from across the sea, doctrines that had been discredited before our forefathers wrote the American Constitution.

This is a busy age, but we shall lose all the progress we have made in a material way if we become too busy to hold on to and appreciate the ideals of the past and the lessons which have been handed down to us through tradition and history. America has been made great through its faith in the precepts of Christianity and its belief in the theory of representative government, the sanctity of the home, the freedom of the individual. New "liberal" cults which would substitute materialism for religion, mob autocracy for representative government and state control for family life, seek to destroy our progress and to sink all of our achievements into the level of mediocrity and failure. International propaganda which would teach us that we ought to forsake American tradition and launch our ship in untried and stormy waters, has at heart not the interests of the American people but of those who would exploit us for their own selfish ends.

It is high time to take a reckoning, and to note the direction in which we are drifting, rather than to throw away the chart and compass and be driven on the rocks by the wild winds of foreign influence. "Beware," as Washington said, "the insidious wiles of foreign intrigues"

? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' QUESTION BOX ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

They're So Simple That Anybody Can Ask Them—
But— Can You Answer Them?

Questions, profoundly simple, asked by our young hopeful, puzzle the best of us. The puzzlers appearing in this column from time to time are intended primarily to amuse and instruct the youth—but the older folk may answer if they can.

1. Where does the wind begin?
2. Where does the wind go when it does not blow?
3. What makes the wind whistle?
4. Why does heat make paper curl?
5. What makes a lead pencil write?

* * *

1. The wind is a movement of part of the air through the air around it. There are changes always going on in the pressure of the air at one place as compared with another. This produces wind, since air is always moved from a place where the pressure is high to a place where the pressure is lower—practically in the same way as water will always try to form a level surface instead of being heaped up higher in one place than in another.

2. The wind goes no where when it does not blow, for the reason that the wind is not a thing we can see, like an apple for instance, but is a state of movement. So, when the wind does not blow, it is not because the wind has hidden itself away, but simply because the air is still and there is no movement.

3. The whistling of the wind is caused by the air forcing itself thru chinks of doors or windows, or perhaps down the chimney or through the branches of trees. The wind passing thru the air, of itself, does not make itself known to us in sound. We only hear it when it forces itself thru or around an obstruction.

4. Because there is a certain amount of water in paper, as in all ordinary things. So, if we heat the paper, we change the water into gas and drive it away and the spaces in the paper that were filled with water are now filled with air, which is very much lighter. The heat causes the temperature of the paper to change unevenly, causing it to expand in one place and contract in another, thus causing it to curl.

5. A 'lead' pencil is not made of lead. If it were, it would not write. It is made of a form of tiny crystals of carbon called graphite. The crystals are small, and of such a shape that they can easily be rubbed away from each other by friction, thus leaving the tiny crystals on the paper. If there was no such thing as friction, the pencil would not write.

Protect Our Song and Insectivorous Birds

At this season of the year when practically all species of migratory birds (especially the song and insectivorous birds) are returning to Maryland covers to begin housekeeping for the season of 1930, it is very essential that we should give them adequate protection, thereby assuring a successful propagation season, according to E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden.

The department is endeavoring, thru the co-operation of the State Board of Education, thru the teachers of the public schools of the State to educate the pupils to the necessity of the conservation of birdlife.

The agriculturists and gardners of our State should be interested in the program for conservation of birdlife as it is impossible to grow crops without the assistance of the insectivorous birds which annually destroy millions of insects and obnoxious weeds.

The expense of building and maintaining bird houses which furnish nesting places for numerous species of birds is so small that the general public should by all means furnish more homes for their feathered friends.

Chapter 568, Acts of 1927, provides it to be unlawful for any person to kill, catch or have in their posession, living or dead, any resident or migratory wild bird other than a game bird; or purchase, offer or expose for sale any such wild non-game birds, the plumage, skin or body, whether said bird was captured or killed within the State of Maryland or within any other State, Territory of Country. This Act also provides it to be unlawful to take or destroy or attempt to take or destroy the nest or the eggs of any wild bird, whether same be game or non-game, or have such nest or eggs in possession under a penalty of not less than $25.00 nor more than $100.00 for each and every offense.

An Interesting Fact.

Garrett County

Garrett county, the youngest of the counties of Maryland, was carved out of territory belonging to Allegheny county in 1872, fifty-eight years ago. It has an area of 660 square miles, the largest in the State, and has a population (1920) of 19,678. It was named after John W. Garrett.

John W. Garrett became president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company in 1858, and as the guiding genius of the only line of railroad which ran into Washington from the North and from the West during the War of Secession, soon dominated the political situation throughout Maryland. He was a personal friend of President Lincoln and his descendants cherish letters indicted to him in the handwriting of the martyred President.

Not only was Mr. Garrett closely connected with the business and political affairs of his own state, but in the interest of his railroad, took an active part in the formation of the neighboring state of West Virginia. It may not be generally known, but while West Virginia's birth was being discussed, especially with reference to the counties of the mother state which would go to make up the new, it was proposed, among other things, that Accomac and Northampton counties on the eastern shore of Virginia be transferred to Maryland in exchange for an equivalent in Western Maryland in the territory now comprised in the counties of Garrett and Allegheny. This was opposed by Mr. Garrett. If the exchange had been consumated as proposed, Garret county would have been a part of West Virginia, instead of a component part of the Free State.

So great, indeed, was the influence of John W. Garrett in national affairs that he appears to have been primarily responsible for placing the counties of Jefferson and Berkeley in the state of West Virginia, largely for the reason that he wanted his railroad, from the time it crossed the Potomac at Harper's Ferry until it returned to Maryland, to keep within the bounds of one state, which object he succeeded in accomplishing when the two counties named were placed within the newly created state of West Virginia.

John W. Garrett, for whom Garrett county was named, was not only a great developer of his own state, but was an empire builder without, and was a potent factor in causing the now residents of Garrett county to be citizens of Maryland rather than of our neighboring state.

COST OF EDUCATION IS INCREASING IN MARYLAND

$50 Needed for Teaching Average White Pupil in Counties in Elementary Schools

The cost of education in Maryland elementary schools is rising, if the increase during the 1928-29 school year may be considered a sign, the State Department of Education announced recently.

Excluding costs of general control and fixed charges, the current expense of educating the average white elementary pupil in the counties last year was $50, an increase of nearly $2 more than in the preceding year. The expenditure per pupil ranged from $42 in Washington county and $43 in Frederick and Harford to $60 in Garrett and Montgomery counties.

Size Of Class Is Factor

Size of class and salaries of teachers are the major factors bearing on the increase, according to the announcement. The average salary increased in every county except two, so that with classes of the same size, the cost per pupil for salaries would necessarily be greater in 1929 than in 1928, it was added.

For the counties as a group, the salary cost per pupil increased by 92 cents, while the cost for supervision was lowered by 2 cents, in comparison with 1928.

Book Expense Cited

Ten cents per pupil for last year's increase was attributed to extra expense for books and materials.

"Modern methods of teaching, which require a wealth of reference material and an abundance of books, especially for social studies, cannot be put into practice without additional expenditures for these purposes in most of the counties," the announcement stated.

Operation and maintenance costs increased by 30 cents, while sundry items brought the general State average cost per pupil to $50, or nearly $2 over the year before, it was said.

THREE RULES FOR KEEPING MOUTH IN GOOD HEALTH

In Addition To These Visit the Dentist Regularly

Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygiene of the State Department of Health, gives three rules for keeping the mouth and teeth in good health. Here they are:

1. Eat properly balanced meals;
2. Keep the mouth clean;
3. Go to your dentist regularly for an examination of your teeth.

"Correct diet makes strong teeth. Clean teeth are less apt to decay than are dirty ones. It is a mistake, however, to depend upon these two rules alone in maintaining mouth health. The third rule, calling for regular dental examination by a competent dentist, must be added as an important factor in keeping the teeth strong and the mouth in normal, good health.

"Twice a year is none too often to visit your dentist for the purpose of a careful, thorough mouth examination. This will insure discovery of defects early enough to provide for their correction before they assume serious proportions. If, starting as early as three years of age, a child is taken twice-yearly to a dentist for dental inspection and needed corrections—and if the proper diet and rules of cleanliness are followed in the meantime—the child is practically assured of reaching adult life without being subjected to either the pain or discomfort accompanying bad teeth or to body ill-health caused by some infection having its source in bad teeth.

"Too often one awaits the twinges of an aching tooth before visiting a dentist. By that time the trouble may have extended greatly, necessitating more work by the dentist. At the same time the work is likely to be more painful and the permanency of the correction less sure. Regular twice-yearly visits to your family dentist will enable you to do preventive rather than corrective work. Preventive measure cause a minimum of trouble, pain and expense.

"The old adage 'an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure' is especially applicable to care of the teeth. A good rule to follow is, 'never let your teeth ache.' A good habit to establish is a twice-yearly visit to your dentist for mouth examination."

160 TO BEGIN CENSUS IN FIRST DISTRICT APRIL 2

Workers Will Have One District Each, of Equal Territory

One hundred and sixty census takers will begin on April second, to count the people of Allegany, Washington, and Garrett counties, it was announced by John J. Stump, Supervisor of Census for the First District of Maryland, comprising the three counties above named. The Census will date, however, as of April first, he said.

To facilitate the count, the First District has been divided into one hundred and sixty subordinate districts. Each Enumerator will cover the same amount of territory. It is estimated that each Enumerator will be able to cover his alloted area within two weeks.

Most Work Done in Evening

In one day, as Mr. Stump figures it, a census taker should be able to record at least one hundred and fifty names. They will do a great deal of their counting between six and nine o'clock in the evening. Previous experience has proved this the most likely hour to find people at home.

If, the first time he calls, no one answers the doorbell, the census taker must make a second call, and if unsuccessful, a third call, until he finally finds the persons at home.

Required to Give Information

Apartment houses and hotel managers are required by law to furnish the enumerators with all the information he requires concerning their patrons. Failure to cooperate with canvassers is punishable under the census law by a fine.

The census takers are supposed to be able to keep secrets, and each of them takes an oath that any information received by him shall not be divulged. He also swears not to disclose any statements which he enters on his schedule.

Inasmuch as the census will be dated as of April first, persons who may die between that time and the time when the census taker gets around to their late homes, will be counted among the living. Births occurring after April first, will not be recorded.

Appointed in Washington

In former years, census takers were selected by the Supervisor. But this year applicants must forward their names to Washington and take an examination on test schedules distributed from that office. Washington officials then appoint the enumerators from among candidates whose qualifications have proved satisfactory.

Persons who have filed applications to become census takers, but have not yet received test schedules, should write him at his office, on the second floor of the Post Office Building, Cumberland, Md., Mr. Stump said. Some two hundred names sent to Washington appear to have been lost or overlooked, he said.

The job of counting the people of Western Maryland will not be a new one for the District Supervisor. He had charge of the census work for this District in 1910.

MT. LAKE PARK

Jeanie Smith Memorial

Through the efforts of Mrs. Shaffer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a fund has been started and placed in the hands of J. A. Enlow, Mt. Lake Park, with the hope that the many friends of Miss Jennie Smith will add to this fund by April 1 so that a worthy memorial can be erected by May 30 for this real friend of everybody.

The election in Loch Lynn passed off very quietly. H. V. Leighton, B. W. Harvey and H. Z. Gibson were the successful candidates for councilmen and George Brown was elected Tax Collector. There were 65 votes cast. Considering that there are only about a dozen democratic voters registered in Loch Lynn, the election of Mr. Gibson, a democrat, who received 34 votes, attests his popularity as one of the solid citizens of the community. Together with Mr. Leighton and Mr. Harvey and the old members, Loch Lynn is assured of a good administration.

The comment around the stove in Harvey and Ream's store the morning after the election concerning the election of Mr. Gibson, inspired Rev. Jessee to relate the story of an Incident which occurred in Nicholas county, West Virginia, in an election wherein the Republicans had been overwhelmingly successful. A gang of lumbermen were twitting a well-known Democrat about the defeat of his party and asked him how he felt. The Democrat replied that he felt like Lazerus must have felt—licked by the darn dogs. However, this story had no reference to the election of Mr. Gibson whose frequent election to office testifies to his fitness.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Sweitzer have purchased and are now occupying the Clyde Shipley home in Loch Lynn.

Capt. B. L. Hardesty and sons, Charles E., and Oliver, are in Fairmont to attend the funeral of Sherman Hardesty, a brother of the former, who was accidently killed in a mine near Fairmont. The funeral was held today.

Mrs. J. E. Kesner is in Vindex attending the funeral of her brother, who died at his home there on Tuesday.

The newly elected and retiring councilmen and the treasurer of Loch Lynn were delightfully entertained last Monday night at the conclusion of the business session of the council, by the mayor and clerk, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hardesty, at their home. Included in the list of guests were Mr. B. L. Hardesty, Mr. Lincoln Callis, Mr. J. H. Loughery, Miss Grace Callis and Miss Mildred Ford, judges and clerks of election. After a short talk by the Mayor, who expressed his appreciation of the cooperation he had received from the retirlng councilmen, Mr. Biggs and Mr. Martin, delicious refreshments were served. Miss Callis, Miss Ford, Miss Betty Hardesty and Miss Nellie Loughery assisting.

Mr. Britten L. Martin has gone into the chicken raising business with a bang, having purchased 100 Park strain Barred Rocks, probably the highest priced strain on the market, and 200 Ringlets Barred Rocks. This coming fall Mr. Martin proposes to engage strictly in marketing his eggs and surplus stock for breeding purposes. With the approved thoroughbred chicks he has purchased, the egg-laying qualities of the stock of the community should be raised.

Poultry Hints

The late hatched chicks are subjected to many parasites and diseases which the earlier ones escape.

The trap-nest records show that the hlgh producers of the flock are the pullets that lay four or five dozen eggs before March 1.

Most of the heavier breeds will give better results if hatched previous to April 1. The chicks not only grow better but the pullets will start laying earlier in the fall.

Lesson for March 9

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Hearers and Doers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Hearers and Doers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Giving Heed to Jesus' Teaching.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Take Heed How Ye Hear.

In this thirteenth chapter of Matthew the "mysteries" of the kingdom are unfolded. By "mystery" in the Scriptures is meant truth undiscoverable by human reason, made known by revelation. The seven parables of this chapter set forth in a most graphic manner the admixture of moral and spiritual affairs in the world between Christ's ascension and return to the earth.

I. The Sower (v. 3).

The sower is not named in this parable. In the parable of the wheat and tares, the sower is the Son of Man (v. 37). It is evident that the sower in this case is the Lord Jesus Christ. Through the centuries He has been sowing the seed of divine truth by means of prophets, apostles and ministers.

II. The Kind of Soil (vv. 4-8; 10-23).

The soil is the human heart (v. 19). The seed sown is the Word of God (v. 19). The difference of results lies in the condition of the soil, which in turn is the state of the human heart. Notwithstanding the faithfulness of the sower and the purity of the seed, the results of preaching God's Word depend upon the condition of the human heart. This parable reveals four kinds of soil or hearers.

1. The wayside, or hard-hearted hearer (v. 4, cf. v. 19).

The wayside means the track beaten down by the hoofs of animals and the feet of men. Because the soil was unbroken and uncultivated the seed could not get beneath the surface, therefore was devoured by the fowls. The great truth taught is that the heart unbroken and hard is not favorable soil for the gospel.

2. The stony places, or superficial hearers (vv. 5, 6, cf. vv. 20, 21).

This means stones with a thin layer of soil upon them. Under such conditions the seed springs up quickly, but likewise scorches quickly. Hearts superficially impressed receive God's Word with joy, but when persecution and trials come they are not able to endure.

3. The thorny ground, or pre-occupied hearers (v. 7, cf. v. 22).

In this case the ground is good, mellow enough and of sufficient depth, but has thorns in it. Such really hear the Word of God, but the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches and the lusts of other things, entering in choke the Word and it becomes unfruitful (Mark 4:19).

Many are the "thorny ground" hearers of this age. The good seed cannot mature because (1) of worldliness. Men and women are completely absorbed in the things of business and are burdened with care. (2) The deceitfulness of riches. Anxious care in business brings riches to many. The effect of riches is to blunt the spiritual perception of men. (3) Lusts of other things entering in. This means the pleasures of life. All these things choke the Word of God. Many of the enjoyments of the world may be innocent in themselves, but they attract so much attention and consume so much energy and time that one has no time for Bible reading, meditation and prayer.

4. The good ground, or fruitful hearers (v. 8. cf. v. 23).

"But other fell into good ground and brought forth fruit." This ground differed from all the rest. It was mellow, deep and moist, therefore it was capable of bringing forth fruit, a hundred, some sixty and some thirty fold. In the measure that the heart is kept free from worldliness, riches and pleasures, the good seed matures.

III. The Purpose of Teaching in Parables (vv. 10-17).

There is much misapprehension concerning teaching in parables. The parabolic method of teaching makes clear the truth to those that love it, but conceals it from those who have a distaste for it. Jesus did not teach by parables till the rulers had set their hearts against Him. When in the light of His miracles and wonderful works they turned against him and attributed His works to the devil, He denounced them in the most scathing terms and began to teach in parables, in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah (Matt. 13:14, 15; cf. Isa. 6:9, 10).

What Love Is

Love is the simple desire for the highest good of another or of others, and is the expression of a spirit of self-surrender.—Bishop Westcott.

Almost Put His Foot In It

Archibaldson, the pressman, almost put his foot in it last week. The Republican was about ready to go to press when he got a couple of articles, one in regard to a recent wedding, and the other an auction salt. He hurriedly set them on the machine and if Scoop hadn't read proof on them, here is how they would have appeared in the paper: (of course, I won't use the correct names.) "James Anderson and Sadie Glich were disposed of at auction Wednesday morning at ten o'clock in front of my barn two miles west of a lovely cluster of roses and two spotted heifers, before a background of farm implements in the presence of a few intimate friends, including four milch cows, three mules and a cornplanter.

Rev. Jones tied the knot with three pairs of lines and the happy couple left for an extended trip on a grain drill, followed by a shower of rice and many good wishes with terms to suit the purchaser."

Down On The Farm

After Jessie had been at the boarding school a few weeks she began signing her letters "Jessica." Her brother Tom wanted to give her a dig about her college airs, and wrote:

"Dear Jessica:-Daddica and Momica have gone to visit Aunt Lizzica. Uncle Samica is talking of buying a new machinica, but he doesn't know whether to get a Fordica or Chevica. The old cowica had a calfica. I was going to call it Nellica, but I changed it to Jimica because it is a bullica. Your brother, Tomica."

Nominations In Order

For fear that Scoop won't be able to be at the meeting of the citizens on Thursday he takes this opportunity of nominating Reed Smouse and Tom Flanigan for mayor. The Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work is said to be behind Reed, while Tom has behind him the Daughters of Corn Canners, and members of the "Now-don't-you-repeat-this" circle.

The council members will be named tonight when the committee decides on who to nominate. It is rumored that the most squabbling is over, the position of treasurer. At a political meeting of the Amalgamates held last night everyone present got one vote for treasurer in the secret ballot.

It was definitely decided to nominate Republicans. This was fixed upon by tossing a coin in the air, heads for Republicans and tails for the Democrats.

The first time it was tails, but of course it should be two times out of three. The second time it was Republican. The third time it came Democratic so the tosser decided three out of five times was really more just. This kept up until the Republicans had it, five out of nine, and it was decided not to carry the thing any further.

Introductions in Order

Because this may possible be the last time the three councilmen, Stemple, Thayer and Ashby, will ever be in the public spotlight, Scoop had Col. Bell get action photos of each one. Even if this county doesn't show as much profit as Baltimore City, at least it isn't in the shape that Chicago is in.

Here is Ralph Thayer, member of the department of streets, who believes in heating with coal and keeping warm, and really nobody blames him for that.

Here is Monk Stemple, who aspires to higher things; he has the executive ability of President Coolidge, but talks a lot more.

And here is Jesse Ashby, a native son of Garrett county, but who won't run for president on those grounds.

Monday night was their last session (unless reelected) and they prolonged it as long as they could.

Council Chamber Men

The Three Hold-Overs

The three hold-overs, Bill Whorton, H. P. (horsepower) Stuck, and Geo. Little, or in other words Whorton Stuck Little, will have one more year to complete street improvements around their properties before they slide out of the picture. Labor ought to be cheaper for these three than anybody else. They can get the B. and O. to haul their material and get it in shape in Bill's cement mixer.

Three Municipal Orators

P. S. Mayor Fraley hid behind the fire truck and wouldn't let Col. Bell snap him.

BITTINGER

March, thus far, has been living up to her reputation for wind and fickle weather.

Following the spring like weather of the last days of February, on Sunday, March 2, we found our village in the midst of a sonw storm, which again blocked the local roads with drifts and the temperature went several degrees below freezing.

The sudden change in the temperature, on last Saturday night, made it necessary for some sugar camp owners to gather the sugar water from their vessels on Sunday, in order to prevent them bursting from the freezing.

While at work in the fields on the Asa Bittinger farm one day last week, Thomas O. Hayes reports having killed four good sized snakes, which were going about quite lively for so early in the year.

The blizzard of last Sunday morning made necessary the abandoning of Sunday School and church services in this village.

C. W. Browning, Oakland, was in this village on Monday of last week, and while here announced that he would be a candidate for the office of County Treasurer, on the Republican ticket, at the next fall election.

Miss Catherine Richter, Accident, spent the week-end here as the guest of Miss Alma Beachy.

A large Durham cow, on the Silas C. Beachy farm, near here, now being fattened for beef, tips the scales at 1645 pounds.

Sheriff W. D. Casteel and Mr. Richard West, Oakland, together with a party of prohibition enforcement officers, made some investigations in this neighborhood last week, but without success.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wiley were shopping in Oakland on Wednesday of last week.

Messrs. F. M. Bittinger and son Carl, and Mr. Earl Stark, attended the A. R. Martin public sale in Oakland, last Tuesday.

With all the fine, warm weather which prevailed during the last ten days of February, very little maple sugar was made in the local camps and the veteran sugar maker is unable to account for the failure of the trees to leak.

Harvey Broadwater, of the Backwoods settlement, was a business visitor in this village on Friday of last week.

"Nellie" Broadwater and son, of near New Germany, were shopping here last Saturday morning.

Frank Brenneman was called to the bedside of his wife, who is ill at her father's home near New Germany, on last Tuesday.

A number of villagers attended the public sale of the personal property of Charles J. Sechler, at St. Paul, Pa., last Saturday.

NEW RECORD IS MADE FOR MARRIAGES IN FEBRUARY

Seventy-three Permits Were Issued During Past Month

The all-time marriage record for the month of February was broken last week when 26 marriage licenses were issued, bringing the total for the shortest month of the year to 73, and giving March a boost with a total of 13 permits on one day, Saturday, March 1. The highest mark reached previously in February was in 1926 when 65 permits were granted.

The totnl for February was 13 more than the total for the same month last year, and practically makes up for the low mark made in January when only 47 were issued, according to E. Z. Tower, clerk. Saturday, March 1, was the busiest single day for some time past, with 13 licenses issued. One license was marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a permit on account of the youthfulness of one of the contracting parties.

THE MATCH MARRER

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

CONNY Glade, glancing up from her late roses, saw a disconsolate little figure in blue moving in the adjoining yard and beckoned.

"Come on over, Hortense, and get one of my sunbursts," she called.

Hortense Gray came slowly across the grass. She was a sweet-faced girl whose pallor, usually becoming, today gave her a haggard intensity of expression.

"Danced too much last night at the mid-month party?" inquired Conny, "I didn't go myself, Junior is teething."

"I didn't go, either."

"You didn't?" Conny nearly dropped the marvelously tinted rose she was handing to Hortense. "I thought you and Norman never missed a chance to dance. Was he out of town?"

"No." Hortense pressed the roses to her lips to hide their trembling. Conny, glancing at her left hand, started and spoke before she thought:

"Why, Hortense! Your ring! Have you lost it?"

Hortense looked up with such a piteous, dim lift to her blue eyes that Conny instinctively put an arm about her.

"You don't—you can't mean that—" Conny could go no further.

Hortense nodded.

"It is all over. Norman—" she gave a little sob. "I think he doesn't care any more. And—and I don't want anybody who doesn't care. So I gave him back his ring. We're unengaged, you see." Her laugh broke into tears.

"You poor little darling!" was all Conny could say.

"It's all right," Hortense said. "But I can't think what changed him. I haven't done anything. Well! I shall live through it some way." And because she was afraid of breaking down she marched away with her poor, quivering chin held high in the air.

"So that's that!" Conny confided to her roses. "Why, it will spoil Hortense's whole life. She has had showers and her hope chest is full. Norman is a fine fellow. I can't think what has happened, and I can see that poor Hortense does not know."

Conny was troubled. Her own married life was so beautifully serene that she would have had all her friends happy in a like fashion. Hortense and Norman had seemed particularly well suited to each other, and she had looked forward to having them for neighbors. Another young married pair in the neighborhood would be so pleasant.

"How's your roses coming on?"

Conny, interrupted in thought, turned to see a tall dark old woman crossing the grass.

"Oh, good morning, Miss Plopper!" she said, but it was as if a dark shadow had obscured the sun. Conny did not like Miss Plopper.

Now, however, with patient desire to be neighborly, she broke a ravishing rose from its stem and gave it to her visitor. Miss Plopper sniffed and shook her head.

"No smell to it," she commented.

"That is because it is a tea," Conny smiled. "How is the world with you this morning, Miss Plopper?"

"Just as good as it is with others, I guess." Miss Plopper looked across at the Gray house. "How's Hortense taking her broken engagement?" she asked.

Conny jumped. The uncanny old thing! She simply knew everything.

"I knew that wouldn't go through," went on Miss Plopper. "Norman's my great nephew, you know."

"So he is," murmured Conny.

"He don't want to marry yet for five or six years, till he's made his way. It's a mistake for folks to marry so young." She moved away, homeward.

Conny sat down on the bench under the horse-chestnut tree. She was surprised, bewildered, suspicious. Snatches of talk came to her, things she had seen with her own eyes. There had been a perfect train of broken engagements during the past year. There were Ivan Howe and Hilda Tucker, ready to be married and yet parted. There were Joe Van Cott and Lillian Rhodes, there were—Conny knew them all. Her own engagement had wavered for a time; Miss Plopper had told her something about Jack and she had foolishly believed it. Miss Plopper had gone to Lillian Rhodes with a story. Miss Plopper—why, it was Miss Plopper all the way through! She knew everybody, her tongue was like a needle, she had influence, she was related to the Howes and the Rhodes and to Norman Wilcox; her opinions carried weight because she was extremely wealthy and some day Norman and Ivan and Lillian would be her heirs, to say nothing of many more whom Conny could not name upon the instant.

"The old match marrer!" Conny breathed. "I see through her now. I wonder what I can do!"

Nothing it seemed, and yet Conny thought hard. She could not bear to see little Hortense's blue eyes full of that silent pain. Darling Hortense! Horrid old Miss Plopper! But she must inquire into the matter a little more first.

Hurrying to the telephone she invited Norman to supper, after which she told Jack that his friend was coming. Then she prepared to halt her little trap with a thick, juicy steak flavored with onions. None better than Conay knew that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach.

It was a perfect meal and both men praised the dainty cook. Afterward while Jack did a bit of writing Conny sat with Norman on the porch in the moonlight and by every wile she knew coaxed the story of the broken engagement out of her guest. Norman was frank; he was hurt, his dignity was threatened. Hortense had gone riding with Leland Yates in that red sport car of his, and Leland Yates was anathema. He couldn't stand for it, his girl parading before the public eye with Leland Yates! No he hadn't given her a chance to explain, he had just told her they better call things off. And she had. No, he hadn't been unduly suspicious; of course he hadn't seen her with Leland, but he had heard about it, every detail; how they had stopped at the Willow Tree Inn for lunch. At that Norman snorted.

"I wonder," Conny inquired very softly, "if it could have been your Aunt Dora who saw Leland and Hortense together?"

"Yes, it was," exploded Norman. "She happened to be passing the inn in Mrs. Bank's car when Hortense and that man came out to get into that speedster."

"But," purred Conny. "I wonder if she told you that Helen Warner was with them and that Leland has been trying for three years to get Helen to marry him and that she has only just now made up her mind that—she will, for the sake of reforming him."

"No! Is that so?" shouted Norman. At that instant a sweet sound rose on the air. It was Hortense's violin. She was playing "Con Amore."

"You better go and ask Hortense. She'll tell you the truth," Connie said firmly. "If she never forgives you remember it is your fault because you didn't go to her like a man in the first place."

Norman went. And as he departed Connie flew to Miss Plopper's. She bounced in upon the spinster with fire in her eyes.

"Norman's gone back to Hortense," she blazed. "Now I am going to tell you something."

The commotion that ensued was terribly exciting. But Conay, keyed up to do her best, had the match marrer beaten forty ways. She had gathered more than one scrap of information from Norman.

"Just because your ill-nature sent the man you loved from you and embittered your whole life you've no business to want to make everybody else as miserable as yourself," was her final shot as she departed.

Then she ran home to cry on Jack's shoulder, leaving the match marrer to her own reflections.

Ambrosia Poor Second to Good Golden Corn

They could not touch us, those old Arcadians, in the matter of living well, nor, indeed, could the Olympians. Who would trade a heap of Golden Bantam sweet corn, for example, for a ton of the poets' ambrosia? Nothing doing. Nor in Longfellow's poetically described dreamful land, or in any other land, did human beings ever enjoy the quality and variety of Nature's food that Americans enjoy.

Nothing so lifts the spirit, stirs the ambition and satisfies the palate as the tender, timely roastin' ear; flanked by sweet potatoes, rich red tomatoes, with brown fried chicken on the side, with gooseberry marmalade or currant jelly and hot biscuits. Lucullus, could he have lived and dined anywhere in the Ohio or Miami valleys, might have established a real reputation.

Nothing like it—except in thousands of other blessed American valley lands.

And breakfast: The colors of the sunset and the sea are the colors of the cantaloupe, and its delectable, teasing odor wooes us even as the soft breath of a maiden sweetheart; and its flavor is born of the moonlight and the dews of heaven wedded with the sunlight and the sweeping rains.

Or maybe you will prefer watermelon. Green glory and flame-hued congealed sweetness, that is what watermelon is; and it is not, never was and never will be criminal or wrong for lads to sneak 'em from a burdened patch in the dark of the moon, or any other old time if they can get away with it.

And all these blessings, known only in restricted, emasculated measure to the dim Arcadians, are ours to have and to hold—as much of 'em as we can hold, which in a normal Christian adult is a plenty.

And with them we have the hollyhocks, hyhiscus, the sunfaced daisy, the rippling of the rivers and the calling of the birds. What more could mortal wish?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Odd Water Bug

The water boatman, an aquatic bug, is found in enormous numbers in lakes near Mexico City. It swims on the top of the water and it is supposed to be able to see an enemy coming from any direction. Because of a hairy filament which covers its body and contains a thin film of air, it can live under water for a long time. The eggs are laid under water and are attached to weeds. The natives use these eggs with meal in making cakes. Adult bugs are also eaten by the natives.

How Could It Be Hot?

"Gosh, it was hot out at the ball park this afternoon," remarked Mr. Dumbbell.

"Why, John, I always thought they had plenty of fans out there," exclaimed his wife.

The candidates were all nominated at the citizens' meeting held last Thursday evening at the City Hall and only one ticket was named. Mayor Fraley opened the meeting. C. N. Wild Geese and Ducks Stop on Little Savage

Farmers from Little Savage mountain last Friday witnessed an unusual sight when hundreds of wild geese and ducks, bewildered by the heavy snow storm, sought refuge on the protected slope of the mountain.

The birds remained afoot for several hours until prospects of clearing weather when they, assembled taking wing in four different groups, headed to a southeasterly direction. The birds made a landing in Garrett county territory.

A large audience was present yesterday evening at the second series of the union Lenten services being conducted by the churches of Oakland each Wednesday evening during Lent.

LICENSING ORDINANCE IS PASSED BY CITY COUNCIL

Decision to Revise Revenue Producing Ordinance Made in 1927

Publication of an ordinance relating to revenue to be raised by the issuance of licenses and providing for the collection of fees for the same and penalties for failure to secure such licenses by those engaged in business enterprises in Oakland, revision of which ordinance had its inception in June, 1927, and which was finally enacted at the last meeting of the Mayor and City Council, appears in The Republican today.

The ordinance, which became effective immediately upon its passage and approval by the Mayor, provides for the issuance of licenses for conducting business establishments of all kinds, for peddling goods, for maintaining or operating gasoline pumps at the curb, for conducting shooting galleries, shoeshine parlors, skating rinks, fortune telling booths, pool and billiard parlors, bolling alleys, for the use of streets by circuses and for the exhibition of the same, carnival attractions, theatrical exhibitions, etc., for the solicitation of subscriptions for any magazine or periodical and for other business enterprises.

Council, in June, 1927, considered the repeal and renactment of the revenue producing ordinance, when it was pointed out that certain sections of the original odinance would not apply at this time, and that many new problems had arisen since the enactment of the original law and hence would have to be considered.

The matter was tabled at the time and was not again taken up until in January of the present year. The revision was made at that time and all sections not applying to business conditions existing at this time were stricken out and others added, thus bringing the law up to present-day conditions and requirements to make it just and applicable, and was finally passed at the March meeting of the Council and approved by Mayor Fraley.

Oakland High School News

Last Friday a radio program was given in the auditorium. The program was under the direction of Walter Damrosh and was especially interesting to the music pupils.

Mr. W. K. Klingaman, state supervisor of Maryland Public Schools, visited the school on Tuesday. He visited the different classes to see what progress the pupils were making.

On Tuesday Mr. John Dunkle, principal of the Frostburg State Normal school, visited Oakland High. He was accompanied by Miss Helen Gibson and Mr. Friend. Talks were given by each of them on the Frostburg State Normal school.

The Oakland High school baseball team prospects have been warming up during the fine weather last week. There will be but one or two changes on the team this year. "Perry" Dawson, catcher on our county championship team last spring, will not be available this year. Several boys are trying for that post. Our hopes will rest largely with the strong right arm of Don Colaw, who will pitch. As reserve pitchers we will have "Babe" Maroney and Donald Moore, a southpaw. Two men were lost from the baseball squad by graduation, "Buck" Casteel and Ernest Spoerlein.

Full Grown Deer Runs Through Edge of Oakland

A full grown deer entered the edge of Oakland last Friday morning, plunging into the Little Youghiogheny river at the Baltimore and Ohio pumping station at the foot of Fourth street, and swimming down the stream to a point below the Glessman bridge on Third street, emerged from the water on the north side and then recrossed the river and disappeared in the undergrowth covering Ferguson's Hill.

The deer was seen by three persons —Joe Bill Ours, Gorman Thayer and Porter DeWitt—all of whom said it appeared to be a full grown animal.

This is first time in probably fifty years that a deer has been seen within the limits of the town.

Judge L. S. Schwenck, in an address at Fairmont, last week, stated that 3 million have joined the Boy Scouts since 1910 and that in 30 colleges two-fifth of the students were Boy Scouts.

MRS. A. L. LEE CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Is First to Announce Intentions Officially—Is Also First Woman Republican Candidate

In today's issue of The Republican Mrs. A. L. Lee, of Oakland, announces her candidacy for the nomination as county treasurer in the primary election, to be held this fall when candidates for the position of State senator, member of the house of delegates, clerk of the circuit court, sheriff, county treasurer, county commissioner, clerk to the county commissioners, county surveyor, judge of the orphans' court, register of wills, and state's attorney, will be chosen by the citizens of Garrett county.

Mrs. Lee is not only the first one to officially "cast her hat" into the political ring, but is also the first woman to become a candidate for a county office on the Republican ticket. She has been associated with her husband in the office of the county treasurer for the past several years and is well acquainted with the duties of that position.

With Mrs. Lee's official announcement appearing this week, many others are expected to publicly announce their candidacy for the various offices in the near future. There will be a large number of aspirants for county positions this year, it is said.

Former Garrett Countian Held Up and Shot in Chicago.

Miss Viola Broadwater, instructor in music in the Oakland schools, was in receipt of a message a few days ago announcing that her brother, Dr. Melvin F. Broadwater, who is a dentist at the Edward Hines, Junior, Hospital, Chicago, Ill., had been held up and shot by two bandits a few days previous to the receipt of the message. The bullet fired by the bandit took effect in Dr. Broadwater's left shoulder. He had just returned from his duties at the hospital and was putting his car into a garage near his home when the gangsters appeared, coming from a shadowed spot in the street or alleyway. Seeing his danger and sensing the fact that his life was endangered, he ran and the shot was fired. He gave an alarm but before help arrived the men had disappeared. A short time prior one of Dr. Broadwater's neighbors was shot and instantly killed near the same spot. Dr. Broadwater was taken to a hospital immediately where the bullet was extracted. He is now almost entirely recovered from the wound and shock to his system and has returned to his duties.

To Outline Summer Program of Activities For Boy Scouts

The summer program to be carried out by Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will be outlined at a meeting of the officers of the troop following the regular meeting of the Scouts on Friday evening in the Scout hall.

The program will be arranged so that the members of the troop will get action, instruction, recreation and inspiration, four necessary achievements, if the troop is to remain on a par with other troops of this section.

The monthly inspection of the troop was held at the meeting last Friday and a number of pictures given out for the scouts to sell to help raise money for their camp fund. These pictures are the property of the American Legion. One-third of the money collected will be given to the Scout fund. The pictures show the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington Cemetery, with the City of Washington as a background for the setting.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TO BE FEATURED IN MOVIE SOON

Film is Description of Roads System in State of Maryland

The National Pike is the featured subject of a motion picture film which is descriptive of the Maryland roads system and will be shown soon thruout the United States.

Cumberland, the starting point of the National Pike westward, plays an important part in the movie. "Traveler's Toll" is the title of the picture.

The feature was prepared by the highway division of the Federal Department of Agriculture and seeks to explain, among other things, Maryland's 4-cent gasoline tax.

The chief characters are an old toll-gate keeper, now a filling station proprietor, and a California motorist. The toll-gate keeper sketches for the Californian the development and expense of the Maryland road system from its earliest beginning when private companies built the roads and took their return from tolls.

When the railroads came, the companies retired and the roads fell into disuse and ruin until the State took over their reconstruction and the building of new ones.

The film also takes the spectator over the National Route 40, from California to Maryland, showing scenes along the way and the improved conditions as compared with those in other states.

Local Men Win Suit At Hagerstown Court Saturday

The $30,000 damage suit brought by Foss L. Collins, of Terra Alta, W. Va., against Lawrence K. Dixon and Jos. E. Helbig, of Oakland, and arising out of an alleged assault, was concluded in the Washington County Circuit Court at Hagerstown on Saturday afternoon with a verdict in favor of both defendants. The case aroused considerable interest among the people of Oakland and the surrounding community and the verdict was received with pleasure by the many friends of the defendants.

The alleged offense took place on November 28, 1927, at which time the plaintiff complained of the loss of sight of his right eye and numerous bodily injuries. It was shown to the satisfaction of the jury that the plaintiff was the aggressor and that neither of the defendants committed an assault upon him. It was further shown that the injuries complained of by the plaintiff had been received by him a number of years previous to 1927 and in no wise arose out of the alleged assault and that he had been afflicted from early childhood with eye trouble.

Counsel for the plaintiff during the course of the litigation were Messrs. S. F. Hamill and A. T. Matthews of Oakland; W. Bruce Talbott, of Philippi, W. Va.; M. E. Snider, of Kingwood, W. Va.; Wm. C. Walsh, of Cumberland, and W. Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, Messrs. Hamill, Talbott and Lane being at the trial table. Counsel for the defendants were Messrs. E. R. Jones, of Oakland, and J. Lloyd Harshman, of Hagerstown.

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland realized $157.21 as a result of a food sale, concert and card party held on Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday of the past week. The receipts were divided as follows: Food sale, $49.71; concert, $38.50; programs $16; card party, $50; donation $2, Dr. Ralph Kercheval; miscellaneous $1.

The drive for funds was conducted in order to raise money to purchase uniforms for the members of the band. "I am thoroughly satisfied as to the results," R. R. Gilbert, director, stated.

BAD CHECK ARTIST TRIES WRONG PERSON WHEN HE ATTEMPTS TO OUTWIT MANAGER OF COFFMAN-FISHER

I. R. Rudy could have qualified for constable yesterday after apprehending I. J. Kelly, who had passed a bad check on the Coffman-Fisher company store, and taking him before Justice W. A. Gonder, without a sign of a protest from the offender.

Kelly, who drove a car carrying an Ohio license, was unable to get his broken-down car started along the State road yesterday. He walked into Oakland, bought a pair of arctics from Mr. Rudy, wrote a check for $5, signing the name of J. Strawser, and left the store with a couple of dollars in cash.

Finding the check worthless Mr. Rudy had a warrant issued for his arrest which was turned over to an officer. Mr. Rudy, of his own accord, then pursued, overtook and questioned Kelly about the check. Kelly was finally persuaded to come up into Mr. Rudy's "office" to talk it over, but when he entered the "office" he found it to be Justice Gonder's court room.

A hearing was held and Kelly committed to jail until he could make the check good and pay the costs of the case. Kelly states that he has a number of friends in the county who will pay his expenses.

FAIRSWEEP LEADS OTHER SCHOOLS IN ATTENDANCE

Has Record of 100 Percent for Fifth Consecutive Month

Fairsweep school, for the fifth consecutive month, had a record of 100 percent in attendance and led all other schools for the month of February, according to John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer.

Thirty eight schools had a higher percentage of attendance for February than for the preceding month, five had the same percentage, and the remaining 103 schools had their attendance records lowered by a number of minor disease epidemics.

Accident led the high schools of the county with a percentage of 95.3 followed by Grantsville, Kitzmiller, Kempton, Friendsville and Oakland respectively.

Schools raising their percentage during February include Wilson, Frankville, Hoye's Run, Green Glade, Spring Glade, Broadford, Armistead, Mt. Lake Park, Pleasant Valley, Sang Run, Sebold, New Germany, Myers, McKenzie, Bethel, Chestnut Grove, Laughlin, Mar's Hill, Manadier, Dry Run, Yoder, Winding Ridge, Selbysport, Bond, Friendsville, Elder Hill, McCabe, Rush, North Glade, Glendale, Lynndale, Kempton, Mason, Dodson-Shallmar, Kitzmiller, Swan Meadow, Three Fork Run, Silver Knob.

The percentage of attendance for the Oakland supervisory unit was 90.4; Grantsville unit was 89.1; Friendsville unit was 90.6, and the Kitzmiller unit was 86.4.

STATE TO FURNISH TREES FOR ROADSIDE PLANTING

To Be Given Free to Responsible Organizations or Individuals

The State Department of Forestry, in order to establish suitable demonstrations of roadside planting thruout the State, is offering to furnish free trees to organizations or responsible individuals for such planting under the following conditions:

The planting must extend for not less than one-quarter of a mile on both sides of an improved highway, the trees to be spaced not less than 40 nor more than 100 feet apart on each side.

Trees must be planted within the public right of way and far enough from the edge of paved highway to meet requirements of the road authorities.

The consent of abutting property owners must be secured for such planting.

The trees available for roadside planting include white ash, green ash, honey locust, tulip poplar, Oriental plane, cypress and catalpa. They are furnished free at the College Park Nursery, on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard, or f. o. b. railroad shipping point. The applicant must pay the transportation charges, furnish the labor for the planting of the trees, provide at least one guard stake for each tree and then must give reasonable assurance that the trees will be properly cared for after planting. The Forestry Department, in addition to furnishing the trees, will supervise the planting.

Applications will be filled in the order received and trees furnished to those who comply with the conditions, where it is found by examination of the locality by the Department that planting is practicable. Write for the application blanks to the Department of Forestry, 1411 Fidelity Building, Baltimore, Md.

A Correction

To the Editor of The Republican.

I noticed in The Republican the statement made that street work in Oakland during the past year cost 27 cents per square yard less than it was ever done before. Cost per square yard was given as 56 cents average.

Taking the work on South end of Main street as an example by way of comparison:

Labor and stone	$466.08
Gas for roller	3.45
60 tons screening @ $1.75 per ton	105.00
Hauling screening @ 40c. per ton	24.00
Total cost	$598.53

There are 1180 square yards in this street and the total cost therefore is 50.72c. per square yard.

I am taking this street as an example because it cost more per square yard than any of the other streets built previous to 1929.

STUART F. HAMILL NAMED MEMBER OF SCHOOL BOARD

Appointment Was Made Monday By Governor Albert C. Ritchie, Which Ends Contention

The appointment of Mr. Stuart F. Hamill, of Oakland, as a member of the Garrett County Board of Education was announced Monday afternoon by Governor Albert C. Ritchie and Tuesday morning Mr. Hamill's commission as a member of the local board was received at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court from the Executive offices at Annapolis.

The vacancy in the School Board personnel was created by the death of the late John O. Thayer, of Oakland, which occurred during the month of November of last year. Mr. Thayer had been a member of the Board for ten years, having been appointed in 1920.

The appointment was made, according to a letter received by a member of the Republican State Central Committee from Governor Ritchie, "after careful inquiry among a number of interested Garrett county citizens."

Mr. Hamill's appointment as a member of the Board of Education is quite satisfactory to one wing of the local Democratic party and to some of the opposition who were unfavorable to him at first but who have been placated to a considerable extent following the two meetings of the Democratic State Central Committee when that body could not agree upon a candidate to be recommended to the Governor for appointment, three members of the committee favoring Mr. Hamill, while the other three members of the body opposed him and recommended the appointment of Mr. Robert W. Sheckels, of Swanton.

The Republican committee of the county recommended Mr. Henry M. Speicher's appointment to fill the existing vacancy and it was the expressed desire of not only the greater majority of Republicans that he be appointed but a number of Democrats as well expressed their desire that he be appointed, thus giving the majority party in the county a minority member of the board. Mr. Speicher's appointment was also urged by Senator Naylor and by the members of the Lower House.

It is the opinion of many, however, that Mr. Hamill, the new member of the education board, will be impartial in his judgment and will give the office the attention its great importance to not only the children but the interests of the taxpayers requires.

Mr. Hamill will have as his comembers on the board former State Senator John W. McCullough, of Friendsville, and Mr. H. A. Loraditch of Oakland, both of whom are Democrats.

Lesson for March 16

THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:24-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Whole World for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The World for Christ.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Religion Means to Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Christianity Means to the World.

The things set forth in these parables only apply to the church in the measure that they permeate that body by virtue of its being formed within this period. It should be observed that they set forth the "mysteries" of the kingdom.

I. The Wheat and Tares (vv. 24-30, cf. 36-43).

1. The sowers. The sower of the good seed is the Son of Man (v. 37), and the sower of the tares is the devil (v. 39).

2. The growing crops (v. 26).

There is a striking resemblance in the growing crops. The chief peril of the devil is that he transforms himself into an angel of light (II Cor. 11:14, 15).

3. The harvests (v. 30).

There comes a time when the fruit of the crop shall be gathered. The separation is made by the angels under the direction of the Son of Man. For the tares there is a furnace of fire. For the wheat there is the Lord's garner.

II. The Mustard Seed (vv. 31, 32).

1. Its unimportant beginning (v. 1).

It begins as the least of all seeds. Not only was Christ, the King, of humble parentage, but His disciples were unlettered fishermen. Likewise, through the centuries, not many wise and not many noble have been called.

2. Its vigorous growth (v. 32).

Though small in its inception, the work inaugurated by Christ has become mighty in power.

3. Its lodging capacity (v. 32).

The birds which find lodgment in the tree do not represent the children of men who find safety and salvation in the church, but the predatory beings who have found shelter in the church, though they are no part of it.

III. The Leavened Meal (v. 33).

1. The meal in Scripture means something nutritious and wholesome.

It was used in one of the sweet savour offerings which typified Christ (Lev. 2:1-3 R. V.).

2. The woman.

The woman is the administrator of the home. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head of the home and prepare and distribute it to the children. It means then that the woman, the administrator, has introduced false doctrine and thus corrupted the children's bread.

3. The leaven.

In Scripture, leaven is invariably a type of evil (Ex. 12:15; Matt. 16:6, 12; 1 Cor. 5:6-8; Gal. 5:8, 9). It means that in this age the truth of God would be corrupted by worldliness and unbelief.

IV. The Hid Treasure (v. 44).

1. The field (v. 38). Christ's own interpretion makes this the world.

2. The treasure. The treasure means Israel (Ps. 135:4, Deut. 7:6-8).

3. The purchaser. No one but the Son of God had sufficient resources to buy the world (John 3:16).

4. The purchase price. This was the precious blood of Jesus Christ, God's beloved Son (I Pet. 1:18, 19).

V. The Merchantman Seeking Pearls (vv. 45, 46).

1. The merchantman is Christ. The Son of Man has come to seek and save that which was lost (Luke 19:10).

2. The purchase price. Christ impoverished Himself (Phil. 2:6-8) to purchase the one pearl of great price (Eph. 5:25).

3. The pearl of great price. This is the church (Col. 1:18).

VI. The Dragnet (vv. 47-50).

1. The sea. The sea in Scripture denotes peoples or multitudes (Dan. 7:3; Rev. 17:15).

2. The dragnet. The dragnet cast into the sea means the sowing of the seed by the Son of Man.

3. The dragnet drawn to the shore when full means that when God's purpose for the present age is full, account will be taken of the results.

4. The separation made by the angels. This will take place at the end of the age.

5. The destiny of the bad fish. The angels shall sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

The Bravest Men

Our bravest men are often those of whom the world hears the least. Life to them is a constant struggle. They meet their obstacles every day and pass them in silence.—Presbyterian Record.

When You Are Right

Alice in the Subway

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

HE WAS the kind of man who seemed to be holding a perpetual competition for the "prettiest girl" or "the most beautiful girl." In this competition he was sole judge and the contestants were girls he chanced to meet or to see anywhere. It seemed to be a game that interested him immensely and that made even a ride in a crowded subway car something of an adventure.

Thus he was engaged one afternoon when the offices of the business section had just poured forth their girls on their way homeward. This time the laurels were awarded without delay. The girl who stood opposite him in the vestibule of the subway car was so fresh of face, so gracefully proportioned, so brown of eye and golden of hair that she won with flying colors. In fact, she was perhaps the prettiest girl he—

Then the surprising thing happened. The pretty girl quietly stepped over to him.

"You're John Laurence, aren't you?" she said.

It was surprising because he wasn't John Laurence.

"You bet I am, John Laurence's my name all right."

"You don't remember me?" she asked, with disappointment.

"I remember your face—couldn't forget that," he assured. "But the name has slipped me."

"Alice," she reminded. "I used to sit in front of you in school. You used to walk home after school, too, and carry my books."

"So I did, so I did. You look just the same. Let's see, how many years ago was that?"

"Ten, wasn't it?" she figured. "We were fifteen then and we're twenty-five now."

Enormous satisfaction swept over the man. He was thirty-two.

"I guess I look a whole lot older than you," he flushed.

"Well, maybe, but then I suppose you have worked pretty hard. I heard you had graduated from Harvard and had gone in business," she said.

"And I'd really like to see you again and talk over school days." She put her hand out. "Come and see me some time. I live exactly where I did ten years ago. I am getting out here tonight to see a friend."

And there the man stood glued to the side of the car. When he came to his senses and tried to follow, the subway door promptly slammed in his face.

Jim Kelly took time the next day to drop in at the Harvard club in town and find from there something of one John Laurence. He found that he operated a factory, some sixty miles out of the city. The next day was Saturday and Jim took a two o'clock train.

He found John Laurence, and was not flattered at having to consider himself his double. To be sure they were of the same build and coloring. Their features were similar, though John Laurence looked his junior by ten years.

"I've come on a rather curious errand," he began in a grandiose manner. "You see, I happened to meet a little girl—a chance meeting, but we got rather well acquainted. She gave me her address written on a card and somehow I lost it. Now I didn't want to disappoint her. Being a man of resources I tried to work on what clews I had. She spoke of having gone to school with a John Laurence—said that she thought we might be cousins because of some slight family resemblance.

"So I happened to be out here today and thought I'd drop around and get you to give me her address. I can't remember her last name, but her first name is Alice. She said she lived exactly where she did when she knew you. She said she hadn't thought of you once for ten years until something in my face reminded her distinctly of you."

Something in the last remark brought the color rising to John Laurence's face.

"I thought you'd give me the address. I have other ways of getting, it, but—"

"You'll have to use your other sources, then," said John Laurence. "And I wish you good afternoon."

Jim Kelly did not feel entirely thwarted by this rebuff, and two weeks later when he chanced to see the charming Alice in the subway one evening he felt that he had been peculiarly blessed.

"This time I'm going to get your address, little lady," he said.

Then he noticed the circle of diamonds on her left hand. Perhaps she had drawn her glove off on purpose.

"Does that ring mean anything?" asked Jim awkwardly.

"It has the most wonderful meaning in the world. You know the time I saw you first I thought you were John Laurence, and I guess I didn't give you a chance to say you weren't. A few days later the real John Laurence came to see me. He was a very good friend of mine and now, now we're engaged. Don't you think that was a wonderful coincidence?"

"Oh, I don't see anything very remarkable about that," said Jim Kelly. The subway train had stopped and he suddenly decided it was time for him to get off. "Who'd have thought," he said to himself with a smile, "that old Jim Kelly would play cupid in spite of himself!"

One On The Amalgamates

After thinking that they had something on Scoop ever since Valentine's Day, the Amalgamntes discovered a few days ago that it was Scoop who had something on them.

On February 14, when all the well-known personages of town were receiving their comic strips, sent out by the hand of some unknown character, Scoop failed to receive his. He announced the fact to the Amalgamates who thought that he was trying to put one over on them. But the other day when Betty Dawson was making his monthly clean-up campaign among the highways and by-ways of Harned's drug store, he found a letter behind the cash register addressed to Scoop, and in it was the Valentine.

As yet the epistle has not been turned over to Scoop. So the contents cannot be printed. Next year, they promise to put the job of mailing the letters into the hands of a responsible person.

Sadie Gilch, the woman about town, says the man who asks a girl to all the shows, dances, carnivals and everything that comes along is the man nobody "no's".

And while we are still thinking of Sadie, we are reminded of her version of scandal. "Scandal is when nobody did anything and somebody told it," she says.

Swanton Heard From

Swanton was heard from again this week in the personage of Art Green. He told Ches Browning that he was holding up work on the building of the platform until he found out how many candidates were going to run for county offices this fall. If he waits several weeks, there isn't going to be a lumber mill in Garrett county big enough to supply the material, and the celebration will have to be moved to Bloomington.

Scoop Gets Action

Scoop is going to take entire credit for getting a little action out of the Governor on this School Board appointment. After he read The Republican two weeks ago, he wrote Scoop a letter begging him to refrain from giving him any undue publicity because he might want to run for some office sometime, and if he would promise, then he (the governor) would make the appointment in a very short while.

After the Governor had promised to subscribe for The Republican, Garrett county's leading and largest newspaper, for a period of ten years, cash in advance, Scoop promised not to write over a paragraph a week about him, whereupon he made his appointment.

Scoop, however, wishes to state, that he had no hand in influencing the Governor as to whom should be appointed. All he demanded of the executive was action, and it looks like he got it.

Election is Peaceful

Monk Stemple easily outdistanced his rivals in the election on Monday and won out for mayor of Oakland. He was 391 votes ahead of his nearest opponent. His majority is said to have been due to promises of free plumbing service to anyone who could not get any water out of discontinued spiggots, and he also promised to install radios in bathrooms of citizens who were unable to sing in the bathtub. Cot McComas expects to be busy all this summer giving free motor boat rides to those who voted for him, and Ralph Thayer and Jesse Ashby made so many promises that they ean't be tabulated here. (and people believed them.)

Miss Frences Hamill had a hard fight for treasurer, but finally won out.

The Wild Jackass club whose slogan is to "watch and bray," and the Moonshiners' union, whose slogan is "More whiskey and bigger bottles," both tried to corrupt politics at the city hall but without success. Bun Nethkin stationed himself within easy reach of the ballot box and kept it pure and sober until 6 p. m. Until a late hour, however, the members continued to call, "We want a mayor who is all wet."

But nobody else hollered "cheek" or "double check" either.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The Boston Transcript recently in an interesting editorial pointed out that a new party movement in the United States seems to develop about every sixteen years and that one is therefore about due. Figuring from 1928, the Transcript points out that sixteen years before that date we had the Progressive or Bull Moose movement which played havoc with Republican affairs for a few years. That was in 1912, and sixteen years before that occasion there was the Free Silver movement which played havoc with the Democratic party. Sixteen years before the rise of Bryan, in 1880, the Transcript points out, came the Greenback party "which reached its high water mark with 308,000 votes for James B. Weaver, of Iowa." The Transcript ignores the LaFollette third party movement of 1924, coming twelve years after the Progressive insurgency, probably on the theory that it created scarcely a ripple on the political surface.

If history is to repeat itself it is true that a new party movement is about due, and we hear mutterings from every side that a new "Liberty" party is about in the making. We are told that the end of the Republican and Democratic organizations is near and that there is to be a new alignment. But the trouble is that it will be hard to get the people interested to agree on what constitutes "Liberalism." Perhaps never before have there been so many cross-currents in American politics. For instance in the effete East, "Liberalism" means the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, or at least a return to "light wines and beers." In the West, "Liberalism" means something entirely different, an adherence in fact to the principles of LaFollette, and Norris and other "Progressive" senators. But the Eastern liberals while "liberal" so far as liquor is concerned, are for the most part conservative in economic policies. As a general thing they favor a high tariff and non-interference by the government in private business. Government control or ownership of utilities is anathema to them.

On the other hand the Western and Southern liberals are generally dry. The Eastern "liberals" would call the Western "liberals" decided unliberal on the liquor question. Who in fact is more militantly dry in the Senate than Mr. Brookhart, of Iowa, one of the leaders of the Western "liberals." Yet in economic matters the Western "liberals" are directly opposed to the political leaders of the East who call themselves "liberals" because they oppose the federal policy of prohibition.

It is therefore going to be more than a little difficult to create a "Liberal" party from all of the elements of the country who are at this time declaring themselves liberal. For it will have to be admitted that on no question are the leaders of divergent opinion more bitterly divided than on the question of prohibition. A great many of our political students are beginning to believe that the time will come when the United States will have two major parties, one of which shall be wholly liberal in political thought and the other wholly conservative. But so long as there are other questions dividing the people it is a little difficult to see how this is going to be brought about.

This does not mean of course that the Republican and Democratic parties, as effective political organizations, may not be destroyed. But the probability is not that a truly radical and truly conservative party will take their places, but that our political organizations will degenerate into a multitude of political blocs each seeking to put over some selfish program at the expense of the rest of the country. When that time comes the fundamental principles of constitutional government in America will indeed be in danger.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimorc)

A week of watchful waiting, this, for both Republicans and Democrats.

The Republicans waited for Mayor Broening's return from Florida and now that he is home again they will probably have to wait still longer before they ascertain what he is going to do about the Governorship—to run or not to run. He wants to see how the Democratic land lies before he makes a decision.

Democrats wait to see what Ritchie will do. They hear indirectly time and again that he is saying privately that he will announce himself but the cause of his delay is not stated. Probably the political table is not yet set to suit him. Perhaps he still has hopes of buying off the opposition leaders with promises. He has in his camp some very "promising" figures.

We are still able to see the Governor's emissaries going the rounds trying to wheedle this one and that one into support for the fourth term. No important recruits have been reported this week.

In the McIntosh camp there is no announced program. A slate for the campaign has not been made up. Henry P. Turner of Talbot county, who has been invited to take a place on the ticket as the candidate for State Comptroller, sits and thinks and does nothing except, apparently listen to the pleas of his co-leader, W. Mason Shehan, who is said to have prospered greatly under the Ritchie regime. It is Mr. Shehan's job to hold Mr. Turner back and up to this time somebody seems to be holding him very well.

Senator Dudley Roe of Queen Anne, not wanting to be left at the ferry after the last boat has sailed, keeps rather quiet. He is said to be for McIntosh first but realizes that Maryland is now more or less of an autocracy. And ex-Governor Harrington, below the Choptank, is said to be almost weeping at the possibility of Maryland having a Republican Governor within ten short months.

The immediate job of the anti-fourth termers is to complete the ticket inasmuch as it now appears plain that the Governor will have to give up his plan to throw Attorney Robinson, Comptroller Gordy and Court Clerk Young onto the scrap heap. The Governor understands that Frank A. Furst says all or none, and he is not willing to defy Mr. Furst, on whom he has leaned so frequently.

State Treasurer John M. Dennis, hot in the collar when the Ritchie-Janney bay bridge plan was published, has taken not exactly to the woods but the Everglade section of the United States where he can think it over undisturbed by the business of bank mergers, campaign contributions and the like. He is expected back to the scene of trouble in three weeks and by that time we may know more about the probable future.

Senator McIntosh, in furthering his candidacy, has engaged some radio time and intends to talk twice a week if the opposition is unable to jam the wave length. And right here it may be well to say that most of those who are opposed to the proposed renewal of the Ritchie reign hope for more pep, pep, pep on the part of the Baltimore Countian.

Representative Gambrill continues to have strong support among the Ritchie opponents but there is no definite information as to his attitude. His admirers continue to say that he is the very sort of a fighter to put Ritchie on the defensive and keep him there till primary day.

A report in Republican circles this week was that ex-Senator Robb of Allegany while hoping to be made the choice of the Republicans for Governor, is not willing to go into a primary contest. We have no direct word from Mr. Rob on that subject. Probably he is waiting to learn what Mayor Broening is going to do.

Meanwhile we wonder what has become of the boosters of Judge Robert F. Duer of Somerset. Some think he would be available as a compromise candidate. And recently some one mentioned John K. Shaw, now serving as the minority member of the State Roads Commission.

Democratic Dinner
No Great Disturbance

The dinner given at the Southern Hotel on Tuesday evening by the embattled Democracy of the northeastern annex was concluded without any perceptable loss of political blood. The affair was apparently staged by the elements friendly to the fourth term pretensions of His Majesty but supporters of Senator McIntosh were also invited to help pay the bill. Thus it was that three hundred or more persons were gathered around the tables —some in rather belligerent mood.

It appears that Brooke Lee was brought in from Montgomery county as a sort of bodyguard for the Governor, the Montgomery county statesman being relied upon to say something the Governor might not care to say—in an emergency. So it was put down on the program that former Mayor Jackson would be asked to speak in advance of Lee so that the latter, if the occasion seemed to demand it, could reply in his rather rough manner. But there was no occasion for a reply, as Mr. Jackson said nothing at which offense could be taken by the fourth termers even though one exhuberant member of the tribe did yell out a Ritchie boost during the course of the Jackson remarks only to be squelched by the ready reply of the speaker.

Senator Tydings was put at the head of the speaking and for reasons of his own consumed about three-quarters of an hour, sending the Republican party to the rear but saying nothing about his own peculiar wobbling on certain items of the tariff bill. He did not even go so far as to tell his hearers that some of the Governor's most ardent supporters had appealed to him successfully to cast his vote for a high tariff on certain items in which some Maryland Democrats were interested.

The dinner did not prove or disprove anything. It brought nothing visible to the fourth term cause and it caused no opening ruction. But it was not exclusively a fourth term affair as was the Concord Club dinner of a few weeks back when the Ritchie people were given the stage to the exclusion of all others.

A few days back, we hear, there was a dinner given by the Yellow taxi cab people (just what for we do not know) and we are told that the Governor was there and ex-Mayor Jackson was there and a number of more or less political people were also there, among them Charlie Bichy, and the latter was seated right alongside His Majesty, the Governor.

This caused comment because it is well known that if there is one Democrat who is opposed to the fourth term idea it is this very same Mr. Bichy and it is further well known that from time to time the emissaries of His Majesty have called upon Mr. Bichy and presented lengthy arguments in the effort to make him see what they evidently believe to be the error of his political ways.

Possibly Mr. Bichy was placed alongside His Majesty at this taxicab dinner so as to give His Majesty a good opportunity to whisper his sweet political nothings into the insurgent ear of Mr. Bichy. But perhaps this is not so. Possibly it just happened that way as things occasionally do. Anyway, we take the liberty to report that Mr. Bichy was not converted by the seducive smile of His Majesty and that Mr. Jackson, who was noticed listening to some whispered remarks of a Ritchie emissary, is still outside the fourth term trenches.

Rotary Club Hears
Political Speech

While those who are invited to address the Rotary Club are not supposed to deliver political or partisan addresses or to boost their own candidacies for office we note that on Tuesday His Majesty the Governor appearing before the Rotary Club of Baltimore took full advantage of the opportunity to boost his own administration while carefully omitting to tell anything of his blunders. It was in every way a political speech, say some of the hearers, and of course that pleased his partisians in the club.

On the other hand we are told that Senator McIntosh in addressing the Rotary Club of Cambridge a few days back avoided political subjects entirely and did not boost his own candidacy. It's all a matter of a sense of propriety it seems.

First Mud Slinging
By Ritchie Crowd

The first real mud slinging of the Democratic campaign started this week when circulars were distributed by some of the fourth term zealots assailing former Mayor Jackson, William Curran and former City Solicitor Philip B. Perlman in severe language. There was no signature to the circular but those who are familiar with the situation quickly charged that it emanated from a certain member of the Ritchie group who has for weeks been noisy in his support of the fourth term candidate.

This is a sample of what is to be expected in the primary campaign if the Governor remains in. Those who are not willing to vote to keep him in office for life are to be villified regardless of the facts or of any other consideration. The fourth term people have been saying some severe things of their opponents for months past but this is the first time they have come out in print with it. As there are plenty of idle printing presses in Baltimore with a great supply of blank paper and ink available.

? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' QUESTION BOX ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

They're So Simple That Anybody Can Ask Them—
But— Can You Answer Them?

1. Why does a ball bounce?
2. Do stars really twinkle?
3. Why is fire hot?
4. Why does a stick seem to bend when it is put in water?
5. Can water be made hotter than the boiling point?

1. In short, because it is elastic, which, simply explained, means that when the ball is pressed out of shape it has a tendency to return to its original shape. It is this return to its original shape that makes the ball bounce. Do you know that steel is more elastic than India rubber? Ask dad—he knows—perhaps.

2. No. The stars send out steady, equal rays of light in all directions and when they encounter the air some of the rays get delayed on account of some interference, which causes a break, or interruption of the light waves. This causes the twinkling.

3. The heat of the fire is caused by the carbon in the coal and the oxygen in the air combining. These two elements, as they are called, have energy and power within themselves, which are released when the carbon and oxygen are combined to make the fire, and causes heat.

4. Rays of light, if they possibly can, travel in straight lines. If we see the whole stick in one element, the air, it appears to be straight, or if it is wholly seen in still water, it appears to be straight. But if half of it is submerged in water, then we see the lower half of the stick first thru the air. When light passes from water to air, or air to water, it gets bent, which makes it appear that the stick is bent. This bending of the rays of light is called refraction, which really means breaking.

5. We can not make water hotter than the boiling point, because when we do it ceases to be what we call water and turns into water-vapor. Thus when the boiling point is reached the liquid water is as hot as it can get.

TYPHOID REACHES LOWEST POINT IN STATE IN 1929

Reduction of Disease Due to State Health Organization

Last year, typhoid fever reached the lowest point that has been recorded in Maryland. There were 544 cases, 443 in the counties and 101 in Baltimore City, with 69 deaths, 43 in the counties and 26 in Baltimore City. In 1928 there were 753 cases, 639 in the counties and 114 in Baltimore City with 83 deaths. In 1929 in proportion to the population, there were 33 cases and 4 deaths to each 100,000 persons living in the State.

What this means in the history of typhoid fever in the State is indicated in the annual report of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the State Department of Health for 1929 in which the figures for last year are compared with those of twenty years ago, when in proportion to the population there was ten times as much typhoid fever in the State—360 cases and 42 deaths in each 100,000 of the total population. The actual number of cases reported in 1910, was 4,678—there were probably many more that were not reported—and there were 556 deaths.

The organization of the State into Sanitary Districts, each under the charge of a full time Deputy State Health Officer, was started in 1914. The same year, water supply and sewerage laws, and other health measures became effective. The decline in typhoid fever has been gradual since that time. Commenting on the decline, Mr. Abel Wolfman, Chief of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, said: "The sources of the public water supplies of the State are to a large extent under sanitary supervision. But this should not give a false sense of security. The necessity for the extension of such supervision and for the continued efficient operation of all water treatment plants, is obvious. The fact that three-fourths of the typhoid we have each year in the counties, occurs in strictly rural areas or in areas where mass water supply is unknown or not feasible, shows us where effort must be intensified. The remaining fourth could probably be traced to human carriers or to carelessness in observing proper precautions, by those who are brought in contact with the disease.

"Typhoid fever is an unnecessary disease. Every case that occurs is due either to community negligence or to the carelessness or ignorance of some individual. We had 443 unnecessary cases of typhoid in the counties and 101 in Baltimore City, last year. Reduction of that number, this year and next year and on into the tomorrows of future years, will depend largely upon:

"Further extension of sanitary supervision over the public water supplies of the State;

"Eternal vigilance in maintaining the water treatment plants at the maximum of efficiency;

"Extension, as occasion may demand, of the treatment of sewage discharges from growing communities;

"Prompt investigation of the source of every case of typhoid that is reported with correction of conditions that are disclosed;

"Immunization of contacts and also of individuals whose occupations or whose recreation may carry them into danger zones;

"Supervision of carriers; and

"Education of all food handlers as to the absolute necessity for frequent, habitual and thorough washing of the hands."

CABLING OUR DELEGATES

When President Hoover appointed the American delegation to the London conference, his selections were generally acclaimed. It was everywhere conceded that it was one of the strongest groups it was possible to choose. This delegation has been in London face to face with the facts and the difficulties of the situation, and nothing has developed to create lack of confidence in them.

Nevertheless some of our home grown guardians of peace and other things evidently believe that those who are on the ground in contact with the facts need some prodding and advice from people who are many hundreds of miles away. Consequently a group of forward looking persons in New York, all of them incidently boosters of forms of internationalism the American people have decisively rejected, spent several thousand dollars telephoning and telegraphing to some twelve hundred "representative Americans" four hundred words reminding the delegates of what President Hoover has said relative to the purpose of the conference, and urging, in effect, that the President's idea of naval parity be attained without American naval construction. It is not surprising that when the eighteen ounce cablegram reached the American delegates, they were not well pleased.

Just how American naval parity is to be maintained without American naval building, in case Great Britain declines to do any ship-sinking was not explained to the delegates. The lack of parity is due to the fact that while the United States sunk a half billion dollars worth of battleships following the Washington conference to ensure naval parity, Great Britain proceeds feeverishly to build cruisers with the effect that naval parity was upset. Our government has held off in naval construction, and is willing to continue to do so, provided Great Britain will do her turn at ship sinking; otherwise to attain parity the United States will have to do some cruiser building. The blame for this is not on the United States, but on Great Britain for having upset parity in cruisers.

Great Britain's navy building, it is true, is not directed against the United States, but against France. Nevertheless this disturbs a ratio agreed on at the Washington conference, and to this principle of equality the American government is committed. Just why the 1200 persons who signed the "appeal" to the American delegates did not ship their advice to the British and French delegates instead is puzzling.

This much is certain, and has been certain from the beginning of the naval conference. If there is no agreement at London a powerful element in the United States will blame the disagreement on the United States; indeed the charge is already being broadcast that it is the determination of the American government to dominate the world through superior armament that keeps the world under the shadow of war. The fact that there is no justification whatever for this charge will not interfere in the least with our domestic internationalists who profess to believe that any American measure looking to adequate national defense is a gesture of defiance to the whole world and evidence that Uncle Sam is getting ready to go forth to seek whom he may devour.

A good many people doubtless signed this $5,000 "appeal" without giving it much consideration. Petition signing is one of the favorite American indoor sports played upon by pretentious organizations and leaders professing to represent "the people of the United States." Doubtless the American delegation at London realizes that most of the people of the United States have confidence in their patriotism and intelligence, and are willing to have these negotiations carried on the light of information rather than of distant speculation.

An Interesting Fact.

The Maryland Gazette

In this day of the rapid transmission of news items, when important happenings of both this country and of Europe and Asia are being read by American readers within a few hours, at most, after they have occurred, we consider the newspaper, as we consider our grape fruit and coffee—as a matter of course. But all the advantages we now enjoy we owe to the foresight and forward-looking policies of our progenitors.

The Maryland Gazette, one of the very early papers in America, was founded at Annapolis in 1727. It was short lived, but was revived in 1745 and thereafter prospered. It carried at its masthead the information that it contained "the freshest advises foreign and domestic." These advises, however, according to present day standards, were not very fresh, as they were two months old from New York and Boston, five months old from London and Paris, and six months old from Constantinople.

But even in the early days of the Colony, we find that the publishers of the Maryland Gazette, were true to the fine traditions of the Fourth Estate. In scathing editorials the infamous Stamp Act, passed by the English Parliament in 1765, was denounced in no uncertain terms and published cards or letters from various citizens, whereby they gave notice "to all officers whatever that may be appointed by that most grievous and unconstitutional act" that they would pay no tax whatever but what was laid upon them by their own representatives.

In fact, so strenuous was the opposition of the Gazette to the Act, that rather than purchase the stamped paper for its issues, it suspended publication in October, 1765, just about a month prior to the time the Act was to go into effect.

The publishers, however, continued to print what they were pleased to call "supplements" without charge to the "customers" on which was printed skull and cross bones with the expression:

"The times are Dreadful, Dismal, Doleful, Dolorous, and Dollar-less."

Some of our present day publishers seem to have taken a leaf out of the book of yc olden editor.

WEST VIRGINIA FARMERS CASH IN ON NATIVE PLANT

Collection of Plants Brings in Substantial Revenue to Workers.

"Pay dirt" of a new kind has been struck in the rugged hills and wooded nooks of Tucker county.

Native plants, dug and shipped to the city markets, brought $2,012.67 to farmers of the county last spring. Thirty car loads of rhododendron, azaleas and mountain laurel were marketable between March 16 and May 8.

Farmers of the county formed an organization to promote the project. The state Farm Bureau Service Co. handled the marketing and paid the labor.

In this contract with the company the farmers were guaranteed three cents a plant, but they were actually paid eight. Professional collectors, up to this time, had been paying one cent a plant. One farmer realized sixteen cents a plant, including pay for his labor, and another farmer twelve cents.

At the time the collecting was under way Parsons and other communities were hard hit by unemployment. The native plant collecting tided many men over until road work was started. A total of $3,621.50 was paid in the form of wages.

Tucker county is not being stripped of its natural beauty. These plants should be removed in the process of thinning. The farmers are getting paid for what might otherwise be a painful job of grubbing.

There are many sections of West Virginia which will have to develop side line activities of this kind to provide farm people additional sources of income.

The total receipts from shipping plants from Tucker county was about fourteen thousand dollars, and over half of it remained within the county. The figures shown above represent what the farmers received and the amount paid out in labor. Most farmers shipped direct, no selling to local shippers, every one who shipped went out and dug for himself, and all made money out of it, and the business this season is likely to far outstrip last year's output. In fact orders are now in for a dozen or more cars and the work has only started.

Maple Syrup Fudge

Two cups Crest O' the Highlands maple syrup, 1 teaspoon light corn syrup, ¾ cup walnut meats, coarsely chopped, ¾ cup thin cream. Combine maple syrup, corn syrup and cream and place over low flame. Stir constantly until mixture begins to boil. Continue cooking, without stirring, until a small amount of syrup forms a soft ball in cold water (236 deg. F.) Remove from fire. Cool to lukewarm. Beat until mixture thickens and loses its gloss. Add nuts and pour at once into greased pan, 8x4x2 inches. When cold cut into squares.

Fruit Cookies

One cup butter, 1 cup black walnut meats, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1½ cups dates cut up in pieces, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in ½ cup hot water, 1½ cups Crest O' the Highlands maple syrup, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 3 large eggs.

Drop a teaspoonful in a place in pan and bake in moderate oven. Improves with age. Keep in tin can,

—MRS. C. C. BEACHY.

Maple Icing

One cup Crest O' the Highlands maple syrup, 1 cup sugar, 2 egg whites, few grains salt, ¼ teaspoon vanilla, ⅛ teaspoon cream of tarter, ½ cup water.

Combine syrup, sugar, cream of tarter and water. Cook, stirring constantly until it starts to boil to 238 degrees F. Add slowly to stiffly beaten egg whites to which the salt has been added. Beat until cool and it will retain its shape. Add vanilla. Spread on cake.

The Home Flower Garden

What woman does not have her flower garden and what woman would not, if she could, add to its beauty throughout the season?

The State Extension Service has planned a Home Flower Garden Project to do just that.

The first of a series of four lessons was held in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent on Thursday, February 27. At this time "General Principles of Arrangement" was studied. This included location of annuals, typical location and group arrangements.

The following Garrett county Homemakers have been selected by their respective clubs to represents their communities:

Mrs. O. S. Ridder, Mrs. J. W. Baker, Mrs. Artie Dodge, Sunnyside; Mrs. J. U. Stanton, Mrs. Fred Livengood, Grantsville; Mrs. T. C. Bittinger, Mrs. Wm. Frazeen, Oakland: Mrs. Jamie Elliott, Mrs. E. O. Fouch, Miss Mildred Ford, Mt. Lake-Loch Lynn; Miss Lucille Glotfelty, Miss Martha Beachy, Bittinger.

The second lesson is scheduled for Wednesday, March 12. At this meeting time will be devoted to the study of soil and the correct fertilization for proper growth.

To Re-pot Ferns

In preparing soil for house plants and ferns try the following proportions: To one part garden soil use one part sand or sandy soil, and one part leaf mold or well rotted manure. This will give a good soil texture for growing plants.

Quickly Relieved By This Safe Prescription

Here's a doctor's prescription that is really throat insurance. Sore or irritated throats are relieved and soothed almost instantly with the very first swallow. About 90 per cent of all coughs are caused by an irritated throat; consequently for most coughs too there is nothing better than this famous prescription—it goes direct to the internal cause. It is put up under the name Thoxine and is guaranteed to stop coughs and relieve sore throats in 15 minutes or your money will be refunded. Singers and speakers find Thoxine very valuable.

The remarkable thing about Thoxine is that while it relieves almost instantly, it contains nothing harmful, is pleasant tasting and safe for the whole family. Ask for Thoxine. 35c., 60c. and $1.00 bottles. Sold by Gonder's and all other good drug stores.

WILD ROSE IS NAMED AS NATIONAL FLOWER

Chosen by People of United States in Election Campaign

The dainty, little Wild Rose is America's National Flower,—or will be if the voice of the people is to be considered. Late in 1928, the American Nature Association inaugurated a campaign, to create an interest and love for wild flowers, to promote their conservation, and to direct attention to Nature generally. The Association had no candidate. It felt that although a National Flower should be chosen, its choice was secondary to the other interests.

The referendum was most successful. A large number of school children voted and in such a manner that there is no question of the benefit they derived. All over the United States voting continued until December 31, 1929, and until a few weeks ago the Association was kept busy computing the returns. Educators who assisted the voting in more than a dozen states assert that the campaign has fostered citizenship by giving the school children a chance to vote in a national event, as well as create a knowledge of history and Nature, both of which had to be studied to arrive at an intelligent opinion.

In more than thirty states campaigns were conducted by local organizations and individuals and 1,067,676 votes were cast, of which 492,811 were for the Wild Rose. Its nearest contender was the Columbine, with 230,000. School children thruout the nation favored the Wild Rose but even without their votes, this flower would still have won. A million votes probably represent as large a proportion of nature lovers as do the totals in a presidential election represent the grand total of eligible voters, but "straw votes" indicate the true opinion of the people.

Pennsylvania heads the list in total numbers of votes cast, 11,256, of which 69,575 were for the Wild Rose, 17,814 for the Columbine, over ten thousand for the Violet and almost five thousand for the Golden Rod; others mentioned in the national poll were Phlox, American Beauty Rose, Daisy, Mountain Laurel, Dogwood, etc. Wild Rose captured every state except Colorado, Florida, Illinois, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Vermont, and Washington. With practically no "campaign committee" in any state and with a number of organizations trying to defeat it, it withstood every assault upon the lead gained early in the campaign.

The Columbine was "runner-up" and far ahead of the third-place winner. Early in December it threatened to be the winner, as a society had been organized for its support. Bedford county gave it a tremendous vote. More than six thousand Americans living outside the State voted, chiefly for the Columbine. Its supporters may feel confident that it is second in public esteem.

The wishes of the people, if Congress is willing, will be translated into legislative form and the Wild Rose will, in that event, fill a void that has never been filled.

HARFORD COUNTY 4-H BOY WINS AWARD OF $100.00

John H. Price is Recipient of B. & O. Scholarship

John H. Price, Jr., of Darlington, Harford county, more familiarly known to the 4-H club members of this State as "Jaek", has been awarded the $100 scholarship offered by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company for outstanding achievements in 1929, it is announced by E. G. Jenkins, State Boys' club agent for the University of Maryland extension service.

Jack started his career in club work when he was eleven years old. That year he planted an old garden spot on his father's farm in potatoes and while this first venture did not prove so profitable, it did provide the necessary impetus which later on made this young club member successful. The next year he planted more potatoes and produced a sufficiently high quality product to win second prize at the Harford county fair. The same year he was elected vice-president of the local 4-H club.

In the spring of 1925, young Price joined the country garden club and enlarged his garden to include many more vegetables. The following year he was elected President of the Darlington 4-H club. Since that time Jack has taken a great deal of interest in pure bred pigs and this year sold his sow and a litter at a profit of $55.00.

In addition to his club projects, Jack has been very successful in winning outside honors. He attended 4-H club week at the University of Maryland for a number of years and was one of the two boys elected to represent this state at the second National 4-H camp held in Washington, D. C. Last August he was also awarded a scholarship offered by the Southern Planter magazine.

Writes Book on Counties of the State

Miss Emily Emerson Lantz, who several years ago had printed a brief descriptive and illustrated article concerning Garrett county in the Baltimore Sun, which was reproduced in The Republican at the time, has written a book entitled, "The Spirit of Maryland, a Story of the Old Line State," county by county, and a guide both to the historic past and active present.

Each Maryland county is made distinctive and unique and each is rich in tradition. Under the author's treatment the counties of the State have been made to live and glow, each with a spirit and charm of its own.

DIED

DEBORAH A. GLOTFELTY

Deborah Annabelle Glotfelty, daughter of George S. and Hattie Glotfelty, McHenry, died at her home on March 7. Her death was caused by a complication of diseases. She was 18 years old, having been born January 27, 1912.

Funeral services were held Sunday morning at 11:30 o'clock from the home, Rev. Stewart, Frostburg, officiating. Interment was made at Flatwoods cemetery. Pallbearers were: Bernard Glotfelty, Edward Glotfelty, Clark Glotfelty, Bruce Glotfelty, Austin Glotfelty, and Playford Glotfelty.

She is survived by her father, mother, two brothers, and three sisters, namely: Mrs. Hubert Bowman, McHenry; Jonas C. Glotfelty, Oakland; Effie, Fred and Jeanette, at home. She is also survived by an aged grandfather, Jonas Glotfelty, Addison; and a grandmother, Mrs. L. A. Lowdermilk, Uniontown, Pa., besides a host of relatives and friends. Prior to her death she was employed in the plant of the Celanese Corporation, at Cumberland.

Her smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall
She had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.

Some day we hope to meet her,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp her hand in a better land
And never part again.

SHE DID NOT NEED GREGORY'S PICTURE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

GREGORY placed his tray on the cafeteria table and arranged the dishes. He thought bitterly of the dinners he had eaten with Helen at that table. Not a fashionable restaurant, yet it served food that was extremely satisfying, reminding them of the meals in the small town from which they had come. There was the same baked ham, full quarter cuts of pumpkin and mince pie, and coffee piping hot.

Gregory sighed as he tasted his tomato soup. Never, he thought sadly, would he face Helen and hear her comments on the happenings of the week. He recalled the quarrel, which had terminated their meetings. He realized that it had been largely his own fault but he was too proud to attempt a reconciliation.

"If she wants to make up, let her say so," he reflected.

His soup grew cold as he tried to concentrate upon the Sunday paper. At last he pushed away both the paper and the soup and reached for his roast. How different the meat looked from that which Helen had commented on the week before.

"This roast is just like Aunt Tilly cooks," she had said.

Gregory pushed his plate away, his appetite gone. From his table near the rear he looked toward the street and debated whether to go into the storm, raging with winter fury. It seemed foolish to let a mere woman take away his appetite. Suddenly, he sat up as if an electric current had passed through his body. Four tables away was a woman he recognized. There was no one else who could wear that blue hat with that air. Yes, it was Helen!

She, too, seemed without appetite. Her knife and fork lay unused beside her and she looked into the street. Her back was toward Gregory and he could not see her face. He wondered if she felt as he did.

A form passed and repassed the street door, that of a man wrapped in a worn overcoat, its collar turned up to keep out the icy, snowladen wind. The man's face was covered with a stubble of beard, the growth of at least a week. His cheeks were emaciated from lack of food. Gregory did not look at him. He knew that he was passing and repassing but his thoughts did not go beyond the fourth table. He did not notice that the man looked hungrily at the food displayed in the window and once or twice moved as if to enter.

Gregory almost forgot his resolution not to attempt a reconciliation as he watched Helen, so attractive, so charming! Although her back was to him, he could picture her eyes, so beautiful, so tender! It is strange that he did not think of his last glimpse of them. They had been far from tender then. But he remembered only more pleasant days when they had reminded him of violets or June skies.

The woman arose and started toward the door. Gregory unthinkingly moved to follow, but remembered himself before carrying out the instinctive action. Helen opened the door but, instead of going outside, she beckoned toward the form moving back and forth there. The man obeyed her summons eagerly. Gregory could not hear their words but, a moment later, Helen led him to the counter and told him to fill a tray.

"I'll pay for it," Gregory heard her tell the cashier before returning to her table.

Later, the cashier presented a check and she counted out several coins. The object of her charity sat at a table near Gregory, who watched him, fascinated. He ate soup eagerly and audibly and fixed his eyes eagerly on the meat and potatoes to follow.

"Evidently hasn't had a quarrel with his sweetheart!" Gregory thought, taking a sip from his lukewarm coffee.

He finally gave up the task of trying to eat. His neighbor had emptied his tray and was resting in his chair, as emaciated as ever, but his famished look gone. Gregory saw Helen coming in his direction. His heart beat foolishly as he wondered if she would ask forgiveness. But she paused at the next table.

"Was everything all right?" she asked the man.

"Great," he answered. "And thank you. It's been months since I've had a meal like this."

"That's all right," Helen said, hastily. "I just thought that you must be hungry."

As she was about to turn away, she saw Gregory. Her eyes flashed and, tossing her head, she went toward the door. The tramp with not a crumb left, followed. Gregory, realizing the impossibility of eating, trailed behind.

Outside, Gregory turned up his fur collar. Although it was only midafternoon, the atmosphere was gray and murky. He looked about to see what had become of Helen. Her form was almost indistinguishable through the thick curtain of snowflakes. Beside her was the man she had fed, waving his hands as if excited. Gregory did not like the looks of it and followed. They turned at the corner and he broke into a run. They were not more than twenty feet away when he reached the man. They had paused and were talking.

"Come on now," the man said. "Gimme a dollar. You must have some dough. You wouldn't 've bought my dinner if it'd took your last cent. Nobody ain't goin' to go broke buyin' a bum a meal."

"But I say I've no more money," Helen protested. "Please go away. I've done all I can."

The tramp looked quickly about. No one was in sight. Gregory had stepped into a doorway. The tramp threw out his hand and grasped Helen's handbag.

"Let go," he commanded.

"Oh, no, no!" she screamed.

"Thought you didn't have any money," he grinned.

Gregory stepped out and laid a hand on the tramp's shoulder.

"Quit that," he ordered. "What are you doing? Some man you are, trying to rob a woman who's just given you the first square meal you've had in months."

The tramp gave the handbag a jerk. Its handle broke and he was free to fly. Gregory started to follow but the robber turned the corner and had disappeared when Gregory reached it. He returned to Helen.

"Hope you didn't have much money," he said.

"None at all," she answered, her eyes shining into his, "only your picture and I don't need it now that you've come back!"

"Helen!" he cried, taking her into his arms.

They stood alone on the snow-swept street, the chill wind striking them, but only summer warmth in their hearts.

Hope of Wealth From Copper Mines Given Up

The copper mines of Isle Royale are the graves of long-dead hopes. Following closely on the trail of the prehistoric miners, who had exhausted the available surface copper, Mr. Dustin says, the white prospectors, aided by modern methods and technical skill, toiled from 1847 to 1884 over the apparently rich lodes.

Thousands of dollars were sunk into the shafts, but so rigorous are the conditions of life on the island and so jealously does it guard its treasure that the dreams of wealth never materialized.

Now the wilderness has claimed its own. Deep down in the crystal waters of McCargoe's cove on the north shore lies the rotting crib of the old Minong mine dock. The road from the dock to the mines, once a broad thoroughfare, is a dense birch and poplar grove, laced with moose trails.

The mouths of deserted shafts are favorite wallows for the great beasts. In the heart of the forest are the huge dumps of red, copper-bearing rock with the hardy conifers taking root on their summits. The mouth of a drift, driven into a hillside, yawns blackly from the green and gold thicket. Four white birches stand guard before the door of the log smithy, now almost buried in the foliage. Timbering at the pit mouths lean crazily beneath their burdens of overhanging rock and seem scarcely able to withstand the fierce winter storms that sweep over them.

Another generation, it is said, and the last vestige of the white miners will vanish from Isle Royale. Only the shallow pits of the prehistoric miners will remain, as undisturbed, as unconquered by the elements, as in all the centuries that have passed over them.—Detroit News.

Founder of Jesuit Order

Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus or Jesuits, was born in 1491 of a noble house at the castle of Loyola, Spain. He was a soldier, and desperately wounded in the war with France, and during his convalescence determined to become a "knight of Christ." He reported divine visions and commissions, and after much hardship succeeded in founding an order which devoted itself to the extension of the faith, particularly undertaking missionary work. This is one of the most powerful of the Roman Catholic religious organizations.

Only One Requirement

Joe, a wiry little French Canadian, who farms a small tract in Ludlow, drove his wagon into a Ludlow paint shop recently and announced to the boss:

"I want this wagon she's be paint red!"

"All right, Joe," answered the painter. "And what color do you want the wheels?"

Joe scratched his head a moment in thought, and then shrugging his shoulders, eloquently replied: "Oh, I don't care. Any color so long as she's red." Springfield Union.

Early Birds

The nightingale, favorite songster of the British Isles, confines his activities to the southeastern English counties bordering on the channel. The annual pilgrimage of the British Empire Naturalists' association to the Surrey downs is attended by visitors from the United States, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Africa and India, who come to this favorite nesting place of the nightingale in the hours of darkness just to listen to the exquisite beauty of the bird's song.

Considerate Suicide

An unusual method of committing suicide was used by a man at Buryos, Spain. He attached a stone to a long copper wire and went out to find a high tension supply cable. He then wound the other end of the wire round his arm and threw the stone over the cable. He was found dead from electrocution with a note pinned to his hat warning others that they risked death if they touched him before the current was cut off.

That Good Ham Sandwich

By I. WRIGHT

(Copyright.)

MERWIN PALMER straightened up from his cramped position over the engine and rubbed his greasy hands down the tan overalls he wore. "I tell you, Dave," he said with a sigh, "I'm going up to that house and ask for a drink of water. I need a little something after three hours of this work."

The man lying in the road under the car snorted: "G'wan, then. We're not going to call a garage man in for this little job if it takes all day."

"No, that's all right with me—but I'm going to have a drink of water. And say—if I saw a ham sandwich right now."

"For a civil engineer with a nice new diploma from college and a pretty fraternity pin that no girl ever yet succeeded in getting awny—well, you sound like a hungry tramp." And the man in the road turned over on his side and stretched two fingers up into the motor and said something softly under his breath.

Up at the house on the hill a girl with soft golden hair and violet eyes stood on the porch, watching the progress of the man coming up. "His figure is like Merwin's," she whispered to herself. "But Merwin—" she sighed a little and sat down at the white kitchen table, which was spread with two large loaves of bread, butter, mustard and pretty pink ham.

"May—may I have a drink of water?" asked Merwin Palmer a moment later.

The girl with the violet eyes did not look up from her bread cutting. "The pump is there and the dipper is hanging in the apple tree directly above. Help yourself." Her voice was cordial.

As soon as he had turned to go to the pump she looked after him. Afraid of tramps, she was somehow fascinated by his figure. His shoulders drooped as he pumped, and he looked very tired. When he called out "Thanks" she was again looking at her bread.

If he stared at her queerly she did not know it, for she was not even glancing his way.

"Maybe tramps are a lazy lot and don't deserve anything," she said half aloud, "but I'll bet a sandwich would taste good to him. Say!" she called out. She did not know how to address him, and "say" seemed to be adequate.

He turned.

"Would you—care for a ham sandwich?"

He hurried towrd her.

For a moment she was startled. She had heard dreadful tales of tramps knocking girls senseless and going through the house to take everything of value. She almost regretted her impulse.

"I don't know that you're hungry," she said timidly.

"Why," he said cordially in a booming voice, "I'd commit murder right now for a ham sandwich. I was just telling my pal down the road that a ham sandwich—"

She paled: he had a pal down the road—she did not dare look at him.

"May I help myself?" he asked as she made no effort to hand him the plate.

She nodded; her throat felt dry and hot and she wished that some of the family were home. "You—you might take one along to your—pal—" she said in a very little voice.

"Fine—" he said, eating the sandwich with a great relish. "Although a fellow who swears as he does doesn't deserve anything as good as—" he said and then stopped short.

Her face flamed; why had she called him back when he was on his way out of the yard? She dared not look at him. Panic overwhelmed her.

"Aren't you Faith Darrow?" he asked.

She looked at him now in surprise: "Yes."

"I'm—"

"You're never Merwin Palmer?"

He nodded placidly. "I'm glad you remembered. I thought you didn't and—"

She laughed nervously: "Well, why—why didn't you say so at the start? I thought—you—thought you were a tramp."

He stared at his tan overalls. "The car broke down and Dave and I thought we'd fix it ourselves."

There was a strained silence as each followed thoughts concerning an evening where there was dancing, a balcony, certain words—and then the interruption of a crowd of dancers.

"Y'know—" it was Merwin Palmer who broke the silence. "Y'know, I always had a notion, Faith, that my fraternity pin would look better on you than on anyone else in the world; suppose we—" he was holding out the pin which had never before been out of his hands.

A snort made them turn around. "So this is what you call getting a 'drink of water' while I lie under that car and sweat?" it was Dave.

"Here's a sandwich and there's the dipper far down the yard there by the pump. G'wan and get a drink," urged Merwin Palmer, with more cordiality than he had ever before shown. "G'wan, we're busy here."

WHY DO WOMEN LEAVE HOME? MEN? NO, INDUSTRY CALLS.

Fill Diversified Occupations. Accountants, Chemists, Engineers, Laboratory Technicians, Lawyers, Psychologists, Among 289,000 Women Now Employed By Telephone Companies Alone

Inspecting vacuum tube telephone repeaters is one of the unusual jobs performed by women at the Bell Laboratories. Circle—Miss Emma M. Nutt, the first woman telephone operator in Boston, Mass., employed September, 1878. Bottom—Miss Anna K. Marshall, microscope expert in the telephone laboratories.

There was a time when men were held responsible for women leaving home. Today industry seems to have usurped that place, for never before in the history of the world have so many women been engaged in industrial operations.

In many industries it is easy enough to associate women among the employees. People generally are not surprised at the large number of women employees in the telephone industry, for the pleasant voices that ask "Number, please?" or say "Thank you" when the number is given are daily reminders of this fact. Telephone companies in the United States now utilize about 513,200 employees in the construction, operation, and maintenance of the systems. Of this number, 289,000 are women. But surprising facts revealed by officials of the telephone company show that women occupy many important positions in other than the telephone operating departments.

The Western Electric Company, the world's largest manufacturer of telephone supplies now has more than 75,000 employees on its payrolls at Hawthorne, Ill., and Kearny, N. J. Of this number, about 18,700 are women. The gigantic plant now being erected at Pt. Breeze, Baltimore, will supply work for several thousand people including a large number of women who will be engaged in manufacturing supplies necessary to meet the demands of the public for telephone service.

The occupations of the women employees of this great manufacturing organization now include accountants, assemblers, bindery girls, chemists, clerks, cooks, dietitians, draftswomen, engineers, laboratory technicians, laundresses, lawyers, librarians, machine operators, monotype keyboard operators, writers, proof readers, psychologists, secretaries, social service workers, supervisors, switchboard operators, teachers, tracers, and typists. This very diversified list of occupations should dispel in anyone's mind the thought that the women are not capable of performing many of the useful scientific duties that industry offers today.

AMERICAN RAILROADS EFFICIENCY INCREASED BY TELEPHONE USE

Over 60 Per Cent of 248,000 Miles of Railway in the United States Now Operated by Telephone Control

Top: Along the scenic New River canyon in West Virginia, Chesapeake and Ohio Railway passenger train in the distance.
Bottom, left: Section of the C. & O. Co.'s telephone private branch exchange system at Richmond.
Right: T. S. Tutweiler, dispatching a train by telephone control.

Efficiency in American railroad operation is outstanding. Millions of people are transported annually over thousands of miles of track in addition to the vast tonnage of freight that is handled year in and year out by these efficient carriers.

One of the methods by which the railroads have increased their efficiency in recent years is by telephone dispatching. Of the total railroad mileage in this country, 60 per cent is now operated by telephone control. Many railroads such as the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Virginian, Norfolk and Western, and Pennsylvania are now operated entirely by telephone control.

Railroading in America has just passed its hundredth milestone. The telephone came along a half-century later and is now in its fifty-third year of service. With the invention of the telephone in 1876 when there were only two of these instruments in existence, there were more than 70,000 miles of railroad in operation. Today this country is served by about 20,000,000 telephones and 248,000 miles of railroad.

Dispatching trains by telephone is nothing new, for as early as 1879, three years after the telephone was invented the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad used the telephone for its train dispatching system and has used it continuously to date, according to Telephone Topics.

This railroad has been in operation since July 28, 1875, and was the first railroad in the world to use the telephone for dispatching trains.

Not only do railroads utilize telephone communication for train dispatching, but they are large users of telephone service. In fact, nearly every railroad in the country operates private branch exchange systems at its general headquarters and at division and district points along its lines, and as well are served by telephones in railroad stations everywhere.

MT. LAKE PARK

A short time ago we were rather in hopes that we would be able to comply with a letter request of a friend of ours that "we hurry up the spring weather" in order that she might open up her cottage a little earlier. But now we are not sure we can control the situation. About the time our hopes were raised, along comes the same weather-wise bird who predicted that, owing to the misplaced rings on the tail of the caterpllars, we would have all our severe winter weather before the first of January, and predicted that we would have ten snows in March and April. Although he was dead wrong in the first prediction, we realize that if it keeps at it long enough he, like the Weather Bureau, may be correct occasionally. At least he has started off well, as we are having our third snow since the prediction was made. We are told that his first prediction failed on account of his having taken a few extra shots of a certain brand of giggle soup we understand is on the market, after inhaling which he was unable to distinguish between a caterpillar and a blue ringtailed monkey. We are still optimistic.

While we are not acquainted, except in a general way with the liquor market, and can not, therefore, broadcast any information to our fuzzy-tongued friends, yet we may say that one of the products of Garrett county is making quite a hit with us these spring-winter mornings. The first run of maple syrup. "It satisfies", and "there is not a headache in a car load."

A large circle of friends and acquaintances were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Sumner Stone, who had been a summer resident of the Park for a number of years. Her death, we are informed, occurred in Florida, where she and her husband had been spending the winter.

Word has been received that Mrs. Isobel Hill, who was touring Europe, has been called home on account of the illness of her son, Jordon D. Hill, in New York.

Mrs. A. V. Enlow's daughters planned and carried out a complete surprise party for her on her birthday.

Being prevalled upon to take a little moonlight walk with Bobb, her grandson, on their return they found the house filled with the ladies of the Aid Society, of which Mrs. Enlow has been a member from its organization, each one bringing a token of kindly remembrance of the day.

Those present included: Mrs. F. P. Arnold, Mrs. J. E. Chance, Mrs. J. L. Echard, Mrs. E. E. Friend, Mrs. C. A. Fike, Mrs. John Hipsley, Mrs. John Stevenson, Mrs. Walter Meyers, Mrs. C. S. May, Mrs. Walter Reedy, Mrs. H. V. Leichton, Mrs. H. C. Leighton Mrs. Turney, Miss Ethel Turney, Mrs. B. F. Selby, Mrs. W. Welling, Mrs. Wildman.

Mrs. Enlow has been a resident of the Park since 1882.

Three families have recently moved into the Park in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Fulk and Mr. and Mrs. Bolyard.

Farm Board Advocates Reforestation of Land

Restoration of the woodlot to the American farm, a subject that has and is being widely advocated by the Maryland State Department of Forestry, was proposed in a recent radio talk by Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board. In speaking of what use to make of the land that would be made idle by the program of reduction of productlon offered to the farmers, Mr. Legge had the following to say:

"In many areas this woodlot is disappearing. Why not restore it? In doing so we would only be following the example of many of the older nations that in the past have had to meet a simllar situation as that now confronting us. If every American farmer were to devote five per cent of his present acreage to this form of reforestation he would have gone a long way toward meeting the problem of over-production and at the same time have added materially to the future value of his farm."

In this connection it is pointed out by F. B. Trenk specialist in forestry for the University of Maryland Extension Service that if all the farmers in Maryland would plant five per cent of their poorest tillable land in trees it would amount to approximately 400,000 acres or about the combined acreage of Kent and Howard counties. The average cost of planting an acre of land in trees is around $9.50, which for the average farm in Maryland, over a three-year period, would only amount to $15.75 per year.

ENUMERATORS ARE NAMED TO TAKE CENSUS IN COUNTY

Appointments Recommended by Supervisor Stump Made by Bureau—To Begin Work April 2

Appointment of twenty-four census enumerators for Garrett county, recommended by Supervisor John J. Stump and approved by the Census Bureau at Washington, have been announced by Mr. Stump, who has Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties under his immediate supervision. The enumerators will begin work on April 2, as required by the Census law.

In the list of appointments for this county there appears the names of two women, the rest being of the opposite sex.

The enumerators for this county as appointed by the Bureau are as follows: Arthur H. Green, Swanton, District No. 1; Mrs. Effie Chisholm, Friendsville, District No. 2; Arch C. Friend, Friendsville, for the town of Friendsville; C. H. Bill, Grantsville, town of Grantsville; Miss Beulah K. Engle, Grantsville, District No. 3 outside of the corporate limits of Grantsville; Albert F. Howard, Bloomington, town of Bloomington; W. H. Barnard, District No. 4 outside of Bloomington; Henry M. Speicher, District No. 5, including town of Accident.

J. Alvin Friend, Sang Run, District No. 6; Charles S. May, Mt. Lake Park, towns of Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn Heights.

Walter W. Dawson, town of Oakland in Districts Nos 7 and 14; Wellington E. Yutzy, District No. 7 outside of Oakland; J. Paul Riley, Oakland, west side of District No. 8; A. G. Cullers, Gormania, east side of District No. 8; John R. Werner, Frostburg, District No. 9; Theodore L. Marley, Deer Park, town of Deer Park; Levi Glotfelty, Deer Park, District No. 10 outside of Deer Park town.

Gilbert J. Colmer, Lonaconing, District No. 11; Richard L. Emory, Bittinger, District No. 12; Samuel J. Cole, Kitzmiller, town of Kitzmiller; John A. Long, Kitzmiller, District No. 13 outside of town of Kitzmiller; Cecil Ramsey, Oakland, District No. 14 outside of town of Oakland; Owen M. Crowe, Grantsville, Avilton and District No. 15.

On Saturday all the above named enumerators with one exception were in Oakland where they met Mr. Stump who gave the census takers their final instructions relative to procedure and returning reports of their work to his office. The meeting was held in the High School building.

The Unemployment Census

The Census of Unemployment to be taken in April, 1930, is the fifth such canvass made by the Federal Bureau of the Census. Such a census was taken in 1880, 1890, 1900, and 1910. The results were not published in 1880 nor in 1910, and no canvass of unemployment was made in 1920. As in all census work, the information given by individuals regarding their own unemployment is entirely confidential. The enumerators have taken oath not to "disclose any information contained in the schedules, lists, or statements obtained for, or prepared by the Bureau of the Census, to any person or persons, except those designated by the Director." All persons, therefore, in answering questions regarding their unemployment may do so with full confidence that their identity will not be disclosed, nor will the information given be used for any other purpose than to compile the statistics of unemployment in the United States.

The prime purpose of Congress in directing the Bureau of the Census to take a Census of Unemployment was to obtain the facts regarding the pressing problem. No effective plans for the relief and prevention of unemployment can be made until we have specific information regarding its extene, the industries seriously affected, the periods of time during which employees in these industries are idle, with the causes in each case. Such information is almost entirely lacking. President Harding's Conference on Unemployment, in 1921, assembled the men best informed on this problem. They canvassed all available sources of information, but were compelled to report that the number unemployed might be as few as three and one-half million, and might be as many as five and one-half million. While our ignorance of the extent of unemployment is so

K. OF P. MEMBERS WILL STAGE "CRELLIN NIGHT"

Interesting Program Will Be Presented Friday, March 28

One of the most interesting programs of the entire winter season is anticipated on Friday, March 28, at Castle Hall, Oakland, when the regular meeting of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, will be known as "Crellin Night," and entertainment furnished entirely by members of the organization from that town will be presented. Charles Ream, Robert Ford and Harry Mickey have been named as the committee having charge of the program for that evening.

There are approximately 40 members of the organization residing in Crellin and the wealth of talent among them insures an interesting and highly entertaining program. A similar entertainment was given last year by the Crellin members.

Order Baseball Game.

An indoor baseball game has been ordered, the use of which will be inaugurated on March 28, it has been stated by members of the lodge. A number of teams will be formed, a schedule arranged and play will be started that evening. The game is said to be very interesting and requires quite a bit of skill to play it successfully.

March Term of Court In Session Three Days This Week

The March Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county was in session on Monday, Tuesday and yesterday with Chief Judge D. L. Sloan on the bench. A number of routine matters were taken up and passed upon by the Court as well as some equity cases. Only two cases were actually tried, one being before the Court and one before a jury, which was recalled for this particular case.

The jury case, which required a day and a half for trial, attracted some attention due to the fact that it was over what is commonly known as a "horse note" trial. The suit was brought by C. W. Craig, of Kingwood, assignee of the note which had been given to the Preston Stock Company and was against George B. Ferris, Henry Kifer, J. C. Haggerty and Irwin Tichinell, all of near Barnum, this county, the amount in controversy being in excess of six hundred dollars.

During the trial a considerable mass of testimony was offered by the defendants to show the manner in which their signatures had been secured to the note, while the plaintiff contended that in purchasing the note he knew nothing of these matters. After deliberating a short time the jury returned a verdict for the defendants Tuesday at noon. The attorneys in the case were Messrs. J. C. Renninger, of Oakland, and Harry G. Fisher, of Keyser, for the plaintiff, and Mr. E. R. Jones for the defendants.

The second case tried was a land suit between Thomas and James Garrett and George and Jacob Ours, and involved about twenty acres of land near Mountain Lake Park. After hearing all the testimony the Court took the case under consideration and announced that he would render his decision at a later date. The attorneys in this case were J. C. Renninger and E. R. Jones.

Delbert Davis Addresses the Lutheran Brotherhood

Delbert Davis, president of the Oakland Rotary club and cashier of the First National Bank, was the principal speaker at the regular monthly meeting of St. Mark's Lutheran Brotherhood, held on Tuesday evening.

His address was entitled "Foursquare" and he divided his talk into the spiritual, moral, mental and the physical sides of man, necessary in order to attain this foursquare condition.

It was decided to hold the next meeting on Tuesday, May 6, and to eliminate the regular April meeting on account of Holy Week services. The committee in charge for the next meeting is composed of George Yutzy, Bus Roth, Ernest Townshend, Harry Friend and George White.

TO PROPAGATE BASS IN WESTERN MARYLAND

Commissioner States That One Stream in Garrett County Has 15,000 Brook Trout

Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner, told 350 members and friends of the Izaak Walton League at the League's annual banquet held at Hagerstown last Friday that within the year Washington county will be known and recognized as the greatest small mouth bass propagation grounds in Maryland.

The banquet, always a brilliant affair, was marked by the presence of Congressman Fred N. Zihlman, Congressman E. C. Ellis, of Missouri, Secretary of State D. C. Winebrenner III, Swepson Earl, and State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte.

The rearing of small mouth bass has long been a cause of worry not only for the Conservation commission but for the fishermen in Western Maryland, Mr. Earl stated. Proper waters for the production of this species was hard to find and only after careful search and work on the part of the members of the local chapter, the Conservation Commission was induced to come into that county for tests.

The superintendent of the C. & O. canal has offered the commission either Little or Big Pool, located in Washington county, and after being inspected by G. C. Leach of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, and A. M. Powell, of the Conservation Department, it was acclaimed by far the best body of water that could be used for the propagation of small mouth bass.

While it will take some money to put either of these in proper shape for bass, the department expects to utilize Big Pool, which is two miles long and 400 yards in width.

"At this time," said Mr. Earle, "we have at Bear Creek, Garrett county, 15,000 brook trout; at Cushwa Spring, Washington county, 10,000 trout, and at Lewiston, Frederick county, 15,000 trout in rearing ponds. It is estimated by the State Fish Culturist, Mr. Powell, that by next fall these fish should be from 8 to 12 inches long, and before placing them into streams, we shall be able to take 2,000,000 eggs. Maryland will not only be able to supply her own needs, but may sell eggs instead of being a purchaser as heretofore."

Scouts to Continue Outdoor Program on Saturday

Oakland Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will continue its outdoor program by taking an overnight hike this week-end, weather permitting, it has been announced. Only those having consent of their parents will be eligible to make the trip, the scoutmaster stated.

The second hike of the year was taken to Underwood last Saturday, covering 13 miles. Those present included Bernard Gonder, Jr., George Stuck, George Browning, George Kerins, Gerald Iman, Richard Gonder, David Walter, Donald Stemple, Kenneth Lawton, Harley Dawson, and William Tillett.

Two more boys, George Nordeck and Harold Bittinger, have joined the troop and have passed a number of their Tenderfoot requirements. When these two are enrolled, the troop will number 47.

B. AND O. POTATO CLUBS ARE TERMED BENEFICIAL

One Thousand Bushels of Certified Seed Will Be Planted In Garrett County This Year

That the growing from certified seed by members of the Baltimore and Ohio Potato Clubs in Garrett county was beneficial and educational, was shown in a report sent in to Baltimore and Ohio officials by L. S. Hartley, agricultural agent of the railway company, who had charge of the local organizations and who was in Oakland on Tuesday for the purpose of furthering the potato club idea among the youths of the county.

The growth in the idea of raising certified seed potatoes was shown by the fact that in 1927 practically no certified seed stock was planted. Last year one thousand bushels of certified seed potatoes were sold in the county and will be planted this year on approximately 50 acres of ground. The seed potatoes were sold on the showing made on production and quality.

"The quality is of the best," Mr. Hartley said, "and the average yield among the potato club boys last year was 247 bushels per acre." This is above the county average, he pointed out.

Rotary to Sponsor Club.

That the Rotary Club of Oakland would sponsor a boys' potato club was announced by O. T. Graser, agriculture instructor, Oakland High school. The members of the club will be chosen from the agriculture department of the school, and these boys will be eligible to compete for B. & O. Club prizes. This latter organization will make the fourth club in the county and will permit new boys to become acquainted with the benefits of raising improved potatoes as a result of certification of the seed.

That Garrett county is well adapted to the growing of potatoes was given as another reason for continuing to educate the people as to the advantages of growing the 'ground apple."

Civic Club To Continue Study of Forestry

The regular monthly meeting of the Oakland Civic Club will be held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Naylor on Tuesday, March 25, at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon, it has been announced.

The study of forestry will be continued and plans made for a campaign for beautifying some approach to Oakland. Trees may be had free of charge from the State Department of Forestry for this purpose.

The club would appreciate suggestions and cooperation from all members and friends of the club. Another feature of this meeting is the election of officers, which calls for a record attendance.

WIFE LEAVES HUSBAND AFTER MARRIAGE OF LESS THAN MONTH AND THEN SUES HIM FOR NON-SUPPORT

E. I. West, Justice of the Peace, Declares Thomas Hayes, Bittinger, Not Guilty of Charge

A verdict of not guilty on the charge of non-support brought to a climax or semi-climax the matrimonial venture of a couple who had been married less than a month. Whether or not the anti-climax will follow or the story begin all over again is not known, but according to the decision of E. I. West, justice of the peace, Thomas Oliver Hayes, of Bittinger, is not guilty of the non-support charge, as alleged by his wife, Maudie Cline Beehler, lately of Oakland.

According to the testimony brought out at the hearing, Mrs. Hayes met her then future husband on the streets of Oakland during the week of February 17. At a second meeting on the same day he consented to marry her and a license was issued by the Clerk of the Circuit court.

Hayes, 48, returned to Bittinger with his bride of 23. They boarded temporarily while Mr. Hayes attempted to find a home in which to start house keeping. Mrs. Hayes, according to the testimony, wanted to come to Oakland, and came. Then on March 10, she appeared before Justice West and had the warrant issued stating that Mr. Hayes had deserted her, and charging him with non-support.

The warrant was served and the hearing was held Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Hayes states he is still willing to make a home for her in Bittinger.

HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY EVENING

Tenants Were on way to Oakland When Fire Enveloped House

The home owned by Jonas C. Glotfelty, McHenry, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Savage and family, was entirely destroyed by fire of undetermined origin between six and seven o'clock Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Savage and family were enroute to Oakland at the time and there was no one in that vicinity when the fire broke out. The discovery was made too late to save any personal property of the family, which was a total loss. The house was partly covered by insurance.

The house was situated north of McHenry, at the foot of what is known as "Commisary Hill," 15 miles north of Oakland.

Red Cross Officers Are Re-Elected at Meeting

All officers of the Garrett County Chapter of the American Red Cross were reelected for the ensuing year, at a meeting held on March 16, at 3 o'clock p. m. in the Public Library. Mrs. E. Z. Tower was reelected chairman; Mrs. James Willison, vice-chairman; and Mrs. J. C. Renninger, treasurer.

It was decided, wherever possible, to use the funds raised by the Annual Red Cross roll call, in the same communities in which the membership was enrolled, and in this respect it was pointed out that a number of donations had already been made in certain sections.

MORGANTOWN PEOPLE ARE INJURED NEAR GORMANIA

Car Rolls Down 90-Foot- Embankment on Northwestern Turnpike To Railway Track

Lieutenant and Mrs. Paschal N. Strong, of Morgantown, are in the Keyser hospital recovering from severe injuries sustained Friday when a car in which they were driving rolled down a 90-foot embankment near Gormania on the Northwestern Pike, the machine coming to a stop only after it had struck upon the Western Maryland Railway track alongside an abutment of the new bridge being built to span the Potomac river from West Virginia to Garrett county.

Lieutenant Strong, who is an instructor in military tactics at West Virginia University, suffered a broken kneecap of his left leg, lacerations about and his face and shock.

Mrs. Strong was more seriously injured than her husband, having a fracture of her right leg just above her knee and a fractured jaw, together with lacerations about her face and shock.

Both have esponded well to treatment and no fear is felt for their recovery.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Strong were on their way to Annapolis having with them Harold T. Swindler, manager of the West Virginia University rifle team, and Vaughn Michael, member of the team.

Other members of the rifle team were in cars following that of Lieutenant Strong and they were to fire with the Navy team at Annapolis on Saturday.

Say That Sign is Too Near

The accident occurred as the driver was proceeding at a speed of about 35 miles an hour, according to the story told later by those in the wreck, when the car came suddenly upon a stretch of dirt road. They claimed that the warning sign was too close to the point where the bad road begins. The height of the declivity was estimated at from 75 to 90 feet.

The front wheels caught in one rut on the road and the rear wheels in another. In an effort to straighten the course of the car, it suddenly left the road and rolled down the embankment with a grade estimated at 45 degrees turning over about nine times according to eye witnesses.

Thrown From Car.

The top was torn off the sedan, and both Lieutenant Strong and Mrs. Strong were thrown from the car, Mrs. Strong landing on the railroad track at the foot of the embankment and Lieutenant Strong striking a pile of crossties near the railroad track.

Miraculously, a small portion of the top of the car over the back seat was not torn off, and the other two occupants were not thrown out. They were not greatly injured, though they suffered from a number of bruises and minor lacerations.

Michael joined the remainder of the party, under the leadership of Sergeant Dave M. Beard, rifle coach, and continued to Annapolis. Swindler, after seeing that Lieut. and Mrs. Strong had been placed in an ambulance and sent to Keyser, took a bus to Grafton and there got a train back to Morgantown to report to military headquarters the extent of the wreck.

Deer Story a Lotta Bull

It looks like this deer story of last week has turned into a lot of bull, if the account of the event is read in both The Republican and The Democrat. In The Republican it stated that Joe Bill Ours, Gorman Thayer and Porter DeWitt saw the deer as it passed through town. In The Democrat the story was practically the same but they had George Kildow, Harry Durst and W. E. Shire as the ones witnessing the sight.

Scoop has appointed a commission of three, Jim Painter, Poky Slim Shaw, and H. C. Sincell, to investigate the matter and bring it before the Naval conference at London, just who saw the deer, and who has been having brainstorms and optical illusions. (Of course it would be impossible for either of the reporters to have made a mistake.)

We're Funny That Way

If poor we say all rich people suffer with ill health anyway and generally have a crippled child or two. If rich we spend foolishly and pity the poor working girl.

If we are not much to look at we brag that beauty is only skin deep and personality is really what counts. If we are handsome we fall for some dizzy skirt with a mole on her nose and an extra set of chins.

If too lazy to shave we notice that our face is too sore, anyway.

If evil tempered it is our kidneys. If unusually happy, it's our liver.

If 1929 dresses have plenty of hems we simply adore the new style long dresses. If they haven't long hems we flatly refuse to be a slave to fashion.

If the car runs smoothly it is because I am a born mechanic. If it runs like a threshing machine the darned thing never was any good anyway.

If we are Democrats it is beacuse our fathers were Democrats. If we are Republicans we at least have a reason for it.

If against prohibition it is because after 10 years we have seen it fail. If we are for it, it is because after 10 years, we have seen its success.

If we are right, but not president, we'd rather be right than president. If we are president—well that's different.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Md.

Dairy Farmers Advised Against Over-Expansion

Maryland dairy farmers are urged, in the State Agricultural Outlook, just issued by the University of Maryland Extension Service, to work towards more economical production during 1930 by eliminating the low producing cow, using more home-grown feeds and retaining for replacement only those heifers that come from high-producing cows and are sired by good purebred bulls.

It is pointed out that there is a surplus of fluid milk in Maryland and an over-production of butter, cream and condensed milk in the country at large, a condition that has largely been brought about by the decrease in purchasing power of the consumer.

It is expected that this situation will influence the market throughout the coming year.

University officials agree, therefore, that this is not an advantageous time to enlarge the present herd or establish herds since there was an increase last year in Maryland of 2,190,375 gallons of milk over that produced in 1928. Such a situation indicates a possibility of lower prices for this commodity during the coming year. Moreover, during the past eighteen months a large number of heifers have been saved to be placed in Maryland herds, constituting approximately thirty per cent of the cows in the State. It is blieved that this condition alone will tend to affect milk production for several years to come.

Farmers who are planning to grow potatoes this year no doubt have been making their plans and thinking over some of the jobs they will have to do in order to grow a good crop of potatoes.

It is important that a dairyman's herd consists of good high producing cows, free from disease, and is well cared for if he expects to secure a profitable income from the dairy business. It is just as important that farmers use good seed stock free from disease and of a high yielding variety if they expect to secure a profitable yield from their farm crops.

Following are 14 suggestions if put into practice will produce a good crop of potatoes, provided the season is normal.

Select a soil that has drainage and works easily, that is well supplied with humus and is not subject to drought.

Apply plant food liberally.

Plow as deeply as possible, 8 to 10 inches if the surface soil will permit.

Conserve soil moisture by disding fall-plowed land in early spring and the spring-plowed land as soon as plowed.

Put the soil in the best possible condition before planting.

Plant a variety adapted to your locality and soil.

Use the best seed obtainable.

Treat the seed potatoes before planting them.

Cut blocky seed pieces, weighing from 1 to 2 ounces.

After planting, keep the surface of the ground loose and pliable, until the plants appear, by harrowing frequently.

After the plants appear give deep cultivation. Cultivate often enough to keep the soil loose and the weeds destroyed.

Prevent injury to the plants from disease or insect pests by spraying them with suitable fungicides and insecticides.

If you live where it is possible to produce good seed, improve your stock by systematic selection of tubers from the best-producing plants. This should be done in the field, by hand digging a goodly number of promising-looking plants.

Ten Reasons for Boys' Club Work

Here are ten reasons, and good ones too, why farm boys and girls should become 4-H Club members and then be able to make good farmers and farmers' wives in the community in which they live:

1. Club work enlarges the vision of the boy.
2. It stimulates his interest in rural life.
3. It enables him to make some money for himself.
4. It furnishes recreation and amusement at regular intervals.
5. It trains the boy to keep farm records.
6. It encourages modern methods in farming.
7. It emphasizes the dignity of farm work well done.
8. It reaches the young boy and directs his thoughts and efforts in proper channels.
9. It stresses importance of organization and cooperation.
10. It assists in building the four most valuable ships: Ownership, Partnership, Leadership and Citizenship.

Importation of Hogs Into Maryland

All swine brought into this State for feeding, breeding or show purposes must be accompanied by a certificate of health issued by a veterinarian whose competency and reliability are attested by the authorities charged with the control of domestic animals in the State export, stating that they are free from any symptoms of infectious or communicable disease, and that each animal has been treated with a proper dose of anti-hog-cholera serum from a United States approved labratory within thirty (30) days of the date of entry into Maryland.

Swine that have received the serum-virus (double) treatment must not be brought into Maryland for purposes other than immediate slaughter until a period of at least thirty days has elapsed since date of treatment. Such animals must be given an antiseptic bath, and not again exposed to infection before being shipped.

Frequent culling of the slow-feathering and slow-growing birds during the range period makes the culling job easier when the chicks are housed.

POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

We won't have to wait much longer now for the official spontaneous petitions have appeared on Baltimore's streets and all the faithful have to do is to sign on the dotted line. The petitions praise the Governor but there are no particulars. He is told that he has become a national figure and, of course, that's something.

We are told that the signatures of business and professional men are to be sought but we get no information as to whether the members of the common herd will be permitted to "humbly beg and beseech" His Majesty to run once more.

Allowing a couple of weeks for the circulation of these spontaneous petitions under the supervision of the Governor himself we can take it that the announcement of the fourth term candidacy will be made about April 1. Such has been the talk ever since the Hot Springs visit—that the Governor had been advised to wait that long by Frank A. Furst, his chief political confessor.

The Governor has waited but not with such great patience and there having been no great uprising of the Baltimore City Democrats in his behalf the old spontaneous petitions of four years ago have been resurrected and revamped.

Four years ago they came from the Eastern Shore but this time the Democrats over there are sick of the business. They are petitioning no one and many of them say they are so sure that the next Governor will be a Republican that they don't care a hang who gets the Democratic nomination.

In Baltimore City the Ritchie appointees are so close together that there is ample force to push the petitions along. And there is no doubt in the world that the petitions will do just exactly what they undertake to do and that is convince the Governor that it is his duty to run just once more for only four more years to complete the great work he so nobly began away back early in 1920.

There is a great deal of uncompleted business, due probably to the frequent absences of His Majesty from his office. He has had to devote so much time to parades and banquets and parties and functions that naturally the work of the office has gotten a bit behind. In four years with good luck, it may be brought to date and then the position of our Governor as a national figure having been duly established he will be able to retire if he is able to resist the force of the next batch of spontaneous petitions to be presented in 1934—if he is nominated and reelected this year.

But we hear nothing just now about the Governor's associates on the ticket. Are they to have spontaneous petitions of their own? Certainly Comptroller Gordy would not be party to such clownery. Nor Attorney General Robinson nor Court Clerk Young, no matter how much they may happen to desire renomination and whatever luck may go with that.

McIntosh Forces
Moving Ahead

Senator McIntosh has been in the counties again this week taking advantage of the anti-fourth term sentiment. This sentiment seems to grow and is evidently more manifest in the counties than in the city.

No conclusion has been reached as to the completion of the ticket. This is due largely to Eastern Shore procrastination or indifference to the situation. ExGovernor Harrington seem to think that the best thing to do in his own county is to try to save the local ticket and let the State ticket take care of itself.

Then there is curiousity as to what the Governor will do about his associates on his own ticket. No one can think he wants Comptroller Gordy on the ticket again and as for Attorney General Robinson he has become more or less poison in the eyes of His Majesty. The Clerk of the Court of Appeals, Mr. Young, it appears, has never been in the good graces of His Majesty, the Governor. But Frank A. Furst is said to be backing the whole slate and it must soon be demonstrated whether Ritchie, who was a few months ago talking of going it alone, is now brave enough to buck the big contractor In the top of the Fidelity building. The best guess is that he will lack the nerve.

In Baltimore City the McIntosh supporters are going ahead with their organization plans and they report this to be easier than might have been expected, owing to the widespread dissatisfaction with the fourth term proposition. The organization of the city will be done systematically and the Governor will have to fight every inch of the way despite the help of his office holders.

In the counties there is much more political activity than in the city and almost every day we hear the announcements by new candidates for local offices. The Democrats, it appears, are just as anxious as ever for places on many of the local tickets even though they shake their heads about the State ticket, an evidence that some of them think the State ticket, if Ritchie is at the head, will have to shift for itself.

Republicans Continue To Mark Time

Republicans wait and wait to see what the Democrats do. That's their strategy. They think they can do better that way. The Mayor moves around from meeting to meeting, from banquet to banquet, and makes speech after speech. To his credit he doesn't engage in the self praise the Governor habitually devotes to himself by telling of his administration. Mr. Broening knows how to take his own time and he has never yet failed to take it. He can be expected to live up to his last performance.

Again and again the name of Federal Judge Soper bobs up. Just what is behind the suggestion it is not possible to say but the mention of his name may be due to the belief that he would be safe from attack by the Democrats.

W. Bladen Lowndes comes out wearing a Broening button which doesn't mean anything much. No one thought Mr. Lowndes had any idea of running himself this year. Fact is he hasn't been figuring in politics much lately.

Some one tries to revive the scheme of getting Judge Sloan of Allegany to agree to be drafted but the judge has on the Court of Appeals bench a place that fits him like the skin fits a sealion and it would be no easy job to pry him out of that for the troubles that would face a Republican Governor with a deal of house cleaning to do.

Office Holders Wear
Fourth Term Buttons

Some of the State office holders are appearing on the highways with fourth term buttons in their lapels as big as young pie plates and the inference in that they think this is necessary in order to hold on to their jobs. We refer specifically to those who hold their places under the protection of the socalled merit system established by the current administration and under which many of the places have been filled from racial groups.

We will recall that when the merit system bill was pending in the Legislature the Governor said he had had the measure so drafted that it would be "hard for them to get in and easy to get them out." Thus it may be that the Republicans, if they win the Governorship, will find it easy, as the Governor said, to get them out It goes without saying that those underlings who are now parading themselves with the fourth term pie plates will be the first to walk the plank. The Republicans will have all the names. There will be no trouble to get them.

City Comptroller
Now a King Maker

When the Baltimore City Democrats were looking for a candidate for City Comptroller in 1923 there was some surprise when R. Walter Graham was trotted out. Who's R. Walter Graham?" asked many of those active in political affairs. "We never heard his name before." The reply was that he was a business man not then so busy as he had previously been In acquiring enough to keep body and soul together and who had reached a point where he might spare the time to attend to a not too laborious public office. In short, we all had to get acquainted with Mr. Graham, who took the stump in a modest way, accompanied by the other Democratic candidates and made a short speech in which he said in substance.

"I am the Democratic candidate for City Comptroller. If I am elected I promise to give an honest business administration of that office."

But since those days Mr. Graham has learned quite a bit about politics and politicians and no longer is he the shrinking violet he seemed to be in the Springtime of 1923. For instance, the other day we found him writing a letter to U. S. Senator Goldsborough urging that Federal Judge Morris A. Soper be indorsed as a suitable appointee to the U. S. Supreme Court to fill the place made vacant by the sudden death of Justice Sanford.

It was a fine tribute to Judge Soper and, of course, could do him no harm, and coming at a time when many Republicans were thinking that the Judge might make a particularly strong candidate for Governor of Maryland in this troublous year of 1930.

We do not know that the Governorship, even if in plain sight, would appeal to the Judge, but we hear well-informed persons say that he is just about the type of man to take the office after the retirement of Mr. Ritchie, and bring about a new deal in Maryland. It is our view that Judge Soper would give full attention to the duties of the office and would not neglect it by galloping from banquet to banquet while subordinates let things go to the bad. In other words, we think the Judge would specialize on being Governor rather than on attending banquets and other functions having no connection with the office.

Cool to Albert;
Warm to Billy

Unless His Majesty the Governor has an epidermis of unusual thickness he must have been a bit cut up by the behavior of those in attendance on the charity frolic of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon at the Fifth Regiment Armory one evening last week. We heard about it before the last issue of The Observer but withheld comment until we could be certain of the facts.

The Armory was crowded to capacity, as more than 10,000 tickets were sold, and among the dignitaries invited were the Governor and Mayor Broening. The Cedars, as most persons by this time probably know, is a sort of branch of Free Masons, something on the order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine but less expensive to its membership.

His Majesty the Governor arrived about half an hour before the Mayor and took a seat on the stage where all could see him. He was greeted with a slight handclapping supplemented by the yell of an enthusiast of "Hurrah for Governor Ritchie," or something like that. The response to this was a booing from various sections of the hall before quiet reigned again. This in itself must have been annoying to His Majesty but the worst was Mayor, who was given a great ovation, every part of the big hall ringing with applause.

Of course, we all know that the Mayor is a member of the Masonic fraternity while the Governor is not. That had something to do with it but not all. The incident was an indication that Baltimore City will not be easy for His Majesty to carry the next time.

Political Notes

Horace Davis is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the State Senate in Worcester. He is bone dry.

Fuller Barnard, Jr., has announced himself a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket in the Sixth District. He lives in Cumberland and is bone wet.

J. Wallace Bryan is mentioned as the successor to Senator Edward J. Colgan, Baltimore City, at Annapolis. Mr. Bryan is an Eastern Shoreman but dampish.

Mrs. A. L. Lee, Oakland, is a candidate for the County Treasurership In Garrett County. She is a Republican.

Gilbert A. Dailey, who has fourteen more months to serve as City Council Chief Clerk, says the Democratic primaries are already over with Ritchie a winner. In October, 1928, the same Mr. Dailey was proclaiming that Al Smith would carry Maryland.

An Interesting Fact.

POLL TAX

Article 15 of the Declaration of Rights of the State of Maryland, adopted by the convention which assembled at Annapolis on May 8, 1867, says, in part: "That the levying of taxes by the poll is grievuos and oppressive and ought to be prohibited."

This is a most unusual declaration for a state to make, for where a poll tax is levied (as in most states) it is a source of much revenue. But in Maryland opposition to this form of taxation had its inception in the very early days of the province.

While it is true that about the year 1657 the Assembly laid its first poll tax upon both freemen and servants and again in 1722 there was a poll tax of 20 shillings on negroes and "other taxables" (which, by the way, seems to have been available for the support of free schools), yet it was after the Protestant Revolution of 1689 that the incident occurred which reverberated down through the centuries until it culminated in the adoption of the Declaration above quoted.

Theretofore toleration in religious matters, although creating much friction, seems to have been the adopted policy of the province and its governors. But the first act of the Assembly, called by Governor Copley (the first Royal Governor) was the establishment of the Church of England, the Protestant Episcopal, as the "official church" and every one was taxed for its support, whether he believed in its form of worship or not. The rich and the poor paid the same amount—a very unjust plan. The tax had to be paid, regardless of crop failures, at the rate of forty pounds of tobacco per person. This tax, with frequent additional levies for the building of new churches, fence and church yards, for the pay of the ministers and the maintenance of the buildings, became very burdensome and the law was evaded as much as possible. The taxpayers substituted trash tobacco in place of good, and, in fact, resorted to every subterfuge to avoid full payment of this hated and to some, unjust impost. Only a few of the people were Episcopalians.

The resentment of this unjust form of taxation grew and although the rate of levy was reduced to "thirty pounds per poll," the people demanded the repeal of a law passed for the benefit of the few at the expenst of the majority.

This was the beginning of the end of the poll tax in Maryland.

? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' QUESTION BOX ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

They're So Simple That Anybody Can Ask Them—
But—Can You Answer Them?

1. How far does a dropped stone fall in the first second?
2. What makes us feel hungry?
3. Why is it harder to walk uphill than on a level?
4. Why does a soap bubble rise and fall?

1. A falling body in each second falls 32 feet more than it did in the second before so we might think at first that the stone must fall about as rapidly the first second as in the second second. But if you will remember that 32 feet is the amount of increase in the rate of falling at the end of a second, but at the beginning of the second the stone was not moving at all. Therefore, the average rate of movement throughout the second is midway between no movement at all and 32 feet—in other words an average of 16 feet per second. That is we find at the end of the first second the stone has fallen 16 feet.

2. We eat and drink a great many things at meals and between meals just because they are pleasant to our taste and smell. But this is not real hunger. The place where real hunger is caused is not in the mouth or nose or even in the stomach. Real hunger is a state of the blood. The blood is continually using up its food material and needs more. As it passes through the brain which is where we feel everything, the brain finds the blood has not sufficient food materials in it and telegraphs that information to the stomach and other parts of the body. That is what makes us feel hungry.

3. When we walk on the level we only have to overcome the resistance of the air and the weight of our legs as we lift them up and put them down. But when we walk up a hill it is said it costs us twenty times as much effort as to walk at the same pace on the level, because we are pulling our bodies away from the center of the earth. That is we have to overcome gravitation when we walk up hill.

4. Just for the same reason that a balloon filled with hot air rises. A soap bubble is a small hot air balloon and the air that fills it is warm air from our lungs, which is so much lighter than the air outside that it goes up with force enough to carry the weight of water that makes the outside, or skin, of the soap bubble. But this does not last very long, for water is a very good conductor of heat and allows our warm breath to escape and then the bubble becomes as cool as the air around it and so gravitation pulls it down to the earth. The very early experiments in ballooning were actually made with soap bubbles.

GORTNER

Rev. Jessee, of Loch Lynn, preached here on last Wednesday, using as his text: "Let us lay aside the weights and the sin which hath easily beset us." He impressed his hearers with the illustration of a Scotchman who wore a coat with large colored patches down the front of the garment and a tiny patch upon the back. When asked the reason, the Scotchman explained: "These patches down the front of my coat represent the faults of my neighbors and this small patch in the back where I can't see it, are my faults."

John Murray White to Celebrate Ninetieth Anniversary

John Murray White will soon celebrate his ninetieth birthday, having been born in the Ryan's Glade section of Garrett county on March 25, 1840, during the administration of Martin VanBuren, as President of the United States. He is the last surviving member of his immediate family and has been its sole representative for the past thirty years.

By his marriage with Eliza Moon there were ten children born, seven of whom are now living. He has spent his entire life in what is now Garrett county, having in 1910 disposed of his large farm near Oak Grove to the late E. C. Harvey and in that year moved to a smaller place near Mountain Lake Park where he now resides with his present wife, Hester LowerWhite, and a daughter Hulda Ellen.

He has been a member of the M. E. church for many years, having joined that church when he was about 18 years of age, and for many years was class leader and Sunday school superintendent. He well remembers when his church held its first camp meeting in a grove between Oakland and the Park when he was about 11 years of age, having occupied a tent with his parents during the meeting.

In addition to following farming, using the sickle, scythe, flail, cradle, mowing machine and reaper, he also followed the trade of shoe and boot maker, the shoes which he made having a sale in England and many of the States of the Union.

He has remarkably good health and is active in both body and mind. He still follows the plow on his small farm, goes to market and spends a considerable part of his time in reading, of which he is very fond. He recalls with vividness that during the Civil War, right after the battle of Richmond, the Confederates passed through this section and compelled his family to cook about everything in the house to feed the men and supply hay and grain for the horses. He remembers also the building of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad from Cumberland to Wheeling.

He is of the old Maryland stock, his grandfather, Henry White being a Marylander, and his maternal grandfather, Murray Thayer, a native of Massachusetts.

He is receiving the hearty congratulations and well wishes of his host of friends.

ENUMERATORS ARENAMED TO TAKE COUNTY CENSUS

great, planning for its control is impossible. The Census of Unemployment taken in April will give us a fairly definite measure of its extent if answers to the questions asked are freely and carefully given. It will then be possible to consider plans for the control of the evil of unemployment.

The Unemployment Census is to be taken as a part of the Census of Population. In connection with the population inquiries the enumerator will ask questions as to employment of all persons who are usually employed at some gainful occupation. This will include in particular all persons who usually earn wages. The question will apply also to persons who carry on, or who have carried on, independent businesses of their own, though it is not expected that very many unemployed will be found in this group.

The names of all gainful workers who were not at work on the day preceding the enumerator's call will be recorded on a special Unemployment Schedule. Not by any means all of those persons, however, will be counted as unemployed. Several additional questions will be asked with regard to each of these persons, the most important of which is this: "Does this person have a job of any kind?" On the basis of the replies to this question the returns will be separated into two parts. Those persons who report that they have no job will be asked whether they are able to work, whether they are seeking a job, and what is the reason for their being out of a job. Those who report that they do have a job will be asked why they are not at work and whether or not they lose pay by not being at work.

Questions are to be asked, both of those without jobs and those on layoff, as to how long they have been idle. It is of great importance that the answers to these questions be correct and complete. For the extent of unemployment depends as much on the length of the period of idleness as it does on the number idle. There are also a number of other supplementary questions designated to assist the Census Bureau in classifying and analyzing the returns on the Unemployment Schedule.

BALSTROM'S PROFITABLE CROP OF YOUNG EVERGREENS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

BALSTROM swept his hand drearily toward the slope. It undulated downward to the river, richly green, hundreds of acres.

"Our desolation, Ellen," he said bitterly.

"But very beautiful, John," she reminded softly. "Terrible, if you will, but beautiful. Let us think of it that way. I—I don't like to hear that hard tone coming into your voice, after your—"

"Optimistic years," he grinned wryly, "buoyancy, belief in every next day being better. Maybe it's a good trait, may be not. I've been wondering whether I was blessed or cursed."

"Blessed, John," declared Ellen, earnestly. "Remember how it carried you through the great war, the years in Germany, and then the awful years in one hospital after another. You know what Colonel Trevor wrote me just after the worst operation, that it was only your buoyant disposition and optimism that brought you through. But for your firm belief in a better tomorrow I'm afraid you wouldn't be with me now, dear."

"Here only as a poor apology of a man," he smiled. "If I hadn't been so sanguine there might be money in the bank now for Junior's college expenses."

"Junior wouldn't have a thing different, John," his wife said softly. "He is as proud of you as I am, and he is young and strong like you used to be. He will make his own way."

His eyes again swept drearily over the acres of young evergreen growth.

"Doesn't look as though I had cleared all that slope off ready for the plow with my own hands, nearly 200 acres," he mused. "My idea was to put it into apple trees, to be ready for Junior's higher education. Then the war came on."

He was silent for some moments and his wife's hand went out caressingly to an empty sleeve, and a momentary dimness came to her eyes as they rested on a crutch that was now permanently necessary.

"You have given Junior a heritage that he values more than anything that money could give, John. We shall get along."

"I have offered the farm for sale at half its cost in the last week, but there are no buyers. I—"

"Junior and I would a thousand times rather have you, dear, than the cleared slope, apple trees and college."

"Yes, I know you would, Ellen. I am happy to get home at last, but—" He broke off abruptly and forced a sort of grin to his face. "But I won't snivel any more, dear. And yet," whimsically, "I can't seem to get used to a big Junior yet. I left him a boy of nine and come back to to find him a young giant of eighteen. Hello! Here he comes now—whistling as usual."

The whistler was coming up through the young growth on the slope. When he saw them he increased his rapid walk to a run. Instead of bending down and kissing his mother, he lifted her up in his arms as a child and held her for a few seconds.

Then he turned to his father, with an odd expression of mingled awe and affection.

"How are you feeling, sir?"

"Fit, you young giant," laughed his father. "First, you know I shall start clearing off that slope, with you to pile up the branches, as you did before."

The boy grinned delightedly.

"Fine to hear you laugh like that, father," he chuckled. "But maybe I could chop the little trees down with one hand now and carry them off with the other—only I'm not going to. Better let somebody else do it, for nothing, while I do something else."

He grinned again at their inquiring looks, then added:

"Schooner anchored down near the point and two men are walking among the young trees now. Asked me who owned them, and if they were for sale—for sale, father. I was just going to say they could have the whole slope for clearing it off when I remembered mother said yesterday that she was low on money to buy groceries and would have to trade in some poultry."

Two men had left the evergreens and were approaching.

"Your trees?" to Mr. Balstrom, as they drew near.

"Yes."

"Want to sell?"

"I might," a little cautiously, as he saw a warning wink from Junior.

The men read the hesitation as an indifference to sell, and glanced at each other. It raised their intended offer two cents.

"I'm willing to admit they're the finest lot of trees we've seen," said the spokesman, frankly, "and we'd like a few, straight cash. We'll give you eleven cents apiece."

"Not much of a price for timber trees," considered Mr. Balstrom.

"Don't want timber," promptly. "Yours are our size, and they're getting short down stream. We were steaming up the river on the lookout when we sighted your slope. Best lot of trees I've seen anywhere, as I said, and the most. We want six to eight feet. The trees are too thick anyway, and clearing out the larger will allow the little ones to grow better. There seems to be all sizes, down to a foot or two. With proper thinning and maybe a little seed sowing later, you ought to have a fine salable crop of Christmas trees every year."

"Christmas trees for next season?" looking puzzled.

"Yes, to sell, you know. Take down to Boston and other cities. Most every family with children buys trees."

"O-oh, I see. And you want a number?"

"Yes, 20,000, at least. The price may not seem much, but there are a lot of expenses in cutting, carrying and marketing, so it will be all we can offer."

"Think there are that many, your size?"

"Ten times that many, for we've walked through them. I'd like to contract for all, but there are more than we could handle. I'll pay you for 20,000, at least, though, and will want a supply in years to come. But old Jack Boling is down the river with his boat, looking for trees for next Christmas. I'll send him up and he'll likely want to contract for 10,000 or 20,000 more."

After they were out of sight, John Balstrom turned to his wife.

"Twenty thousand at eleven cents, and a chance of another customer coming and that not a fifth of our—crop, did he call it?" he said with a wondering look in his eyes. "And next year and the next, right along.

"And Junior goes to college. Yes. Optimism is best. I'm sorry I lost my grip a little, dear."

Audubon Paintings for American Bird Lovers

One of the most ambitious publishing enterprises of the decade, the reproduction of the almost priceless paintings of birds by John James Audubon, in the identical colors that the great naturalist gave them nearly a century ago, has been achieved. The new triumph of color printing is portrayed in the Country Home, the magazine that has grown out of the half-century-old Farm and Fireside, hitherto devoted to problems of tilling the soil in the old-fashioned manner.

The cultivation of friendship with birds, the magazine holds, is one of the new phases of rural, small city and suburban interest, and it has accordingly brought out of almost-forgotten archives, the exquisite engravings of American birds, hand colored by Audubon himself. The paintings are valued at $10,000 each and fewer than 30 sets are owned privately in all the world.

The paintings of American birds in their true sizes and colors, made a happy climax to Audubon's life of failure and disappointment. At the age of nineteen he came to America from France, where his father was a sea captain and undertook to manage a parental estate in Philadelphia. He was a highly cultivated youth, but his lack of business ability caused him to lose his fortune and, although he failed in repeated efforts at business, he married, became a father, and was finally reduced almost to pauperism.

Using the savings of his wife, he went to Europe with his large collection of bird drawings and was commissioned to publish them, engraved and hand colored, within a period of 12 years. Despite hardships while marketing his product, he finally realized a fortune sufficient to buy a 30-acre tract on the Hudson river, which is now Audubon park. In his memory the Audubon society, with 4,000,000 members, was founded and the interest in birds has been increasing steadily since his death.

Beautiful Martinique

The lovely touch of France is on the island of Martinique. It is a light, gay touch which is found nowhere among the Nordics. For this touch many a northern traveler has made a long journey to this picturesque island. Most of the winter cruises to the West Indies call at Martinique.

Josephine, empress of the French, was born in a little house across the bay from Fort de France, the capital of Martinique. Part of the house is still to be seen at Trois Ilets and the whole of the island is as French as Paris and as beautiful as any island in the Carribbean.

Study of Scents

The most important strides in the manufacture of artificial scents has been made within the last quarter of a century, when Leon Gloaudan, a student at the University of Zurich, began some experiments with odors. Conducting some of his work in his room he produced results that led the landlady to request his departure. He secured a room in a poorer section, where he thought his stenches would be unnoticed, but the result was the same. He finally accomplished some wonderful results in the compounding of delightful scents by artificial means.

Gigantic Wheel

The ferris wheel at the World's Columbian exposition, at Chicago in 1893, had a diameter of 250 feet; a circumference of 825 feet; a width of 30 feet. The axle of steel was 32 inches in diameter and 45 feet long. The total weight with the full complement of passengers was 1,200 tons. The driving power was applied through sprocket wheels and driving chains to cogs on the outer tires, while a system of clutch brakes kept the whole machine under control. There were 36 carriages with a seating capacity of 40 passengers each.

Lesson for March 23

JESUS TEACHING AND HEALING

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:53-16:12. (Print Matthew 15:21-31)

GOLDEN TEXT—Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Kindness to a Stranger.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Kindness to a Stranger.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Faith that Wins.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Faith Tested and Triumphant.

The material embraced in this section of Scripture is too abundant to attempt to cover in one lesson, therefore selection should be made in keeping with the lesson topic.

I. Without Honor in One's Own Country (13:54-58).

Jesus shared the common fate of men—unacknowledged in His own country. Even His own brothers did not believe on Him till after His resurrection (John 7:3-8; cf. Acts 1:14). Familiarity has a paralyzing effect, and at times breeds contempt. Because of unbelief only a limited work could be done there.

II. Jesus Healing the Multitude (14:13, 14).

1. He retired to the desert (v. 13).

The news of the cruel death of John the Baptist brought grief to the Master's heart, and He withdrew to a place of quietness to commune with His Father. The best thing to do in time of sorrow is to flee into the presence of God. Jesus accepted John's death as typical of His own.

2. Followed by the people (v. 13).

He could not be concealed. The peoples' interest was such that they followed Him on foot. Where Jesus is, the multitude gathers.

3. Jesus healing the sick (v. 14).

Although the rulers had broken with Him, He did not abandon His work. He continued to preach and work for the good of those who would hear. Though desperate and hopeless cases were brought to Him, nothing was found too hard for Him. The peoples' great need excited His sympathy. He is just the same today.

III. Jesus Healing the Daughter of the Woman at Canaan (Matt. 15:21-31).

The first twenty-one verses of this chapter should be considered in connection with this topic. The force of the lesson can only be seen in contrast with the failure of the people. Verses 1-20 represent the apostasy of Israel and her rejection of the Savior. In sharp contrast, we see in the healing of this woman, salvation typically going forth to the Gentiles.

1. The mother's awful distress (vv. 21, 22).

Her daughter was grievously vexed with a devil. The sufferings of the mother were perhaps as intense as those of the child. This Gentile woman had doubtless heard of the fame of Jesus. His power to heal had come to her notice and many times she longed for Him to come her way that her daughter might be healed. Now that He was in her neighborhood she came straightway to Him. Let parents be encouraged to bring their children to Jesus, even though they be demon-possessed.

2. The woman's fervent appeal for help (vv. 22-25).

She fell at His feet and pled for mercy. She besought Him to cast the devil out. Her appeal may be considered as a model prayer.

(1) She was sincere and earnest. (2) The prayer was brief and definite. (3) It was personal and humble. (4) It was believing and persistent.

3. The woman's faith rewarded (vv. 26-28).

(1) The Lord's apparent refusal (v. 23). He answered her not a word. The reason for His silence was that He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. This woman was a stranger to the Covenant people. Her appeal was on the wrong basis. She addressed Him as the Son of David, which only a child of the kingdom had a right to do. She must come in the right way. (2) The woman's quick response (vv. 25-27). As soon as she perceived the difficulty, she worshiped Him as Lord and cried for help. While only the Israelite could approach Him as the Son of David, all could come to Him and own Him as Lord. She willingly took her place as a Gentile "dog," recognizing that salvation is of the Jews. (3) The glorious issue of her faith (v. 28). She received more than she asked. Her daughter was healed at once and the instruction she received was worth much to her. She goes down in history with the Savior's commendation of her faith.

Life Needs a Good Pattern

Remember how swiftly the shuttle flies and how a broken thread may mar the fabric. Remember that without a good pattern, all weaving is to no purpose; take much thought, therefore, as to the pattern of a good life and be greatly instructed by that life which is the exemplar for us all.—Gaius Glenn Atkins.

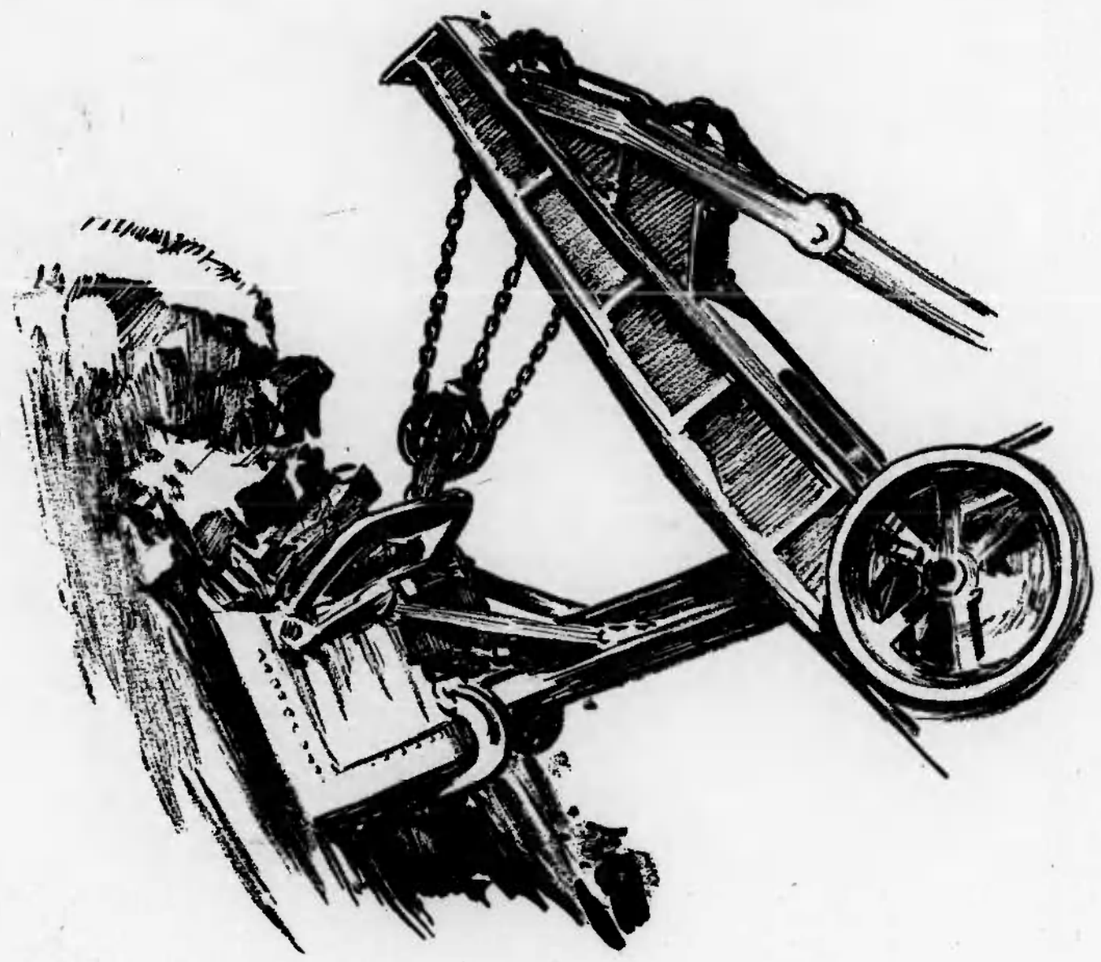
Continued Effort Will Accomplish Much



Watch a steam shovel working at a great hill. One shovelful at a time and at last the hill is gone, due to continued effort.

The same continued effort in your everyday business life will overcome what may seem unsurmountable obstacles in the way of selling what you have to offer.

Talk about your store, your profession, your manufacturing plant, your skill as a home decorator, or whatever you have or are, which you desire to sell to the public.

Tell the rest of the community about it and make them want what you have to sell to them.—ADVERTISE.

Road Supervisor Echard has been at work this past week putting the roads in shape for the coming spring. While the wet weather of this month makes it somewhat discouraging, at the same time by filling the ruts and smoothing the rough places now will permit the water to drain off and aid in getting the streets in good shape earlier in the season. And this is important, for as a usual thing quite a number of summer residents begin to come in along the first of April and they should be impressed with the fact that we are trying to make the Park as comfortable as possible.

It is to be hoped that the people of the Park, as well as Oakland and vicinity, will take advantage of the really fine cafeteria dinners that the ladies of the M. E. church stage every once in awhile. The spread is bounteous and well prepared. They are mighty agreeable folk up on the hill and the warm welcome adds much to the pleasure of dining with them.

Mrs. R. L. Cunningham and son, Lawrence M., Fairmont, motored to the Park Monday and spent the day with Mrs. Haymond and Mrs. Frame.

Mr. Murray Paugh has moved from Corinth to the Combs property near Loch Lynn.

Miss Vivian Clary spent the past week-end in Cumberland visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Fleming, Mrs. Cora Bishop, and Miss Kathleen Bishop, were at the Park on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy, Fairmont, motored to the Park Sunday. Mr. Murphy has returned home but Mrs. Murphy will spend some time at her cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Martin are occupying one of Mrs. Gay Hayden's apartments in Rosemont cottage.

The many friends of Mr. Wheat Clary were grieved to receive word of his death, which occurred at Fostoria, Ohio, last Saturday. He will be remembered by many as having resided at the Park at the time Mr. P. T. Garthright had a store in Loch Lynn, in which Mr. Clary was a clerk.

A series of services, to continue ten days, will begin in the Baptist church, Loch Lynn, Friday evening, the 21st. Dr. J. Yancy Fincher, former pastor of the First Baptist church, Cumberland, will be in charge.

Mr. P. T. Lipscomb visited his mother, at the old homestead, last week. Mr. Lipscomb's well known hankering after the sweet things of life, caused some anxiety on the part of his friends, as it was recalled that there are a number of sugar camps in the neighborhood of his visit, and it was "stirring off" time. In fact, word was received as far away as Huntingdon county, Pa., that Mr. Lipscomb was "reaching for a sweet instead of a Lucky," and his relative, Mr. Bruce Yocum, broke the record in motoring over to see how Thomp was getting along. He found him well and hearty, with a smile of complete satisfaction on his benign countenance.

GARRETT SCHOOLS HIGH IN RECORDS OF ATTENDANCE

One-Teacher Schools of County Average Highest of Any in the State for Month of January

That one-teacher schools of Garrett county had the highest percentage in attendance in the State of Maryland for the month of January was announced by the State Department of Education in the monthly attendance bulletin just issued. The percentage was 90.8 and showed an increase over the same month for 1929 of 17.7 per cent.

Garrett county elementary schools stood second among other elementary schools of the State with 90.5 percentage attendance; second among the graded schools with an average attendance of 90.7; fifth among two-teacher schools with 89.1 percent attendance and seventh among the high schools of the State with an average of 94.2 per cent attendance.

In each instance the record made in Garrett county was several points above the general average for the State, and in each instance also a gain in attendance is noted from September, 1929, until the present time.

"Garrett county can be proud of its attendance record both for January and for the past several months," J. L. Fitzwater, attendance officer, said. "There are few counties in the State that can equal such a record."

PROTECT CHILDREN OF THE LAND FROM TUBERCULOSIS

Nation-Wide Movement to Start In April to Protect Little Ones

Beginning in April, the National Tuberculosis Association, working through the local organizations in every part of the country, will start a nation-wide movement to bring about a better understanding of the importance of protecting children from tuberculosis.

Explaining the reason for this effort, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Maryland State Department of Health, said "Very few people realize that young children—including even young babies—catch tuberculosis very easily, just as they catch measles or scarlet fever or any other of the other so-called children's diseases, by associating with other persons who have the disease.

"One reason why so few parents are aware of the danger they are running when they let a person who has tuberculosis kiss a little child, or when they let little children play on the floor or around the room of a person who is sick with lung trouble, is that tuberculosis either takes a different form in children from that to which we are accustomed in grown-ups or does not make its appearance in a comparatively short time, as other diseases do, after exposure to it. By the time marked symptoms appear, the 'seedling' disease has struck deep roots into the child's system and it is hard to bring it under control.

"Then, too, in young children, the germs of tuberculosis may attack the bones or some other part of the body and the child who has this form of the disease may show few of the more familiar symptoms. For these reasons, every possible means should be taken to protect young children from the disease. The rules of living that will help to build up resistance to the diseases, and will protect young children from it include these:

"Keep the children away from people who have tuberculosis.

"Have their work, study and play so adapted to their strength that they will not overdo.

"Insist on plenty of rest and sleep.

"See that they have nourishing food, well balanced meals, with plenty of milk and green vegetables.

"Train them in health habits, and

"See that they are taken regularly to the doctor for a health examination."

DIED

STEPHEN G. ASHBY

Funeral services were held yesterday at the family residence in Elkins, West Va., for Stephen Glenn Ashby, aged 51 years, who was found dead in bed in the Hotel Walton, at Philadelphia, Sunday morning, having gone to that city on a business trip for his firm, the Wilson Lumber Co., of Elkins. Mr. Ashby had complained of feeling badly and is believed to have been stricken with an attack of the heart.

Mr. Ashby, son of Ralph T. and Rachel Schaffer Ashby, was born near Crellin. He married Miss Mary Agnes Freeland, who, with six children, survive him. He is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: Joseph Ashby, Washington; William Ashby, Wheeling, W. Va.; Jesse J. and Dorsey Ashby, Oakland; Thomas Ashby, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Frank Blake and Mrs. Scott Shirer, both of Oakland.

HENRY HANST

Funeral services for Henry Hanst, aged 75, who died Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. R. Sincell, were held at the home of Mr. Felix Elliott, Kingwood, W. Va., on Wednesday afternoon following a short service at the local residence on Tuesday afternoon. Interment was made in the Kingwood cemetery beside his wife who preceded him to the grave 20 years ago. Rev. M. O. Magnuson, of Weston, W. Va., officiated, assisted by Rev. C. A. Shilke, Oakland.

Mr. Hanst had been in failing health since July, 1929, when he came to Oakland from his home at Kingwood, but it was not until two weeks ago that he completely broke down. The deceased was born in Williamsport, Pa., February 25, 1855, and came to the vicinity of Oakland in 1905 where he became general manager and later president of the West Virginia Northern railroad company, operating between Tunnelton and Kingwood, W. Hanst, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Donald R. Sincell, Oakland; Robert L. Hanst, Pittsburgh, Pa.; and George H. Hanst, of Oakland. One sister, Mrs. Woods B. Irvin, Altoona, Pa., also survives.

DAMAGES ARE ASKED FOR WEDDING HERE ON OCT. 3

Fairmont Youth Claims He Was Kidnaped and Forced to Marry

Trial of the suit of Alpheus F. Haymond, of Fairmont, W. Va., against Samuel C. Satterfield and Anna M. Satterfield, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover damages in the sum of $25,000, promises to prove an interesting proceeding when it is called in the court at Fairmont in a short time.

Haymond alleges that while he was a student at Kiskiminitas school at Saltsburg, Pa., on October 3, 1927, he was kidnaped by Satterfield and forcibly brought to Oakland where he was compelled to marry a daughter of Satterfield. The girl, Margaret Louise Satterfield, then about 17 years of age, became a mother some months later.

Haymond contends that he was in school at the time of the episode and that Samuel Satterfield approached him, forced him to get into an automobile driven by a man named Bartlett and in which Mrs. Satterfield and her daughter were riding, brought him to Oakland and compelled him to marry the girl, who was a stranger to him at the time.

Since the marriage various court actions have been instituted in the Fairmont courts consisting of actions for non-support brought against Haymond and an annulment proceeding brought by Haymond to set aside the marriage.

Unoccupied Farm House and Barn Burned

An unoccupied four-room frame dwelling house and a barn 50x60 feet, on the untenanted farm of Raymond Beckman, near North Glade, a few miles north of Swanton, were burned Saturday afternoon or Saturday night.

FISHING SEASON TO BE USHERED IN ON TUESDAY

May Fish In Deep Creek Lake from April 1 to August 15

Even though the weather is not as promising as it might be at this particular time, trout fishermen can begin getting their fishing tackle in readiness for the opening of the season next Tuesday, April 1, the State Conservation Commissioner has announced. The season will continue until June 30, except in the Youghiogheny River above Swallow Falls, this county, where the rainbow trout season is from July 1 to November 30.

The fishing season in Deep Creek Lake will be open only from April 1 to August 15.

It is necessary that all persons over the age of 16 years procure an angler's license before being permitted to fish by means of rod, hook and line in any of the streams not closed in Garrett county, the law states.

Licenses are not required when the owner is fishing within the confines of his own property lines. Licenses, when required, may be secured from the Clerk of the Circut Court. Quite a number of applicants have already secured the required licenses.

Trout must be 6 inches in length before taking, according to the law, except from Deep Creek Lake, where they must be eight inches in length.

BOYS DISCOVER BODY OF TERRA ALTA MAN SUNDAY

Youths Come Upon the Lifeless Form of Herman F. Hauger, 7 Miles West of Oakland

The lifeless body of Herman F. Hauger, aged 62, of East Terra Alta, was found at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the woods near the Sand Plant, seven miles west of Oakland, by two small sons of John Strawser, who were out playing with their dog. Authorities called to the scene, including Sheriff W. W. Williams, notified Coroner H. Foster Hartman, who empanelled a jury before which testimony was introduced to show that Hauger had died possibly Friday evening from exposure. Officers said there was no indication of foul play.

Prosecuting Attorney Melvin C. Snyder, Sheriff Williams and Coroner Hartman went to Terra Alta and after viewing the body Coroner Hartman empanelled a jury composed of E. M. Lawson, J. M. Thomas, N. P. Ringer, George T. Moon, Ira Bosley and T. R. Root. Members of the Strawser family testified at the hearing upon finding the body.

Away From Home Since Friday

Mr. Hauger, who was a conductor on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, but who had been on relief some time due to failing health, had been gone from his home since Friday but no anxiety was felt by the family as they were under the impression he had gone to visit his daughter at Brownsville, Pa.

The dead man is survived by his widow who was formerly Letitia Benson, his mother, Mrs. Mary Ann Hauger, of Parsons; and the following children: Mrs. Bessie Mason, of Clarksburg; Mrs. Merle Lewis, of Brownsville, Pa.; Lloyd Hauger, Grafton; Roy and Harry Hauger, Terra Alta. Four sisters also survive: Mrs. Lydia Smith, Parsons; Mrs. John Freeland, Keyser; Mrs. Rheua Stockett, Grafton, and Mrs. Belle Kimmell, Oakland. Mr. Hauger was a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and the United Brethren church.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

GARRETT AND ALLEGANY COUNTY COAL MEN CONTEND THAT STATE GOVERNMENT COULD AID MINING INDUSTRY

By Requiring That All Fuel For State Institutions Be a State Product When Economically Possible — Maryland Mines Would Be Helped.

The following statement and appeal concerning the coal industry has been agreed upon by several parties representing the coal industry in Allegany and Garrett counties, with the request that it be given publicity thru The Republican.

Why Not a Turn For The Better of Maryland Industries

Strange as it may seem, many good citizens of Maryland are not familiar with the recession that has taken place in the coal industry of the state, although it is one of her greatest economic questions and the least troublesome to solve, because its natural resources are developed and all that is required is a little patriotic co-operation in the distribution of its products, which is not only an administrative duty, but a civic obligation upon our citizens.

In the opinion of the business, professional men and citizens filling all the other occupations directly and indirectly connected with the coal industry of Maryland, realize that the destiny of the industry is at stake and that the only practical and efficient way of solving the question is by blending the whole community into a true unity of action and thought, in order to accomplish the desired results.

It is a well known fact that Allegany and Garrett counties of Maryland abound in the original sources of wealth, viz: the production of agriculture and mining, which are really necessary and indispensable to the human race and are the feasible advantages to manufacturing. What commodity can you name that is more justly entitled to as much credit as coal for the advancement of our modern civilization? Nearly everything we use that you can think of, at some point of its creation, is processed by heat from coal, and yet the coal industry of Maryland is receding, in face of the fact that there is sufficient coal yet unmined to last for fifteen hundred years at ten times the present production.

There is no question as to its quality. This has been conceded by the consumers of every state in the Union. Its low volatile, low sulphur, high fusibility of ash, being smokeless and sootless, gives it all of the essential properties of a high-grade coal, making it suitable for domestic, smithing or steaming purposes.

The industry is suffering from many disadvantages, some of which do not conform to any standard of equity or justice and we hope are now in process of adjustment. Others will no doubt in time come under the natural evolution that corrects such impositions. The situation is not a difficult one to correct when the facts are known, because we find that the operators assure and guarantee quality, preparation and economic results in comparison with all other coals.

The present State Administration, we are told, are convinced of this fact, and this year used more Maryland coal than it has for many years. Therefore, if every utility and every tax supporting institution of Maryland were to burn nothing but Maryland coal, and if this co-operative and reciprocal spirit were supported by the consumers of coal in Maryland, the entire productive capacity of the state would be utilized and thousands of miners given employment, all of which would reflect to the civic pride of Maryland citizens, adding to the wealth of the state and bring about the economic results desired.

It is commendable to observe the type of men selected on the Maryland Development Commission and the commission to study the administration of justice in the state, also the sound consistent policies and capabilities of the Roads Commission, and if the assistance of his Excellency the Governor could be obtained to create a small advisory committee, to serve under his direction, and to submit his plans to all civic organizations and invite them to select committees to present their views in formulating plans to carry out a movement of co-operation to protect the coal and other major industries within the state, especially those engaged in the development of its natural resources.

The situation presents a wonderful opportunity in promoting state rights. The idea has been put into active effect in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and several other states and the results are extremely pleasing, for it increased coal production in the state millions of tons. This being true, why should we suffer longer? This movement should invite and urge the assistance of every citizen, newspaper, and civic organization within the state, because of its direct benefits to the state of Maryland.

Five of the licenses were issued on St. Patrick's Day, but this number did not exceed those granted on Saturday, when six were issued. Two licenses issued were marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a permit.

? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' QUESTION BOX ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

They're So Simple That Anybody Can Ask Them—
But— Can You Answer Them?

1. How long do animals live?
2. How far off is the horizon?
3. Why cannot we see the air?

1. While the age to which men and women live has been rather accurately determined, the question asked can not be exactly answered. The prize, however, has been given to the tortoise, which, under favorable conditions, lives between 300 and 400 years. Then, the crocodile, if given a fair chance, can live for 300 years. The elephant and the eagle often reaches a hundred, and scientists have estimated that the whale will live to be 500 years old. The average life of a cat is 13 years, and a dog 15, while the horse has a natural span of life of 20 years.

2. The horizon is the place where the sky and the earth appear to meet. Of course, they do not, but it simply seems so to our eyes. The distance to the horizon depends chiefly on how high our eyes are from the level of the sea or the land. The higher up we are the farther we can see. For instance, if your eyes are four feet above the level and your vision is not obstructed, the horizon will be two and a half miles away. If six feet, you can see three and a fourth miles. If you are 110 feet high you can see 14 miles and if you are one mile high you can see 96 miles. In other words, the earth is round and the higher up we are the farther we can see.

3. The reason why we cannot see the air is that it is transparent, like glass—that is to say, it lets light go through it. In a sense you can see the air moving, for instance above a hot stove. Air can be made so cold that it becomes like water, and we can even freeze it so that it looks and can be seen just like ice. But air has no color in itself, so it does not alter the color of the light passing through it.

What a job for feed!

Consider Purina Chick Startena (mash) for this job! In every thimbleful are twelve ingredients! Cod-liver oil... dried buttermilk... alfalfa flour... granulated meat... these and eight others are there... each one with a real job to do. POLITICS IN REVIEW

By the Man In The Street

(From The Observer, Baltimore)

Still waiting for the Governor to make a big noise. That's the attitude of his opponents in the Democratic party. They think he should be able to make up his mind and make his announcement. They want to see his platform. They want to know his reasons for demanding a fourth term.

Gossip says the announcement of the Governor is all ready and may be given out any day. It is expected to be a long document, giving great praise to the Ritchie record. But plans can be changed in a minute.

We have it that as soon as the Ritchie announcement is forthcoming there will be a gathering of the opposing clan for open warfare. They have yet to form a complete ticket. They do not intend to fight bobtailed. And they want to see the make-up of the Ritchie slate—whether it will be the same old slate as demanded by Frank Furst or whether the Governor will go ahead with his original plan and throw Comptroller Gordy and Attorney General Robinson overboard.

There is no sign of any material addition to the Governor's ranks. His people are already doing some desperate things and playing small games. Only the other day they threw former State Senator Ben Fox out of a Democratic club because he is active for McIntosh. Whether this thing will be done all along the line it is too early to predict but rough things may be expected when one notes the efforts of the Governor personally and through his supporters and beneficiaries to beat opponents back into line. Nothing is left undone in an effort to force a renomination which has evidently become an obsession with His Majesty.

We hear that His Majesty is somewhat peeved because The Observer published the fact of his poor reception at the affair given at the Fifth Regiment Armory by the Tall Cedars. Our account of what happened was obtained direct from one of those in attendance who saw and heard what went on.

Keen people know that the Governor is now trying to nurse the Masons and bring them into line for the fourth term as a group just as he has played several other groups. A recent appointment by the Governor was conspicuously given to a Mason and everybody well understands what the Governor was trying to do. He uses appointments for his political advantage all down the line and has not hesitated so to use places on the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City.

We don't believe he can fool many Masons as he has fooled many others in groups. Most of them see through his motive.

From the Eastern Shore come reports that there is not one whit of lessening of hostility to the fourth term candidacy and everybody over there appears to understand the maneuver about the proposed bridge across the Chesapeake Bay.

Mayor Waiting
For Further Support

Some Republicans are saying that the announcement of Mayor Broening—that he is to be a candidate for Governor—is no longer imminent. We have for weeks been hearing that in "the next few days" the Mayor would make an announcement but we have never heard a word from the Mayor direct. It appears that he knows more than do those who surround him.

National Committeeman Wm. P. Jackson gives no word for the Mayor. He is said to favor U. S. Attorney Woodcock, his neighbor. We hear not a word from U. S. Senator Goldsborough. He wants a winner, and no doubt he is hearing what we all hear and that is that the Mayor is not as strong as some other candidates may be.

Former Senator Weller is moving around in Western Maryland counties. He, too, wants to see a winner selected.

Some think there is a way to get Judge D. Lindley Sloan into the field and that is to induce his long time friend, ex-Senator David A. Robb, to step aside. It is argued that Robb would have opposition in his own county of Allegany, while Sloan would not.

Mr. Robb remains very quiet. He makes no more noise than a setting hen. Judge Sloan has said he would not stand (or run) in the way of Mr. Robb. And an Alphonse and Gaston manner would dicate that Mr. Robb should not stand (or run) in the way of Judge Sloan.

As we said some weeks back, Albert G. Towers is not in it. Ritchie's friends are said to have been very much afraid of him. They may havo aided him in deciding to stay out. Politics is a queer business.

Many cling to the idea that Federal Judge Soper should be drafted. But there is no word from the Judge. He is so busy caging bootleggers and dealing with other contentious citizens that he has no time for politics.

Brooke Lee Flies
Signal of Distress

Much earlier than was expected Brooke Lee, chief lieutenant of Governor Ritchie in Western Maryland, is displaying a signal of distress. This is the meaning of the appeal made by him and his Board of County Commissioners for a protective coat of whitewash at the hands of the Montgomery County Grand Jury.

For weeks and weeks the Rockville Independent has been directing attention to the manner in which public funds have been handled by the Lee dominated county officials, but for some reason the Lee paper, the Maryland News, has not come to the front with any reasonable defense or explanation. Now when the fight for the overthrow of the Lee control of the county has become warm Lee goes to the Grand Jury and asks that he and his political partners in the county government be exonerated or indicted, and if exonerated, that the editors of the Montgomery Independent be indicted for libel.

It would seem that if Lee and his political associates have been libeled they would sue the Independent to get damages or failing in that, put the paper out of business. Lee has a paper of his own made up of consolidations brought about to aid a Lee political monopoly of the county. The history of this effort to control the sources of county news and get practically all the county money spent for public advertising is well known.

It may be that the Grand Jury as now constituted is made up largely of members of the Lee faction. Should this be so it is easy to explain the appeal of Lee to the Grand Jury, a most remarkable proceeding and one which must provoke snickers wherever it is known.

At this distance it would appear that the Lee paper might easily refute the charges of the opposition paper if those charges are, as alleged, not based on fact. Of course Lee wants the opposition paper put out of business—for that is the Lee way of running things. Those who do not agree should be crushed, of course.

But the very spectacle of the Democratic boss of Montgomery County running to the Grand Jury in the montb of March asking for a whitewash in preparation for the September primary election is one of the novelties of the day. If the scheme works in Montgomery County then it can be transported to other bailiwicks.

Ex-Judge Walsh
Wins a Victory

It was interesting to see former Judge Wm. C. Walsh, of Allegany, chief political adviser to His Majesty, the Governor, come all the way from his mountain home to take up the cudgels for the group seeking to establish a new bank at Reisterstown. The question of approving the charter was up to the State Bank Commissioner and he seemed to be hesitating when Mr. Walsh was brought in. Nothing wrong about it, to be sure, but many will wonder why it was that with so many Baltimore lawyers ready and willing to take such a case the projectors of the new bank saw fit to send all the way to Cumberland to get the former member of the Court of Appeals. But it proved a good investment, anyway, for after many days' delay the Bank Commissioner approved the charter, although in a very similar case at Sykesville not so far back he turned the charter of a new bank down.

In the case of the Reisterstown proposition some may think the reason Mr. Walsh was employed was his closeness to the Governor. Anyway, that's the way things are now working.

Honorary Bridge Builders
Named by the Governor

In anticipation of making his fourth term announcement the Governor has named his committee of honorary bridge builders who are to consider ways and means of bridging the Chesapeake Bay, an enterprise in which the concern of His Majesty was greatly increased by the hostility of Eastern Shore Democrats to his fourth term project.

There is a long list of names but no mention of any bridge builder. In a statement by the Governor he said that ferries are to be taken into consideration and former Governor Harrington is made a member. The former Governor is interested in the Claiborne-Annapolis ferry and this recognition was, of course, a political move. This was to smoothe down the Harrington opposition to both fourth term and bridge.

B. Howell Griswold, Jr., is the chairman of the committee and by the time he gets through with the task he should know a great deal more about Maryland politics than he does today. It has from time to time been reported that Mr. Griswold would like to be Governor of Maryland and it may be possible that he thinks the publicity arising from this honorary bridge building business will give him enough prominence to help him on the way to Annapolis. One never can tell, but to date it is a conspicuous fact that no one has attained the Governorship by getting close to the present Governor. Indeed, those who get close to Ritchie seem somehow to get that much further away from the object of their ambition.

We would like to know who was skillful enough to get the usually sagacious Mr. Griswold into this honorary bridge building business framed up by a professional politician to help a fourth term ambition.

Political History
Repeating Itself

In October last a distinguished Democrat who takes keen interest in watching the movies on the board of his own party, remarked that our more or less famous Governor reminded him of a rabbit. The rabbit, he explained, had a few tricks, but only a few, and never learned any new ones. And it was further asserted that the lowly rabbit when chased, will, if given opportunity, return to the place from which he started. Thus it was reasoned that our Governor would this year do pretty much the same things he did four years ago when he started the spontaneous petitions in behalf of his own candidacy and got the Conowingo contract going. True it was that last Fall we didn't have the Chesapeake Bay bridge in full swing, but it was predicted that something along that line would be proposed by His Majesty to help his fortunes.

So now we have it. Four years ago men were to be given work on the Conowingo dam. Now men are to be put to work on the Chesapeake Bay bridge and, of course, the right people are to get the contract. Not worked out fully yet, but that's the hint. And the spontaneous petitions are being toted around town by the faithful. It's pitiful to note how gullible the voters are supposed to be in this age of enlightenment.

We Hear No More
Of the New Penitentiary

As the state campaign progresses we hear little or nothing of the selection of a site for the proposed new Penitentiary and we suppose His Majesty the Governor has put on the grand kibosh for political purposes. We hear no more about the resignation of Stewart Janney as Director of Welfare and the most we get is some interviews and statements from the so-called expert the Welfare Board has brought from New York at considerable expense. Possibly the picking of the new Penitentiary site is to be done by the new superwarden, for such the New York "expert" actually is, and if we get things going in fine shape Jack Hart, the missing bandit, may hear of it and return to Maryland voluntarily.
